HISTORY OF DEERFIELD.

CHAPTER XXII.

THE REVOLUTIONARY PERIOD.

This period fairly dates from the first act of Parliament for raising a revenue in their American colonies. In point of fact the Whig and the Tory parties here were then formed, the Whigs denying the claim of right to impose such taxes, and the Tories maintaining it.

These names were brought from England, where for more than a century the Whigs had contended for Constitutional liberty, while the Tories stood up for Royal prerogative and arbitrary power. The Tories of both continents were conservative, anchored to the traditions of the past, while the Whigs struck out for the inborn rights of man, a larger liberty of thought and action.

The people of the present generation, certainly those of the north, can have little idea of the bitter feeling that grew up between these parties when the outbreak came. Among the Loyalists, Whig was a term of reproach, and used very much as the term anarchist is used to-day.

The Whigs were very much in earnest from the start. The Sugar Act of 1764, the Stamp Act of 1765, and others, were denounced as unconstitutional, oppressive, and in violation of their Chartered Rights. And it was on this broad ground that the Revolution grew up.

In view of the sentiment of opposition in the Colonies, Parliament repealed some of the most obnoxious acts; but, at the same time, asserted its full right to tax the colonies at will, and in 1766 several companies of Royal artillery were sent to Boston as a threat. This aroused our people as nothing else had, and Massachusetts soon took measures looking towards a union of the colonial Legislatures in a Continental Congress. This movement was denounced by Parliament as "Highly Inflammatory, and Tending to Sedition,"—as it truly was—and in 1768 Gov. Bernard was directed to dissolve the General Court. Sept. 28th, 1768, delegates from ninety-six towns met in convention in Boston to consider the condition of the country. In the House of Lords the tendency of this and similar meetings was clearly seen, and denounced as a daring usurpation of authority, and an insult to the King.

Parliament had directed the colony to billet its soldiers here. In May, 1769, the General Court utterly refused an appropriation for that purpose, and in August Gov. Bernard sailed for Europe, leaving Lieut-Gov. Thomas Hutchinson at the head of affairs. On the State Street Massacre, March 5th, 1770, at the demand of the people of Boston, led by Samuel Adams, Hutchinson removed all English soldiers from the town to Castle Island.

On the same 5th of March, Lord North introduced a bill in Parliament, abolishing all taxation except that on tea, and an ingenious scheme was devised whereby tea should be imported and sold here at nine pence a pound cheaper than in England. Our Whig statesmen did not walk into the trap after that bait. It was the principle, not the "thripence a pound on tea," for which they were contending. Associations were formed agreeing not to use tea until the tax was repealed. The Whigs generally signed the articles, and this was made a test of patriotism. The appearance of a teapot on the table, or the fragrance of the Hyson issuing from the buttery, where the steaming vessel had been hurried on the advent of a neighbor, was considered a sure sign of a Tory household.

For ten years Deerfield had been represented in the Colonial Assembly by Maj. Elijah Williams, or Jonathan Ashley, Jr., both Tories; but in 1770 the Whigs came into power and sent David Field. In 1772, Hutchinson, now full-fledged governor, refused to call the Legislature together for fear of patriotic action. A town meeting in Boston filled the gap. A committee was chosen, with Samuel Adams at the head, to communicate with the other towns in the colony. This movement was far-reaching in its effects. The towns responded, and out of it grew the "Committees of Correspondence, Inspection and Safety," which became the ruling power in the land.

Hutchinson was justly alarmed at the doings of the Boston town meeting, and in 1773 sent his partisans over the country to counteract its effect. To Deerfield, came three Tories from Boston, Morton, Drury and LeBarron, and a conference was held with the Deerfield Tories at the tavern of Lieut. Seth Catlin, which held on until two o'clock in the morning of April 3d. A report of the doings at this meeting has not been received, but it is safe to say that a large quantity of flip was consumed in drinking the king's health.

May 12th, 1773, a town meeting was held, and Samuel Field was chosen representative to the General Court. Some ten years before, John Workman, and other Quakers of Philadelphia, had opened a crusade against the slave trade. The discussion about the natural rights of man now going on called the attention of many to the accursed traffic, and at this meeting a paper setting forth its wickedness was read to the assembled people. The meeting was in the hands of the Whigs, and the Tory town clerk made no record of the doings thereat. We are indebted to a private diary for any knowledge of it.

Representative Field came home from Boston charged with news and stories. Two will be given which may not have been elsewhere preserved—a brace of patriotic toasts—one by Samuel Adams:—

May the fair fields of America be watered with the blood, and manured by the ashes of its Malignant Enemies. [The other by John Hancock:] May the enemies of America have free export, with the benefit of a Draw-back.

Field also brought home copies of the famous letters written to England in the interest of the Tories by Bernard, Hutchinson, Paxton and Rogers, which had been discovered by Franklin and sent home to Samuel Adams. The contents raised to a white heat the party fire of the Whigs, while the Tories couldn't see anything in them to make a fuss about.

The big dish of tea made in Boston harbor, December 16th, 1773, stimulated the blood of two continents. David Field was in Boston that day, and when he brought the news there was a jollification meeting at David Saxton's tavern. When the meeting broke up the mellow Whigs woke the echoes of the night by proclaiming about the town the exploits of those men:—

Who went aboard the British ships their vengeance to administer,
And didn't care a tarnal bit for any king or minister;
Who made a duced mess of tea, in one of the biggest dishes,
Steepled the Bohea in the sea, and treated all the fishes.

If the Tories were less boisterous in their consultation, they were not less determined, and looked forward to a not distant day when their hour should come, and "king and minister" triumph; and they did not join in the general mourning when the Boston Port Bill went into effect the first day of June following.

Benjamin Franklin was ousted from the office of Postmaster-General in America because he was a Whig, and the service broke down. In May, 1774, a few patriots formed a plan for a regular communication through the colonies. It was presumably under a plan adopted by Deerfield years before. The general postoffice service must have been very meagre and unsatisfactory to an intelligent community like that in Deerfield, and the general system was supplemented by one of her own. In December, 1773, the men named below paid Wm. Mosman twelve shillings each, "for my Service in Riding Post from Boston to Deerfield for the term of one year from November 1772 to November 1773." Through this Post communication with the outside world was kept up. He went no farther than Deerfield. Greenfield and Charlemont men came here to meet him:—

It was, I suppose, under this arrangement, that the Post spoken of in this chapter came once a week to Deerfield with letters, papers and small packages. His arrival at David Hoyt's tavern, on the day he was due, was awaited in those exciting days with a good deal of impatience by the men gathered there. Many hot disputes between Whig and Tory arose on these occasions, and striking arguments were sometimes resorted to. Joseph Stebbins and Oliver Field on one side and Parson Ashley's sons on the other were not the least prominent in the wordy war.

1774. This year the Revolution ripened fast. May 13th, Gen. Gage arrived in Boston and fresh troops were landed. June 1st, Governor Hutchinson, being succeeded by General Gage, sailed for England and the Boston Port Bill went into operation. This measure developed abundant sympathy for Boston and served to cement the colonies into one body of opposition.

Governor Gage took high-handed measures with the General Court, but it was made up of zealous Whigs, who were able to hold their own, and the representative of our town did his full share of the work. The most important act was to elect five delegates to a Continental Congress at Philadelphia. There was rejoicing among the Whigs at the step, while the Tories were filled with indignation at this assumption of power. Gage, in a towering rage, at once dissolved the Assembly.

William, son of Col. Israel Williams of Hatfield, drafted a "Protest against the Proceedings of the House of Representatives and the Measures now adopted by the Colonies, and the plan the people are now acting upon." This paper was received here July 16th, by a young Tory, who made copies for circulation.

The General Court had appointed July 21st to be observed as a day of fasting and prayer. The Tories took no notice of this except to show pointedly their contempt for it.

July 22d, Parson Ashley had a tea party in defiance of the non-consumption association, and his son carried a pound of tea, which he had procured Fast day of Israel Williams & Son, at Hatfield, to the wife of Parson Roger Newton at Greenfield.

The Liberty Pole. It was the custom for the Sons of Liberty to set up tall liberty poles in public places. On the night of July 28th one was brought into town to be set up the next day. The fact coming to the ears of the Tories, some of them went and sawed it off in the middle. The story is told in the following letter written two days later:—

Permit me to tell you of y^e Proceedings of some young Gents of this town in y^e week past. Ephraim Potter and Edw'd Lawrence, taking into their Serious Consideration y^e present alarming Situation of America, occasioned by the oppressive hand of Power, and upon Mature Deliberation, thought the Erection of a Liberty Pole would have y^e most happy tendency of restoring and Establishing Peace and Harmony between y^e Mother Country and y^e Colonies—Therefore did on the 28th of this instant get one into Town, but it being late, they were not able to erect it, and on y^e same Night, by some Malicious Person, Inimical to his Country, y^e s^d Pole was sawn in sunder. Nevertheless, on the ensuing Night, y^e Liberty Pole was set up and also a Tory Pole, (as they in their infinite wisdom are pleased to call it) and set old Mrs. Vassalls epitaph upon y^e s^d Tory Pole with little alteration * * * We have the Honor of having a Liberty Pole, & more to our Honor be it, that it was set up by a pack of ignorant villains. Where are things going, that so sensible people as you know the Town of Deerfield are, should suffer these Rascals to carry matters on so. I cannot help feeling, and very sensibly, when I think what the Consequences of these things will be & have no reason to think but that they will issue in blood, I feel not concerned for myself, but for my friends. But we have a God, and this Being we ought to look to, who alone is able to deliver us from our most inveterate enemies; and by whose Infinite wisdom I hope we shall be extracted from all our Troubles.

This letter was written by the one who handled the saw, four others being privy to it.

The Liberty Pole was put up in front of David Field's store, which stood just north of Mrs. Wright's brick house. Sunday, August 7th, Col. Israel Williams attended meeting here in the morning. At noon he went to Parson Ashley's to dine. While "passing the Liberty Pole, he observed and said that he thought such a pole a profanation of the ordinance." As we shall see, this man was destined to receive greater affronts than this from the profane Whigs.

Liberty Poles became common. August 22d, Hadley set up one one hundred and thirty feet high. The week before, the Sons of Liberty in Montague raised one near the meetinghouse. August 21st the minister preached a sermon upon "the sin of erecting such an Idol." The next day Moses Gunn takes him to task in a strong argumentative reply to "the open, sudden and unexpected Attack" made upon his "brethren, the Sons of Liberty." He says he "could never have conjectured what you or any other person could have against erecting a Liberty Pole." That it "could be treated as an Idol and the Persons who set it up as Idolators, and that in a serious manner would never have entered his head. * * * An Idol made and Erected after the manner of a mast or May Pole with an Ensign of Liberty tacked to the top of it, that is to say English colours with the Significant word Liberty inscribed, is a form of making and setting up a God, which I believe neither Antient nor modern Idolaters hit upon." He then tells his pastor "What is my Sense of a Liberty Pole." It means "This people are for Liberty * * * This Liberty Pole innocently and Simply raises its lofty head! I wish it reached the clouds! Strikes the eye of the Beholder even at a Distance and in the most natural easy and ready manner puts him in mind of his Liberty and Rights."

It soon became the fashion for any who had wit to exploit, spleen to vent, or grudge to settle, to post over night on the Liberty Pole what was called an "advertisement." This weapon was used by both Whig and Tory. A single specimen (?) has been preserved. It was scrawled over a page of foolscap. I have attempted some punctuation, which was wholly wanting, and may have obscured the poetic fire, and marred the deep thought or pure diction by so doing:—

Mr torys, i think its disgras, tho i give you my plase, to take up my painn for to right.

But siers, i do se this lyberty pool is so much in voge for such blackgard pesses, which I do not like. it is a disgras to the pool, & i am shewer that i should Be ashamed to let such flat peses be seen. O, you poor torise! i think it is anof for to make any man right.—i should adress my self to you in the fooregoing linse that im not pro nour con,—but O! poor torys in Deerfield Dwell! you are the fewel of York Hell! for your peeses are as insipid as a cats face. i would not have you not get old Mother Spindle to word the pesses for you, i mark this thing faith, for th—this is tory grammar, faith it is—roght strongue, i can sware. O, you poor towryes! when shall i get some tar? i do com mand you to not defile the libertie poole with no more of your Dambd skrools. David D. is an na fog gen, faith i am not the man that you tok me to be, be i? this is rought strongue, ant it now? also [?] th i have to say, as it is to darck.

Underlying all the chaff and froth on the surface strife, was the serious conviction, on both sides, that bad breakers were not far ahead. The Whigs declared that Parliament had violated the charter of the colony, had forfeited their claim to obedience, and that no legitimate governing powers existed. The issue was now made up. Parliament had declared its right to bind the colonies in all cases whatsoever. The Liberty party demanded all the constitutional rights of Englishmen. No taxation without representation. There was a strong minority in Parliament which took sides with the colonists in this struggle, but the eloquence of Pitt, Burke, Greenville, Grafton, Richmond, Conway, Shelburne, Chesterfield, Dartmouth and others, was of no avail against the imperious determination of Lord North.

Congress approved opposition to the unconstitutional acts of Parliament, advised the people to dispense with courts as far as consistent with law and order, and to settle questions of law among themselves, or by arbitration. As the judges were not holding their places by tenor of the charter, the county of Suffolk, early in September, 1774, agreed in Convention to save harmless all sheriffs, constables or jurors who should refuse to carry into effect any orders of the courts; earnestly recommending creditors to show generous forbearance, and debtors to pay their dues with all possible speed. The convention denounced all who would not follow this course as enemies of their country. This was opening a pretty wide door, but they enjoined peaceable measures, deprecating all violence or lawlessness.

This advice was lost on both parties. Gage filled Boston with soldiers, fortified the Neck and seized the military stores at Cambridge. He forbade the people meeting in convention and declared he would disperse them by force if they did. He called the General Court to meet at Salem, October 5th, 1774, and then by proclamation forbade the session. But the Whigs would not down. The representatives chosen met at Salem, and October 7th, resolved themselves into a Provincial Congress. This Congress adjourned to Concord. After providing for a new election it was dissolved, December 10th, 1774. A second Provincial Congress met at Cambridge, February 1st, 1775. Committees of Correspondence, Inspection and Safety were established and given large powers. Henry Gardner was chosen Receiver General. The third Congress met May 31st. In June it issued precepts for the elections of representatives and held on until the meeting of the new General Court July 19th, 1775. The Whig rallying cry was liberty now or slavery evermore.

The Whigs of Deerfield had heavy odds against them. Incense to the King from the fragrant Hyson filled the air. The minister, the judge, the sheriff, the esquire, the three doctors, the town clerk and treasurer, one store keeper, two of the three tavern keepers, most of those who had held com missions from the King in the late wars, and generally the young bloods who were looking forward to places of honor or office from royalty, were loyal to the source of power. A large proportion of the civil and military offices in other parts of Western Massachusetts were held by men of the same mind, and there were many ties of blood or marriage between these and the Tories of Deerfield.

Dr. Williams, the Tory town clerk, made only such record of the doings of the town as he saw fit. Meetings of a political character, carried in the interest of the Whigs, his dignity forbade his noticing at all. But as the strength of the Whigs increased, new leaders came to the fore, and after being directed "to make a true faithful record of the votes passed" in vain, he was the next year superseded by David Dickinson, a Whig.

Great preparations were made by Tory creditors for the August courts. Esq. Jonathan Ashley was a busy man. He was so crowded that for many days his brother Elihu was engaged with him "drawing writs."

August 4th, 1774, news reached here from Great Barrington that David Ingersoll, a Tory, had been mobbed by the Liberty men. His Deerfield connections and friends began to open their eyes to the possible consequences, but Esq. Ashley and his brother kept on "drawing writs."

August 19th came news that on the 16th the court at Great Barrington had been stopped, David Ingersoll mobbed and the windows of his house broken, but—Esq. Ashley and his brother kept on "drawing writs." Maj. Joseph Hawley was at Great Barrington; what part he took in the row may perhaps be guessed. Ingersoll came over the mountain to Chesterfield, but he was out of the frying pan into the fire. He and Col. Israel Williams were seized by a mob and compelled to sign a covenant dictated by their captors. Both, with Dr. Ebenezer Barnard of Deerfield, and John Graves of Pittsfield, took to the woods for Hatfield. Here Ingersoll fell into the hands of another mob, which drove him out of town, and on the 24th he sought refuge in Deerfield, for rest and comfort.

The atmosphere here increased in temperature so fast, that Ingersoll took advice from his fears, perhaps also from his friends, and the same day turned his horse's head towards Boston, that haven of distressed Tories. His coat and his pocket book followed him to Deerfield the 25th. Any conclusions drawn from this fact will not be disputed by the scribe. But meantime, Esq. Ashley and his brother kept on "drawing writs"—for the court was to meet at Springfield, Tuesday, August 30th. Should this court be allowed to do business, or should it be stopped by the Sons of Liberty? Noah Cook and Warham Smith of Hadley sent out circular letters inviting the towns to choose delegates to meet in convention at Hadley, August 26th, to consider this question.

A town meeting was called here on the 25th. The Tories rallied, but the Whigs controlled the meeting and elected Capt. Thomas Dickinson and Lieut. David Field to represent them in the convention. "Most Noble works about Liberty," comments a Tory on this meeting. The convention at Hadley chose a committee to wait upon the court and "inquire whether it sat upon the old or new establishment." If upon the new, "Then not to sit."

The popular feeling was now at fever heat, and it was in a gloomy frame of mind that Esq. Ashley, with his green bag stuffed with writs, accompanied by Judge Thomas Williams and others, set off August 29th for Springfield to attend court. Many of the court officials and the lawyers gathered in Springfield that night. Quiet reigned. But before sunrise the next morning the convention committee came in to meet the court. At a given signal the West Springfield bell rang, and soon a large party of men armed with white staves, under the lead of John Moseley, marched into town and took possession of the court house steps; and before nine o'clock the number was increased to 1000 men. They had everything their own way. "They would not let the court set on any establishment and made y^e Judges and all the Court solemnly swear that they would not take or execute any commission under Gage," after which the mob formed a circle in the street, into which the stray Tories were marched one by one, and made to acknowledge the error of their ways, and sign an agreement not to act under any authority derived from the King. No other violence was used, and the people dispersed at night.

August 30th was an anxious day with the Tories at Deerfield. One of them writes "it is a trying time with the Court, as it is the first day of their sitting. Expect nothing but what they would be broke up." But the wires were down, and the telephone out of order, so they must go to bed without the news. About three o'clock the next day, David Hoyt, who had been to the court, returned. He reported briefly that "the Court was broken up;" "we could not get much out of him," as he went along, says one, but a great crowd gathered at his tavern. The news was received according to the predilection of the listener, with an inward groan, or outward shout. About eight o'clock Esq. Ashley arrived, with his bag still full of writs, and gave the particulars of the lawless outrage to a sympathetic circle of listeners. He said Lieut. Catlin was much abused by Moses Harvey of Montague. "Entirely without Law every Man left to y^e Mercy of his Fellows." One present said, "I never see any person so altered in my life as Squire Ashley was."

September 1st was another exciting day in Deerfield. The Tories were gathered in anxious groups and the mob spirit was rampant among the Whigs. "Samuel Field of Greenfield was over at the house of his father, Lieut. David Field, for protection. He felt very low, as he expected to be mobbed." He was a lawyer who had taken sides with neither party. He was not disturbed by the mob. A party of Tories went as far as Bloody Brook and met the returning judge. After fortifying with flip at Catlin's, they went up to Esq. Ashley's and "tarried till the bell rung for meeting," which they attended. It was a fast day. In the evening a mob under the lead of Joseph Stebbins, after some hours' hunt, seized upon Phineas Munn and forced him to "make his confession." We shall see that this "confession" did not prove to be a conversion.

Judge Williams expected a visit next, and his friends gathered for his protection. The garrison were bound to show fight. Says one of them, "our guns, pistols, &c., were loaded, soon expecting they would come and burst the House." About eleven the inmates were relieved by "hearing Jos. Stebbins, the leader, say they would not do anything further." Possibly they may have got wind of the warlike preparations within.

One Tory writes, "Oh, Tempora, all Nature seems to be in Confusion; every person in fear of what his Neighbour will do to him. Such Times were never seen in New England."

The principal consolation to be found would seem to be in drinking flip. That was never doubted or neglected.

September 3d, rumors came that Moses Harvey was coming over from Montague "to correct the Tories." This story was doubtless conjured up from their fears, as there was no foundation for it. But it gave rise to a meeting at the schoolhouse that evening, "to come into some measures to prevent these petty Mobbs that were about." The result was a vote "to do everything in their Power to suppress these Mobbs." The people were evidently principled against any outside interference. They proposed to do their own mobbing. Capt. Thomas Dickinson was sent to Montague to interview Harvey about the matter, and reported all quiet along Mill river and about Dry Hill.

Sunday, Sept. 4th, about 9 o'clock, a messenger from Montague reached town with a report that Gage had fired on the people in Boston and that a post sent out to alarm this county had given out on reaching Amherst. As this was but rumor, the people went to meeting. As services closed for the morning another Montague man arrived with the tale that "the killed men were 106, and that they were fired upon for trying to stop the court. Our people were now wide awake, some for going away directly, others not." Finally they concluded "to send to Amherst and find out the truth of it." Theodore Barnard rode post to Amherst and "the people went to meeting, after which was over, there was gathering in every corner of y^e street." Barnard reported on his return that no post had been at Amherst and that the alarm was wholly false. The report may have grown out of the act of Gage, three days before, in sending soldiers to secure the powder in Charlestown. Or it may have been sent by Harvey as a practical joke.

Sept. 5th, a party of Tories garrisoned the house of Esq. Ashley. There may have been intimations of an approaching mob from the West. About three o'clock the next morning they were aroused by a messenger with news from Hatfield, that "all the western world was coming down to mob Col. Williams and others," and that all hands must go down to his protection. The meet was at Jonathan Arms's. One hundred men rallied at the call, and about half-past seven the van guard were on the ground. About 9 o'clock Hadley appeared with one hundred and ten men, Amherst with seventy, and fifty Hatfield men were afoot—all to keep down the mob. These were the law and order men of both parties. "The forenoon was spent in walking about." "The Deerfield company dined with William Williams. After dinner they marched over to Col. Partridge's, drank, then walked down street." The mob of fifty men soon appeared and were surrounded. "Being asked what they came for, they produced a No. of charges against Col. Partridge. The Col. appeared before the mob, vindicated himself, and the company voted they were satisfied with what y^e Col. said," and soon dispersed. The mob declared they had been sent for by Hatfield people—some of the Tories said, for "Private pique." Before the rescuers separated a "Covenant to be signed by the people to prevent mobbing" was agreed upon, and one of the Deerfield men agreed to make copies enough to supply one to each town.

Sept. 8th, a "Regular" was brought into town for examination. "The Fellow was under arrest for attempting to Rob on y^e Highway." Judge Williams "would not act as justice, but only gave his advice." The result is not known. This "Regular" may have been a deserter from the British forces at Boston. About this time Sunderland Whigs had organized a company of minute men, and had employed a "deserter" to drill them. The doctor had been for ten years a justice of the Court of Common Pleas, but after his recent experience at Springfield, he ignored the judicial ermine. That evening a party of young men met at his house by invitation. He doubtless prescribed treatment tending to allay the fevered pulse of the people. The judge seems never to have been molested in his own town by any mobites.

This picture of the "times that tried men's souls" will be incomplete with only one side on exhibition. The people were not, as might be inferred from history and tradition, wholly absorbed in political affairs. A few touches from every-day life may perhaps give a more correct view of these trying times. I copy from fragments of a diary kept by a medical student at the office of Dr. and Judge Williams in 1774. It is merely brief notes of every-day life like what is going on about each one of us all the time. He was doing only what his fellows were doing, and so represents the period. An idyl or a romance can hardly be expected in the commonplace record of a single week; but, so far as it goes, it is real life in Deerfield a hundred and twenty years ago, and given as such:—

Sept. 9. This Morning after Breakfast, I went up street, went to John Sextons. Upon my Return saw John Williams, who had returned from Boston yesterday and brought his Lady with him. About eleven I came home, spent my time in writing till Dinner, after which I came into y^e Garret. About 3 Polly came up. She tarried till 5 with me, was very sociable. I went and spent the evening at my Dada's and Brothers.

10th. Spent all the forenoon in making Riverius Pills; dined, after which I spent some time chatting with Polly. About three went up to Jno W's store, bot me a pr of Breeches; saw Jno, was invited to drink tea with him & his Lady, but declined & went down to Catlin's, drank flip with Barnard, walked down to Munns with him, tarried there till sunset, then came from there & went up to my Dada's; found S. Williams & Dolly there; they had just come from Hatfield. I tarried and spent the evening with them & returned to my Lodgings about Nine. Mrs. W. soon went off to bed, I sat & talked with y^e Ladies till Ten.

11th. Tarried at home this forenoon, being Sunday. In y^e afternoon waited upon y^e Ladies to Meeting, our Pew being full I went and sat in Catlins Pew; Polly sat with me; saw Mr. Jno W's Lady & others at meeting. Y^e exercise being over, Williams came with me to the Doctor's. Tarried and drank tea with us here. Sabbath being ended, Williams & myself waited upon y^e Ladies up to my Dada's to see Mrs. Williams. Samuel and myself went over to my Brothers, tarried there till nine, then went back, chatted till ten, then waited upon y^e Ladies Home, went into y^e Back Kitchen and chatted awhile, and then to bed.

12th. After Breakfast was over I went up to my Dada's to see Mrs. Williams; S. Williams went away about nine, he had been with Charissa the evening before. I tarried y^e forenoon there and dined—a very agreeable Time we had. Dolly told me Stoddard was coming to see Betsey, &c. After dinner I came to my Lodgings, sat in y^e shop most of y^e afternoon. Dolly and Betsey came and made a visit here; about sunset I went down to Catlins, spent y^e evening with him. After I came home went into y^e kitchen, supped; Cynthia was with me. I sat some time & Polly came; we sat up till after ten.

13th. This morning walked up to see Dolly, tarried till ten, then returned and went to reading, read till Dinner was ready, after which I went into y^e Garret; had not been there long before Polly came up; she chatted some Time with me about our Being married. I stayed and read till six P. M., then went up to my Dada's. Dolly not being there I went to my Brothers, found her there. I tarried & spent the evening with her; a fine evening we had of it. Returned about Ten, chatted with the Girls some Time, then to bed.

14th. All the forenoon was spent in gadding about. After Dinner Polly scratched my head. I told her I designed waiting upon her in y^e evening, with her Consent. she answered & said I had got that some time ago. After four I went home, fixed myself for Sunderland, carried my sister [Dolly] over there; Drank coffee with Billings, Esq., tarried till some time in y^e evening, then came home, got here just before Nine; Found Mrs. Partridge and Samuel here. Heph being here I went into y^e B. kitchen & chatted with her & the Ladies some time. After Prayers was over, I went into y^e kitchen, found Polly alone there. Taking hold of her Hand & telling of her it was mine, she said it was a bad one. I told her I would not have it abused so, but would take it off; she said she wished I would. I then asked her about my sitting with her; she said she did not know & said something always happened, and upon my saying we had better throw y^e courtship up, she said we had better put an end to it by M——g. I chatted with her about an hour, then to Bed, with Partridge.

15th. After Breakfast walked down to Catlins with Partridge. Stay'd there ab't an hour; from there We went up to my Dada's. I was set to turning hay, which held me till one. We then returned to y^e Doct's, dined, after which Partridge & myself took horse & rode out to N. Dickinsons. Pulled a tooth. Nat not being at home, We went up y^e Mountain, found him; on coming back I bro't my horse down, bled him, drank Tea, &c., which being done, We set out for home, got here about Dark. Soon after I got home C. showed me a letter she rec'd from J. Buck, in answer to one mentioned heretofore, y^e Porport of which was that there was a misunderstanding between them, & that he had no thought of making his addresses to her. I went into y^e kitchen, found Poy there, with whom I chatted a little while; upon my hinting my design of sitting with her, she said she was very tired, but hoped she should feel better before Bed Time. Prayers being over Pat'ge, y^e Ladies & myself went into y^e kitchen again. Poy yet seemed to be very Tired. She soon made a Motion for Bed, but upon my Desire she sat down, & then I asked her whether she would sit up or not, & that she would not sit up purposely to oblige me, But desired she would go to Bed. She sternly replied and said she would not. I then desired her to go into y^e South Room, to which she consented; upon her retir'g, C. followed & left Partridge alone; with much Intreaty I persuaded her to return. Poy & I went into y^e South Room; I soon began & told her I was almost determined never to plague her any more, & wondered she was not sick of me since I was so very fond. She said she was not & that I had no reason to think it. I told her I thought we never should get together. She said she would not think of separation, & if it must come to pass, she wished it might be by Death, and that she was sure it would never happen by her means. We parted about twelve, left Partridge with C. with whom he sat till two, then came to bed to me.

16th. This forenoon was spent part at y^e Doct's, y^e other part at my Dada's. Partridge went up with me. We went to my Brothers, stayed there a little while, then he went with me over to y^e other house. But upon my going to turn hay he went from there. I was busy till Dinner came on. Whilst we were at Dinner I proposed to my Dada my going away, to which he made no answer.

After Dinner I went to making hay at which I continued till dark. I then came to y^e Doct's, found Mr. & Mrs. Buckminster here. I tarried but a little while, took Partridge with me & went down to Catlins, spent y^e Evening there, return^d about Nine, spent some time with y^e Ladiēs, then to bed with Partridge.

17th. After Breakfast at y^e Doct's desire I went up to the pasture to fetch some Horses; Partridge went with me. Soon after our return, Partridge set out for home with his Mamma. I then walked home to help my Dada about his Hay. Worked till three A. M., then took the carriage & carried Tirzah down to Muddy Brook; went to Dwellees upon Business. We tarried y^r but a little while; upon our Return We went into Lt. Field, upon Invitation, eat some Baked Bear, which was very good; got home about Dark. I then took my things for Sunday & came to my Lodgings. Spent y^e evening in y^e shop; Poy spent part of it with me; about nine to Bed.

18th. Waited upon y^e Ladies to meeting, sat in the Corner Pew with them. Mr. Buckminster preached. In y^e afternoon waited upon y^e ladies again, sat in Catlin's pew with Cynthia. Mr. B. preached again; spent y^e rest of y^e Day in reading. Evening Prayers being over and Poy going up to make my Bed I went up with her. After she had made it we sat and chatted some Time; We were together about an Hour, then came down and walked up to my Brothers. We were detained there by the Rain till after ten; when we came home y^e People were abed. I sat with her * * * The Conversation turned upon my settling in Life. I asked her whether she would be will'g to go into y^e Woods with me? to which she answered that she was will'g to go anywhere with me, But desired I would never Tarry in Deerfield. I then asked her whether she would not have me if I did. She said she could not think I had any thots of it, since it would not be to my advantage. I told her y^e tho'ts of driving into the woods among Strangers was dreadful. She said it was, but others had done it & hoped y^t We should do well. * * * thus spending our time from half-past ten to one in a gloomy manner We retired to bed.

19th. After breakfast was over I went into old fort to bring some Horses up. After that I went down to Catlins upon Business, tarried there till twelve; then returned; about one Dined, after w^h I help't tackle y^e Horses & about 3 Mr. Buckminster & Lady set out in order to go to Gt. Barrington; Mrs. Williams went away with y^m, designed Hatfield. I then chatted with y^e Ladies about an Hour; proposed a Ride to Poy, to w^h she Consented, of which We were disappointed. I went home about 5, tarried there some Time. Mrs. Dwelley was y^r; she bro't me a 1-4 of Rackcoon. I went to Jona's, staid y^r till sunset, then went to E. Fields House, found Lieut. Partridge, bro't him up to y^e Doct^{rs}, here he tarried some Time, then with y^e Doct. walked down to Catlins, found a No. of people y^r, Rev. Ashley, Harvey f^m Montague—his hon^r Harvey had a fine Trimming from y^e Gent. that was there respecting his abus^g Catlin at Springfield, mak^g him get down on his Knees and ask forgiveness. We tarried y^r till about eleven, Partridge came and slept with me.

20th. Walked up to my Dada's this morning, got him to draw up a Confession for Harvey to sign—of which I have a copy—the nearried it down to Catlin, after which I came home & Breakfasted, Tarried Home y^e rest of y^e Forenoon. After Dinner I went over to Dick's shop, chatted with Heph. some Time about my Courtship, then went up to my Brothers, tarried till almost four, then came back & went into y^e Garret; C. & Poy soon came up; I read a Letter to C. which I had wrote to Patty. Y^y soon went down. T was not long before I went down in y^e B. kitchen. Poy came in y^{re}, desired to see my Letter, which I read to her, which she approvd of & advised me to keep a copy of it. I then went down to Catlin, brought him up to y^e School House, as there was a meeting y^e in order to chuse Delegates to go to N. Hampton to a County Congress y^e 22d of this instant, to Consult upon Measures to be enter'd into by y^e County. Lt Field & Thos Dickinson were chosen. Provided y^y could not go, then Jno Bardwell & D. Saxton were to go. Catlin & I with y^e Doct'r went up to Jona's supped upon Rackoon. I y^{re} rec'd an Invitation to Dwights Wedding; we tarried y^{re} till Ten, then we came home, Catlin came in with us. Soon Diana Hinsdale came in & invited Poy to her wedding with some others; y^y soon went away. Catlin tarried till eleven & went away. I then soon pushed off to bed.

24th. I asked Poy soon after I got up whether she had Determined about going up to y^e wedding. She said she had not asked her Mamma, but after Breakfast, I went & got my horse shod. Whilst he was shoeing I went down to Catlins, chatted a long while with Mrs. Catlin; she told me how she felt in y^e time of her Courtship, which was affecting. About Ten I came away, took my horse & rode over to Cheapside & went to making hay, worked till Noon, then came to my Dada's, found Heph there, dined, &c, after which I shew Heph y^e Covenant Poy & I had entered into. She said it was a very strong one & said Poy never could get away from it. I told her my feelings & desired she would send for Poy, over to her Brothers shop & find out if she could. She said she would. The afternoon I spent in making Hay. I returned to y^e Doct's about Dark & had not been here long before Poy came & sat down by me: she told me she had asked her Mamma & that she had given her Consent & that she was determined to go. I spent y^e Evening at Home in read'g to y^e Ladies; to bed at Nine.

25th. Being Sunday I went to meeting forenoon & Afternoon. Mrs. Upham was at meeting in y^e forenoon, Mrs. Foxcroft in y^e Afternoon; y^e rest of y^e day was spent in reading. In y^e Evening I went over to Lt Field's, heard him tell me about y^e Congress, mentioned heretofore, then with E. Field walked down to Lt. Catlins & spent y^e Evening y^r. about Eleven came home & to Bed.

26th. After Breakfast I went home, tarried but a little while, dressed Corse's face soon after I came home, after that I went into y^e Meadow, pitched a Couple Load of Hay for y^e Doct., this took me till one, then came home & Dined. After Dinner Cynthia asked my advice about going to Jack Williams. I told her I thought it very Improper as she had rec'd no Invitation to go & shew her where-in it was so, & after much Conversation had upon the Matter we parted, I went over into New Fort to pitch another Load of hay for the Doct. Upon my Return I found y^e Ladies dressing for y^e above

s^d Place, where y^y went. I after y^y were Gone went up to my Brothers and wrote a Deed for him; it took me till Dark. I then went down to Catlins, spent y^e Evening there with Catlin & Doct Barnard, just after Nine I came home, had not been at home long before y^e Ladies came, Mr. Williams with them; he tarrie not long; y^e Ladies told me y^y had a fine Afternoon of it; sat till I went to Bed.

27th. After Breakfast I went getting ready to go to Dwights wedding, travel'd about till I was almost tired & about 12 got fixt, came with my Carriage up to y^e Docts, took Miss Poy in & went up to Mr. Arms, where we were invited to wait upon y^e Wedners, found y^y had all got y^{re}, viz, two Dwights, Lyman, Graves, Smith, Bardwell, Howe & Stebbins. We tarried there about an hour then pushed on to Greenfield, where y^e Marriage was to be Celebrated. Supped, then y^y were Married & Dwight & my sister, Field & Heph stood as Assistants. After they were joined, we went to Dancing; there was a Number invited out of y^e Town to y^e Wedding. I tarried till nine then came away with P., Dwight & my sister & a No of others. Upon our return, Dwight, C, Poy & myself stopt at Blises store; was there but a few minutes & when we came out I found my Reins to my Carriage were cut in two, y^e other horses had their Tails cut off, and y^e Side Saddle cut. We fixt & once more set out and got home about eleven without any Trouble. Dwight stopt at my Dada's with C. I came & saw Poy well home, tarried & Chatted with C & Poy some Time, then took my Carriage up to my Dada's & put it out. Supped with Dwight, set up a little while, then he went to Bed.

28th. I with y^e Comp'y mentioned heretofore set out from Mr. Arms to go to Belcher to wait upon Mr. Dwight, Mr. Arms & a No from Greenfield, not mentioned heretofore. We got as far as Mud-dy Brook. Mr. Arms was then prevented from going any farther by reason of his father's Death, w^h happened y^e preceding Evening, y^e rest drove on, went to Billings in Sunderland, then stopt, drank, &c., then set out again, drove on to Fields in Amherst. I went down in a carriage with Poy. We were as dumb as stokes upon y^e road; here we stopt, Eat & Drank, tarried about an hour, then set out again, nothing said between Poy and I; y^e next stop y^e company made was at Graves's, Belcher drank cherry then drove on again. We had rode about a Mile & $\frac{1}{2}$ & met 26 Couple who came out to meet us. Ceremony being over & falling in ord made a fine Show. Got to y^e Grooms House about two, where we dressed ourselves, then walked to Capt Dwight's & Dined, after which was over returned back to y^e Grooms & went to Dancing. We had no Fiddle but a fine Singer; danced some time. About nine Poy as she was very unwell went off & lay down. Finding out where she was I went down & sat with her. In conversation she asked me what my Notion was to go off. I asked her where, she said to y^e West India wth Capt Starr. I told her it was to get rid of my Doubts and fears. She asked me whether I thought I should help myself that way. I told her I thought it would be a means of her being more happy & said I hoped her second Lover would not give her so much uneasiness as I had done. She said I never gave her unhappiness, but should if I left her & went off at w^{ch} when she spoke she cryed & begged I never would mention anything of a Second Lover, as that made her very uneasy,

 * * * When the compa'y broke up we came out, I tarried & supped, then we went to Capt Dwights with Pliny & Field, slept y^r in comp^o wth Dyreno Dwight, who was at y^e Wedding.

29th. After Breakfast at Capt Dwights, walked up to y^e Grooms, from y^r to Doct How's, chatted some time with Mrs. How, shaved, then went back to Dwights, dressed myself for Dinner, & about two walked down to Capt Dwights, Dined, after which returned & went to Dancing. Had a large collection y^r y^e second day. About 5 Pliny & Chariss, Poy & I took a walk, returned about sunset & again to Dancing, Danced till nine, (Poy treated me with a great deal of indifference) when Poy & I went over to Doct Hows to see Heph, who was very unwell, the house being fastened could not see her.
 We returned & sat together & chatted about an hour. The company broke up about eleven. After they were gone, supper being over, I took Poy and went into y^e kitchen & sat up till two—a very fine evening we had. Pliny sat up with Charissa. I slept with Dr.
 Caldwell at Dwights.

30th. Spent y^e Morning till ten gadding about & getting ready to come home. When we set out for home a No rode out with us.
 We stopt at Graves, then rode on; y^e company came out about 1½ miles from Graves, then turned about, except Pliny & Smith, who came along with us; Field & Heph went by Hatfield, y^e rest by Amherst; C. Dwight came with us to Fields, where we dined. Poy & I were very Dull all y^e way to Fields; we tarried there till three, when we came away; parted with the Belcher company & C. Dwight.

They “drank cherry” at Billings and were home at six.
 At least two of the young men who attended this wedding were married within two months, when similar ceremonies were repeated.

October 10th, 1774, Elihu Field and Hephzibah Dickinson set out on horseback for Boston, probably upon an ante-nuptial wedding tour, as they were “published” the next Sunday.

November 24th, Elijah Arms of Mill River for a second wife married Esther Lyman of Northampton. Her friends escorted them in due form to their home, where a lot of Deerfield people were ready to meet them. At four o'clock a “good supper” was served. The evening was spent in dancing, and the whole of the next day was occupied in the festivities of the occasion. November 27th, Thomas W.
 Dickinson and Thankful Field, and Jonathan Arms and his second wife Eunice Lyman, were cried in meeting. The young town clerk pro tem “was almost terrified to death” by this official duty. December 2d, a party took a “supper of oysters” at the house of Joel Munn. Joel had been a sailor and had married a Marblehead girl. This may account for this maritime entertainment so unusual in the valley.

The convention at Northampton, for which delegates were chosen here September 20th, was called to concert measures to be adopted under the late attack by Parliament upon our constitutional rights under the charter. Two days were spent in deliberation, and resolutions were passed concerning the rights and duties of the people. They assert that Gage is not their constitutional governor and that his writs for the General Court to meet at Salem are not valid. They recommend a Provincial Congress to meet at Concord, October 2d; that town meetings be called "in accordance with ancient usage." They recommend a strict observance of the non-importation agreement, and that traders who refused to sign such an agreement be boycotted; that no money be paid to "H. Gray Treasurer," but be kept subject to town order; that the people make themselves acquainted with the military art under men of their own choosing. In accordance with the recommendation of the County Convention our next town meeting was called by a warrant issued "Agreeable to the Charter of King William and Queen Mary," but the Tory town clerk did not recognize this change in the record, nor did he make any record at all of the September 2d and October 7th meetings.

Gov. Gage had issued a call for the election of a new General Court to meet at Salem, October 5th; but on account of the action at the County Conventions he made proclamation, September 28th, forbidding the session. All the same, however, the representatives met at the time appointed and, the governor not appearing, resolved themselves into a Provincial Congress, and adjourned to meet at Concord, October 11th, as before related. The news flew like wild fire. Deerfield had not sent a representative at the summons of Gage, but now a town meeting was warned over night to meet October 7th, and Samuel Barnard was chosen to represent the town in this new departure for liberty. Other patriots in this body were Daniel Nash, of Greenfield; John Taylor, Shelburne; Thomas French, Conway; Israel Hubbard, of Sunderland; Moses Gunn, of Montague; Samuel Williams, Warwick; Hugh Maxwell, Charlemont; Phineas Wright, Northfield; Thomas McGee, Colrain; and William Page, of New Salem.

The Congress adjourned to Concord and to Cambridge the 17th. This Congress took upon itself the direction of affairs in the colony, chose a treasurer and executive board with John Hancock at its head, which was called the "Committee of Safety;" and the machinery of an independent government was set in motion.

Its most important work was the election of delegates to the Continental Congress, and the action whereby the towns elected members to a new Congress, to meet Feb. 1st, 1775. The Tories were in a flurry. A party gathered at Greenfield Oct. 10th, but the not very agreeable spectacle was presented of a company of minute men exercising under Capt. Timothy Childs, a recent emigrant from Deerfield. October 17th, a new military company, to be under the orders of the new Congress, was organized here. Thomas Dickinson was chosen captain, John Bardwell, ensign, and David Dickinson, clerk. The selectmen gave Samuel Barnard an order on the treasury for £4 4s to pay his expenses to Concord. A Committee of Correspondence and Safety was chosen here. But, as there was no record of this made, the names of the committee are not known.

The fast appointed for Nov. 3d was observed by religious services here. Mr. Lyman of Hatfield preached in the morning, and Rufus Wells of Whately, a Deerfield man, in the afternoon. Parson Ashley would have nothing to do with the affair. As he firmly believed the Lord was on the side of the King, it would only be labor thrown away. Nov. 11th, the "sham officers," as the Tories dubbed them, of the new military companies met at Northampton to choose regimental field officers. David Field was chosen colonel, and David Dickinson, major, both of Deerfield.

When the crisis came upon the country, the militia officers of course held their commissions under authority of the King. If these officers were Whigs their commissions were thrown up. A paper in Memorial Hall, signed by Jesse Belting and twenty-nine others, shows how the matter was arranged in Hatfield before authority was assumed by the Provincial Congress, or minute companies organized:—

We the subscribers apprehending the military exercise is specially Requisite at this Day, and altho Capt. Allis, Lieut. Partridge and Ens. Dickinson have publicly declared that they will not act as military officers under the acts of Parliament in the support of the same. But we desire that they should call us together and exercise us by themselves or such others as they shall judge likely to teach and instruct us in the military art.

Oct. 4, 1774.

The Tories were not idle; there was much riding up and down the valley and many anxious confabs, but none of them doubted the final issue would be favorable to the king.

November 15th, Maj. Dwight, Capt. Stoddard of Northampton and Mr. Holbroke of Boston arrived here about dark. They spent the evening in consultation with Parson Ashley, Judge Williams and others, and went off the next morning.

December 5th, a town meeting was called under the charter of William and Mary. The selectmen were directed to procure a stock of powder and lead, and a committee was chosen to raise money by selling the wood on the town land.

December 11th, Parson Ashley refused to read the proclamation issued by the Congress for a thanksgiving day, but at the request of the people it was read by his son, Esq. Jonathan Ashley. There is a story current concerning this sturdy, uncompromising loyalist which is good enough to be true, but nothing is found to corroborate it. It is to the effect that when Parson Ashley finished reading from the pulpit the first proclamation ending with the customary "God save the Commonwealth of Massachusetts," that he rose to his full hight and with stentorian tones added, "And the King, too, I say, or we are an undone people."

Another story is, that in a sermon soon after the battle of Bunker Hill he declared that the souls of the rebels who fell there went straight to the bad. When he went back for the afternoon service he found the pulpit door nailed up. He called upon his deacon, Jona. Arms, the blacksmith who lived over the way, to get some instrument and open the door. The deacon replied that he did not use his tools on the Sabbath.

There are at least two improbabilities about this story. One is that Jonathan Arms was a Tory and would have been glad to do the bidding; the other, that he was not chosen deacon until six years after Ashley's death.

I think the following may be relied upon as true. Ashley preached the Bunker Hill sermon in Greenfield one Sunday morning; when he returned for the afternoon service he found an indignant crowd blocking the doorway; he was elbowed back whenever he essayed to enter and was made to understand the reason. When told they should "not rebuke an Elder," stout Samuel Hinsdale exclaimed, "An Elder! An Elder! If you had not said you was an Elder, I should have thought you was a pison shoemaker!" There was no service that afternoon.

1775. The western part of the county was all astir. The patriots were largely in the ascendancy, and were disposed to carry things with a high hand. They did not relish the law and order resolutions of the valley towns. January 2d, the wife of Capt. Reed, his daughter-in-law and her baby, were killed at "No. 5" by a falling tree. The whole country round gathered at their funeral on the 4th. After the services were over, the people collected in groups, discussing the great questions of the hour. There was hot talk of going again to mob Col. Israel Williams at Hatfield, who was considered the head and shoulders of the Tory party in Western Massachusetts. They were anxious to "humble him." It was said that Col. Easton of Pittsfield had sent him a threatening letter. Capt. Cadey declared he "was glad of it and hoped it would give the old dog a start and drive him off to Boston;" said he "ought to be shut up in gaol, for he was as subtle as the devil, and could lay schemes as deep as hell."

Col. Eager of Worthington was disposed to pour oil on the troubled waters and said that Col. Pomroy and Maj. Hawley, the prominent Whig leaders, had advised against their going down. Joseph Lyman of Northampton was reported as saying that "Northampton people were blind, and would not do anything until their throats were cut, and he wished the people would come down and Humble the Old Dog, for he deserved it, and that his conduct was not sufferable, and that he had enlisted a number of men in Hatfield" for service under Gage. Nathaniel Dickinson of Deerfield, Asa White and John Partridge of Hatfield, and Maj Stoddard of Northampton, of the Tory party, went up to see about the affair, also Ensign Clark and Zebediah Marsh of the Whigs.

January 5th, Capt. Bowen from Boston (?) was at Deerfield in consultation with Parson Ashley. He advised the Tories to go to Boston. He said "the standard would be set up in March and they who did not come in and lay down their arms might meet with bad luck." Soon after, John Ruggles from Hardwick, who had often visited Deerfield, where he had intimate friends, came here on some Tory errand, but he was mobbed by the Whigs and driven out of town. He was a son of Gen. Timothy Ruggles, one of the prescribed members of Gage's Council, and probably came here to obtain signers to the famous "Association" of the Tories, organized by his father a few weeks before. Father and son were both banished to Nova Scotia, where the brigadier kept tavern after the Revolution. A letter written from here January 17th, says:—

It is a very busy time with us, mobbing and dismissing ministers—in vain to tell you the business of the day. As for the windows and doors I shall keep them shut against the A—t and not take up with tin mending—but, sir, things run high with us and how they will end I know not. The Asso—is the first tuesday in february. Miss is better than yousal for the winter.

Mr. Solomon Williams kept Sabath with us last Sabath, and Miss Betsey, and Cresha, and Samme. We had a fine evening of it. All the Miss Williams were here, Jack Williams and Lieut. Catlin.

January 23d, a town meeting was held. It was not the practice at this time, or for many years after, to record the warrants for town meetings, and the records of the proceedings often fail to give a correct idea of the business before the meeting. The warrant for this meeting has been found.

ARTICLE 6 is to choose one or more suitable persons as Delegates to meet a Provincial Congress, to be holden at Cambridge, on y^e first day of Feb. next, or sooner if need be, there to Resolve on any matter or thing y^t may be Thought proper to Prevent y^e Ruin & Destruction of North America in General & this Province in particular & to continue and set by adjournment until y^e 25th of May next. [Col. David Field and Maj. David Wells were chosen Delegates to attend one at a time.]

ART. 7. To choose a Committee of Inspection in order to see y^t y^e Resolves of y^e Continental Congress be strictly adhered to in this town. [Col. Field, Capt. Thomas Dickinson, Lieut. John Russell, David Saxton and Maj. Salah Barnard were chosen.]

ART. 9 was to see if the town would direct their tax gatherers to pay the proceeds to Henry Gardner of Stowe.

Gardner was the new Province Treasurer, and doubtless the town voted to do so; but there is no record of any vote. This was an excited meeting, and there was high talk on both sides. The meeting was adjourned to January 17th. A letter written at that date from Hatfield says:—

John Williams said something at the last meeting which displeased them [the Whigs] and he is threatened with a mob. They were expected this day, but whether they visited him or not, I have not heard. O! tempore, O mores!

Neither have I heard, unless a traditionary anecdote refers to this case. The story runs, that when a mob had gathered about Williams's house, they found it garrisoned by well-armed friends; that as they were advancing to break in the front door, a window over it was opened and Seth Catlin appeared, musket in hand, threatening to blow a lane through them if they advanced another step. The crowd knew him too well to doubt his meaning, and a parley was called. A committee of the mob was admitted, and for an hour the questions at issue were debated. Meanwhile the committee were well plied with hot, strong flip. The committee declared themselves well satisfied, went out and reported to their constituents that Mr. Williams was a good patriot and had given Christian satisfaction. This report, and the argument presented by Lieut. Catlin, settled the affair, and the mob dispersed.

Nathaniel Dickinson, who lived out at Mill River, on or near the farm lately occupied by Dea. Stowell, was under the influence of Col. Israel Williams, and a "High Tory." Probably as agent for Col. Williams, he made the trip to Berkshire county in January. He was earnest, out-spoken, took no pains to conceal his sentiments, and became obnoxious to the Whigs. Soon after his return from Berkshire he set out for Boston. He "was mobbed three times and sent back." Thursday, Jan. 26th, he was back at Hatfield, where a mob drove him out of town. Monday night he lodged at Sunderland, "where a mob collected, but could not find him." His trouble arose from the fact that he had been found to be a messenger for Col. Williams, bearing letters from him to parties in Boston. The ire of the Whigs was roused against the colonel, as well as Dickinson, and Moses How of Belcher-town, and one Harmon rode night and day through the country as far as Pittsfield, stirring up the people to go to Hatfield and capture him. He was charged with enlisting men for, and corresponding with, Gen. Gage, but the exact contents of his letters do not appear. How was successful. John Brown took the field and led the Berkshire forces to the valley.

Thursday, Feb. 2d, the mob which How had raised appeared at Hatfield, 150 strong. They seized Col. Williams and his son Israel, and took them over to Hadley. At night they were confined in a room under a guard of seventeen men with loaded muskets. Late in the evening there was an alarm, and cry of "Indians! Indians!" "The guard swore that if anybody appeared to rescue them that they would blow his and his son's brains out on the spot, which terrified him much."

During the night some outside party stopped up the chimney, and the guard were driven out by the smoke, but the prisoners were forced to endure it as best they could. The next morning the colonel and his son were called out for an examination, "before the people to make answer to the charges brought against them." The colonel said, "they could prove nothing against him." But they were made to sign an obligation that they would not do anything to oppose Congress, would not correspond with Gage, and would oppose certain specified acts of Parliament, and then were dismissed. Capt. Stoddard of Northampton was brought over to Hadley Friday, and on Saturday he also signed the paper and was released. "There was a mob at Sunderland which began Thursday morning and lasted till Saturday night." The victims, or objects, do not appear. Perhaps Nat. Dickinson had been found and hauled over the coals. Colonel Williams, when in the hands of a previous mob in Berkshire county, had signed a similar paper, but had declared that he did not feel bound under such circumstances. But if the mob had not "smoked old Williams to a Whig," they had at least "humbled the old Dog," and they dispersed satisfied. These outrages must have been sustained by public opinion, for the law and order element made no effort to stop the proceedings. The times were critical. Williams was a man of great influence. Whether or not he was engaged in raising men for Gage, he was certainly in correspondence with him. February 8th was another fast, appointed by the ministers; Rev. Mr. Hubbard of Northfield and Mr. Hooker of —? officiated at a service here.

May 1st, Maj. Stoddard of Pittsfield was taken to Northampton by the Whigs for writing to Maj. Hawley that his "neck would go for it." "As the major is in a melancholy way, they attributed it to Stoddard's letter." But time proved that that staunch patriot, the compeer of Sam Adams, was not made of such namby-pamby stuff as this charge would indicate. Berkshire was a hot-bed of sedition, and March 1st the valley Tories sent up a messenger to find out what would "be done to them in case of an engagement." No reply has been found.

March 21st, the Tories arrested for firing upon the Liberty men of Westminster, Vt., arrived here under an armed guard of forty men, and spent the night at Catlin's tavern. They were on their way to the prison at Northampton. Several Deerfield Tories visited the prisoners. It was galling to them to see these judges, the high sheriff, and other leading men in the hands of the Whig patriots of Vermont, and there was some trouble in getting out of the prisoners' room. "Nobody might go out without leave of John Wood, commander." "Having a poor opinion of the man," they "could not stomach to ask his liberty." So they tried to force their way out. One of them "got into a jaw with Wood, and gave him his character in full tail." When Wood returned, March 25th, there was another "jaw, when Catlin gave it to him up hill and down." Judge Sabin and his fellow prisoners were delivered to the authorities of New York shortly after their incarceration at Northampton.

Notwithstanding the Provincial Congress declared all tea drinkers enemies of the country, and directed the Committees of Safety to deal with them as such when discovered, the use of the fragrant herb was not unusual among the Tories. It was smuggled from one town to another in various ways. May 26th, Col. Williams sent from Great Barrington to Dr. Thomas Williams here, a package of "Monongahela Balsam, which turned out to be fine green tea," and a good joke on the bearer.

April 5th, the Tories had the cheering news, received at Marblehead, April 1st, that "14 regiments of foot, 2 of artillery and 17 sail of the Line were on the way to Boston." April 10th, Seth Catlin had word from John Williams that vessels had left Boston to pilot the British troops in. A party of Tories had the news with their coffee, and says one of the party, "We had a very agreeable evening." The next day Col. Israel Williams gave his friends a dinner party. They were served with a "fine Indian pudding, and after that a piece of roast beef and also a dish of alamode beef." The feasting Tories thought their troubles were fast drawing to a close.

April 20th, a town meeting was held. After providing for transferring the papers of the clerk and treasurer to the new Whig incumbents, they,— Voted that y^e Minute Company, so called in this Town (as an Encouragement to their perfecting themselves in the Military Art) be allowed by the Town y^e following sums, viz.: to y^e Capt & two Lieuts each two shillings, to y^e clerk one shilling & six pence, and to the non-commissioned Officers & Privates one shilling each for one-half day in a week, until ordered otherwise by y^e Selectmen, who are hereby appointed a Committee to determine how long y^e said Company shall Draw y^e above mentioned wages.

It was then provided that the company should receive back pay for time spent in exercising, at one half the above rates. The meeting then adjourned to the 26th. It is evident from the record of this meeting that the report of the "shot heard round the world," fired the day before, had not yet reached Deerfield. Our fathers were faithfully providing for a contingency which had already occurred. At the very moment these wise precautions were being taken, the resounding hoof-beats of the galloping horse, and the hoarse call "To arms!" of the excited rider, were rapidly moving westward. The people could hardly have left the schoolhouse on the common, where they met, before the foaming steed with bloody flanks, bearing the dusty courier, was in their midst. "Gage has fired upon the people! Minute men to the rescue! Now is the time, Cambridge the place!" and the twain are off again like a meteor. Then there was hurrying to and fro, and arming in hot haste, and before the hours of the day were numbered fifty minute men were on their way to the scene of bloodshed, to join the band of patriots already encircling Gage in its toils. In their haste they were badly supplied for the service. One of them writes, "after I had got from home I found myself destitute of so necessary an article as a blanket."

The following is taken from a muster roll of this company found in the manuscript archives of the State. The pay roll includes April 20th. I have arranged the privates alphabetically, with time of service under this organization. This company was soon broken up. Capt. Locke was employed in the commissary department, Lieut. Stebbins was made captain, April 27th. Some enlisted under him, some under Capt. Hugh Maxwell, others came home and many are lost sight of by enlisting in other companies:—

The action at the adjourned meeting of April 26th was short and to the point. It was simply directing the collectors to pay the Province rates to Henry Gardner, and that "y^e Town will indemnify them for so doing."

William Tryon, governor of New York, was doing his best to hold that colony loyal to the King. Hopeful accounts of his success from friends on the spot had cheered the Deerfield Tories. Tryon kept up a correspondence with Gage by special posts. News reached our valley that one was out, and notices like the following were sent to the Committees of Safety in every direction:—

MONTAGUE, April 30, 1775.

By this you are informed that there is a post out from New York for Gen. Gage with a packet; you are desired to intercept or follow him if any intelligence can be had of him on either side of the river. His name is Oliver Delancee; he is a bluff fat young man 22 years of age, born at New York, rides a Dutch trotting horse. His packet is supposed to be consigned to Mr. Hancock, or Adams, or some other popular Gentleman; please to instruct those who may take his packet to carry it down to Boston; inspect taverns, ferries and all suspected persons.

Yours,
Chairman Com. Correspondence.

To Com. of Correspondence, Northfield.

Many of the people shut up in Boston were in a sad condition of suffering and want. Thousands had no employment and no means of livelihood. Contributions were sent them from all over the continent. Deerfield, with all her burdens, was not unmindful of their needs, and May 1st "agreed to take care of 36 Boston people who were too poor to remove from the city."

When the shock came, Greenfield was as well prepared as the mother town, and responded as promptly to the call to arms. A company of minute men had been drilling for some time under the direction of Capt. Timothy Childs, a veteran of the French War. April 20th, a company of fifty men living in Greenfield and towns adjoining, gathered in hot haste, and under the lead of Capt. Agrippa Wells, marched for Cambridge. The list of these men given below I copied from the roll in the State Archives, and it was compared by the officials in charge. I am thus particular because of the fanciful account of the rally on the Lexington alarm, given in Willard's History of Greenfield. His story is very graphic, but, historically speaking, it is lacking in one essential quality. It is not true. It contradicts all known facts. It lauds to the skies men who had no lot or part in the occasion, utterly ignoring the real heroes of the day. Willard's story is not only graphic, but very realistic, with the appearance of being genuine. I adopted the story in the first edition of this work. It was reprinted in the "Centennial Gazette." In the "Genealogy of the Childs Family" we find it improved upon. It is there gravely stated that Capt. Timothy Childs "was in the battle of Lexington commanding a company of minute men," and further, that his son Timothy of Pittsfield, was also there in command of a company, "though but a Lieut. and was noted for his bravery." Such "history" should not be repeated.

It has been hard to believe that Willard's story was made up out of thin air; and after considerable study and collating known facts, I confidently venture an explanation, which, while fitting the main points of Willard's story, also fits all other circumstances of the case. In all Whig towns, sooner or later, the local militia refused to serve under officers with commissions issued by authority of King George. This time came in Greenfield, I think, April 22d, 1776. On that day "Benjamin Hastings was chosen Lieut. in the company of Capt. Timothy Childs." Doubtless Childs was chosen the same day. Commissions to both were issued May 3, 1776, by Provincial authority. Aaron Denio was not "chosen ensign," but served as a private, when this company was called out on the alarm in 1777. This then was the time, and Trap Plain common the place, of the scene pictured by Willard.

The pay of the captain was 4 s, 3 d per day, the lieutenant 2 s, 7 d, privates 1 s, 5 d. The whole amount of this roll was £68, 13 s, 4 d, 2 f, which was allowed Feb. 6th, 1776.

The copy of this roll furnished for the Centennial Gazette is imperfect, five men being omitted and others misnamed and mislocated.

Capture of "Old Ti." As Deerfield was connected with the capture of Ticonderoga, May 11th, 1775, through a son, and a grandson, a concise account of the inception and completion of that important affair will be given.

April 26th, 1775, Capt. Samuel H. Parsons, journeying towards Hartford, met on the road Capt. Benedict Arnold on his way from New London to Cambridge. They had a few words about the need of cannon for the army, the fact of a considerable number being at "Old Ti," and of the weak condition of that fortress. This chance conversation bore fruit on both branches.

Arnold pushed on to Watertown, where the Provincial Congress was in session. He presented to the Committee of Safety a scheme for capturing Ticonderoga. May 3d, this body and the Council of War laid the matter before the Congress in secret session. The Committee on Supplies was directed to furnish Arnold with ten horses, two hundred pounds powder, two hundred pounds balls, one thousand flints and £100 in money; May 5th he was given a commission as Colonel, with authority to raise four hundred men and attack the fort. This business was done with such secrecy that no whisper of it got abroad. Arnold, seeing glory ahead, lost no time, and May 6th appeared in Deerfield on his way to the scene of operations.

Parsons on the other hand, broached the project at Hartford to a chosen few, and on the 29th of April, Capt. Edward Mott, with five companions, left Hartford for the north. They reached the house of Col. James Easton at Pittsfield, Monday night, May 1st. They told Col. Easton and John Brown—the same who led the mob at Hatfield—their errand. Both joined them, and with a few more picked men they pushed on to rouse Col. Ethan Allen and the Green Mountain Boys, on the Hampshire Grants.

The secret got out somehow, and May 5th, John Graves, a Berkshire Tory, was in Northampton with the news "that a few people from Connecticut had joined a number of Pittsfield people and were gone up to Ticonderoga, in order to take it, 20 in y^e whole." Whatever the Tories did about the matter is not known, but no harm came of it. At daylight on the morning of May 10th old Ti was in the hands of the Liberty men, having been surrendered to Col. Allen, who had summoned it "In the name of the Great Jehovah and the Continental Congress." The cannon captured here were soon telling the story to Gen. Gage from the lines about him at Boston.

May 6th there had been a stirring incident at Deerfield. The newly-made Col. Arnold, resplendent in a new uniform, bright epaulettes, gold lace and waving plumes, attended by a servant, rode furiously up the street. He halted at the tavern of Maj. Salah Barnard—the old house now known as Frary House. From there he sent a messenger for Thomas W. Dickinson, to whom he told his plans; and he handed the astonished farmer, a commission as Assistant Commissary, from the Committee of Safety, dated May 4th. It was accompanied by special instructions to procure forthwith for the expedition now set on foot fifteen thousand pounds of beef. After a social glass with his subordinate the energetic Arnold mounted his horse and pushed on over the Hoosac mountain, arriving at Rupert, Vt., on the morning of May 8th. The party under Mott and Allen had already passed that point. Arnold instantly followed, overtaking them at Castleton. The plan of the capture had been laid and one party already sent out to execute its share of the work when Arnold appeared. He showed his commission and claimed the command. The Green Mountain Boys looked with contempt upon the showy Colonel and gave no heed to his claims. Indeed they flatly declared they would not serve under him. It was a terrible blow to the active and ambitious Colonel to find he was too late, and that the laurels would be given to another which he had already felt in anticipation adorning his brow. It may have been the beginning of the infamous end of his career.

The young Commissary he left at Deerfield may or may not have left the customary "plow in the furrow," but he showed such activity and zeal in his new office that early the next morning, Sunday, May 7th, he was on the road with fifteen oxen bound for old Ti, with his brother Consider as assistant. On Friday, the 12th, he met Cols. Mott and Easton, and others returning from the captured fort. In due time he returned home with the following order:—

CROWN POINT 29 May 1775

Gentlemen Please pay Mr Thomas Wells Dickinson one hundred and seventy one Pounds thirteen shillings and four pence Lawful

Money for value rec'd of him in fifteen oxen for the use of the army at Ticondaroga and oblige Gentlemen Your Most Hble Servant
 To the Committee of } Safety at Cambridge }

BENEDICT ARNOLD

William Cooper, Secretary of the Committee of Safety, certified that Benedict Arnold was authorized to buy stores, and a warrant was drawn for the amount and given Mr. Dickinson.

Col. David Field was one of the Committee of Safety and Thomas W. Dickinson was a newly-made son-in-law, and this doubtless indicates the source of the Commissary's commission. It was a fortunate case of nepotism, for Dickinson exactly filled the bill and for several years did excellent service for the country in the commissary line.

The war was now squarely upon the country. The influential Tories were capable of doing a great deal of harm and became a really dangerous element in the community. Col. Israel Williams had been all along accused of enlisting men for Gage and in April enlistment papers had been found on one believed to be his agent.

May 23d, John Dickinson, brother of Capt. Thomas Dickinson, chairman of the Hatfield Committee of Safety, invited Col. Williams to meet the committee at Dea. Morton's and show himself a good man and true to his country. The Colonel appeared, but he did not give satisfaction. A week was given him to come to terms, or take the consequences. There is no probability that the staunch Loyalist yielded one hair for fear of "consequences." At all events Col. James Easton of Pittsfield, in the name of his regiment and the County Committee of Safety, sent him an order to retire to Boston and remain until the war was over. Col. Williams contemptuously refused. Had he foreseen all the consequences of his refusal, perhaps he would have obeyed.

The representatives of the people, whose election had been provided for by the Provincial Congress, as we have seen, met at Cambridge July 19, 1775. They took possession of the government, not as Revolutionists, but under the Charter of 1692. It was therein provided that, in case the governor or the deputy governor die or be displaced, or happen to be absent from the colony, the major part of the Council shall have executive authority. The patriots claimed that these officials being wilfully absent, their authority was vested in the major part of the Council, and acted accordingly. The places in the Council vacated by absent Tories were filled by the election of Whigs. The first action of this body was to ratify the doings of the Provincial Congresses. It then issued Bills of Credit; changed the basis of representation by the people; vacated all commissions issued by royal authority; laid a State tax; reorganized the militia and the civil courts; issued Letters of Marque and established Courts of Admiralty. In short it assumed all the functions of a governing power. The Style adopted for commissions, etc., was "The Government and People of the Massachusetts Bay in New England."

BUNKER HILL.

Little is discovered about the part taken in the siege of Boston by Deerfield people. Something has been gleaned concerning their participation in the battle of Bunker Hill. The commission of Joseph Stebbins as Captain, signed by John Hancock, President of Congress, dated July 5th, 1775, hangs in Memorial Hall. He had been appointed April 27th, and had enlisted a company, which was not full on the 17th of June. His August roll shows that he then commanded fifty men.

The following rolls are given entire. Each has a local as well as a general interest. On each are some Deerfield men, with many others from the territory of Old Deerfield. The originals are in the Mass. MS. Archives. Men whose names are marked with a star drew clothing Nov. 1st.

Daniel Fisk,

Lebeus Jennings was in the company of Capt. Thadeus Russell and killed June 17th. Other soldiers from this vicinity at this time were: from Greenfield, Asahel Atherton, Phineas Johnes, John Bates, Simeon Smith (deserted Sept. 16th); from Ashfield, Julius and David Frary; from Conway, Joel Dickinson, Ebenezer Allen, Selah Baldon, Eliphalet Wells, Aaron How, Isaac Amsden, Daniel Davidson.

Capt. Stebbins and Maxwell were with Prescott on the night of the 16th in making the redoubt on Bunker Hill, and were both in the thickest of the fight on the 17th. Jesse Corless was killed and Capt. Maxwell was wounded. Timothy Catlin was close by Warren and saw him fall. Catlin received there a wound in his face. His face was ever after, to his death, an escutcheon of honor, on which was blazoned a scar sanguine. Reuben Childs and Joseph Fethergill are also known to have been in the fight, and there is no reason to doubt that all those named above on the rolls of Stebbins and Maxwell should be added to this Roll of Honor.

Prisoners at Northampton. August 15th, 1775, the officers and crew of the British ship Falcon, thirty-one in all, were sent to Northampton and were left on parole in private families. Some of the prominent Whigs in Boston had been arrested by Gage and thrust into the common jail. Washington, hearing of this, wrote Gage, August 17th, that unless these men had better treatment he would surely make reprisals. "If your officers, our prisoners, receive a treatment from me different from which I wish to show them, they, and you, will remember the occasion of it." It became necessary to carry this threat into execution. Some of the victims of it were Robert Arnold, captain; Justin Budd, gunner; William Broughton and Philobech Domett, midshipman, who were put in the dungeons of Northampton jail. September 16th, they petition the Council for relief, and excepting Budd, were released on parole not to leave the town. Soon after some English prisoners were sent to other towns in the valley but none are heard of in Deerfield.

Rev. Jonathan Ashley was settled here for life, and nothing short of an ecclesiastical, as well as civil revolution, could unsettle him. He had prayed publicly for the King for forty years, and continuing true to him and his Ministers, took no pains to conceal his loyalty. He was a strong-minded man and his influence was all against the Whigs and their wicked rebellion. The Whigs were desirous to get rid of him by any means in their power. The town, hoping to freeze him out, in 1774, refused to vote him any salary or firewood. At a town meeting Dec. 4th, 1775, Article 1 was "to see whether y^e Town will reconsider a vote passed in Dec. 1762 respecting y^e addition to y^e Rev Mr Ashleys Salary". The vote was not to reconsider. The Tories carried the day.

The following named people, representing the Whig minority, entered their protest against this vote on the town records:—

Allis, Eber	Field, David	Parker, Abel
Amsden, John	Field, Elihu	Parker, Nathaniel
Bardwell, John	Frary, Nathan	Saxton, David
Bardwell, Thos. Jr.,	Frary, Nathan Jr.,	Sheldon, John
Barnard, Joseph	Frary, Timothy	Sheldon, John Jr.,
Barnard, Joseph Jr.,	Graves, Zebediah	Smead, Ebenezer
Barnard, Selah	Harvey, Simeon	Smead, Joseph
Childs, Amzi	Hinsdale, John	Smead, Oliver
Dickinson, Eliphalet	Kingsley, Caleb	Stebbins, David
Dickinson, Thomas	Mitchell, Abner	Stone, Elias
Dickinson, Thos. W.	Mitchell, Joseph	Wells, Thomas

The object or effect of this protest I do not understand. Several of a similar character are found on the town records.

Article 2d was "To see if y^e Town under the present Difficult circumstances will think it convenient to continue y^e Rev. Mr. Ashley in y^e work of y^e Ministry here."

Upon this article there is no vote recorded. Doubtless it was dismissed. But the insertion of the article is significant. A vote prevailed not to furnish Mr. Ashley any firewood.

There was an effort to have the town make some provision for Francis Leicester and family, but it was defeated. Leicester was a poor man who had just returned from a six months' service in the army.

The political division between Whigs and Tories was made more bitter and personal through a church quarrel. Samuel Barnard had been called to account before the church for slandering Mr. Ashley. A majority favored the minister, and voted to withdraw communion from Barnard. This discipline displeased a large minority which withdrew from the church and from the ministry of Mr. Ashley. The Whigs and Tories divided very nearly on the line separating the parties in this affair.

Deerfield men who are known to have served in the army this year not already named. There were doubtless others whose names are lost:—

Bardwell, Samuel	Furlow, Solomon	Newton, Arial
Billings, Nathaniel	Grandy, Reuben	Shattuck, Samuel
Choate, William	Kendell, John	Wright, Carmi
Cooley, Martin	Ladd, Benjamin	Wright, Westwood
Dewey, Zenas	Locke, John A.
Drury, John	Newton, Alpheus

1776. The Deerfield Committee of Correspondence, Inspection and Safety. A portion of the records kept by this Committee has been discovered. From this we learn the functions and operations of this unique organization.

The Committee chosen at the town meeting March 4th were David Field, Joseph Barnard, Salah Barnard, Thomas Dickinson, John Bardwell, David Saxton, David Dickinson, Nathaniel Parker, Jeremiah Nims, Nathan Frary and Joseph Barnard, Jr.

At their first meeting, March 8th, David Field was chosen chairman and David Dickinson, clerk. All the records preserved are in his clerkly hand. A letter from Joseph Hawley, chairman of the Northampton Committee of Correspondence, Inspection and Safety, was laid before them, proposing a meeting of the town committees of the county, at Northampton, on the 13th of March. The object of the meeting was:—

To consider of several matters touching y^e Good of y^e Country, more especially whether it be Expedient that y^e Court of General Sessions of y^e Peace be suspended or adjourned to some future time; also, whether y^e Justices of y^e County should in any case act under their present commissions.

After taking the matter “into serious consideration” it was voted that such a meeting “is expedient;” and Col. David Field, David Saxton and David Dickinson were chosen to represent the committee at the convention. Whether the courts were allowed to sit, or the justices to act under their commissions from the crown by this new organization of original power, does not appear. Probably not, as the committees took upon themselves judicial powers and functions.

March 29th, Oliver Field brought before the Committee a complaint against Jeremiah Leach, for passing a counterfeit Continental “ten shillings and sixpenny Bill.” “An order was then made on y^e s^d complaint by y^e Chairman, directed to Stephen Jones, Esq., and Mr. Elihu Field, wherein they were required to bring y^e said Leach before this committee, to make answer to the complaint.” He was accordingly brought before them, where “he wholly denied” the charge, but was put into confinement.

The Committee adjourned to the next day, when a message was received from the Conway Committee of Correspondence, that George Herbert and Elijah Williams had entered a complaint against Alice, wife of Jeremiah Leach, “for passing a 3—bill of Rhode Island currency,” and proposed a meeting of the two committees on Monday, April 1st, for a joint examination of both parties. This was agreed to, the examination held, and both the accused found guilty and ordered:—

To give bail in y^e sum of £50 for their personal appearance before y^e Great & General Court, or any Court y^e s^d General Court shall appoint for that purpose, or otherwise be secured in Northampton goal.

No bail was forthcoming and they were sent to prison. The next case before the committee was of a different character. A report had been circulated damaging to the character of Maj. Salah Barnard, to this effect: That he “had sent his compliments (by Lieut. Seth Catlin) to Gen. Gage & other Ministerial officers then in Boston & bid y^e said Lieut. inform y^e s^d Ministerial officers that his Heart was with them, altho he was absent, also would have y^e said officers enroll his Name among those that were upon the Ministerial side, and that he has not lifted his Hand against Government.” The meeting ordered the clerk to summons Seth Catlin, Phineas Munn, Joel Munn, Nathan Catlin, Thomas Mighills, Simeon Stebbins, Jona. Ashley, Jr., Ithamar Burt and Thos. Bardwell, Jr., to “appear and inform this committee what they know concerning said Report,” and then adjourned to May 8th.

On the 8th these additional were summoned: Daniel Arms, Samuel Barnard, Jr., John Saxton and Moses Chandler; they then adjourned to the 9th. After a partial examination on both these days, several of the Committee, in view of their near relation to Maj. Barnard, declined to act further in the matter, and the Greenfield Committee were desired to meet and assist them. On Monday, May 13th, after a thorough examination of “all people supposed to have any Knowledge of the affair,” the joint Committee declared the report untrue, and that “on the contrary it fully appears to this joint Committee, that y^e Maj. Barnard’s Character respecting his Principles and Conduct in y^e unhappy Dispute between Great Britian & y^e colonies, stands unimpeachable, notwithstanding anything that has appeared against him.”

Proceedings of another character will next be noticed. The meetings were all at the tavern of “Landlord Saxton.”

At a meeting June 3d, It was voted that this Committee will proceed to let and lease y^e whole of y^e Real estate of Nathaniel Dickinson late from this town lying and being in said Town of Deerfield for one year; also to take an Inventory of his Personal estate

 * * * the said Nathaniel being one who in y^e Judgment of this Committee hath joined our unnatural Enemies for y^e purpose of aiding and assisting them in subjugating these American Colonies * * * and voted that this Committee will proceed to Mill River on thursday y^e 6th Instant to take an Inventory of y^e said personal estate.

The real estate which Nathaniel seems to have owned jointly with his brother Samuel, was, on the 19th of June, rented at auction for £41 10s to said Samuel, for one year from April 1st, 1776.

July 22d, David Field and David Dickinson were chosen to represent the Committee in a convention to be held at Northampton on the 25th. They voted to "publish to y^e World in y^e Publick Newspapers" the vindication of Maj. Barnard against the "Report which had prevailed in this Town and in Neighboring Towns against him." Another function of this Committee is shown in the following: Aug. 28th, they received a letter from the joint Committees of Colrain and Shelburne, requesting their attendance at a convention to be holden at the meetinghouse at Shelburne Aug. 30th, "in order to do something with such Persons as are inimical to America." Col. Field, Maj. Dickinson and Ens. Barnard were sent as delegates. Nothing is found relating to this convention.

Dec. 17th, the personal estate of Nathaniel Dickinson was sold at auction. He must have been a well-to-do farmer, but he sacrificed the whole of his estate to his loyalty. The live stock sold were eleven horses young and old, seven yoke of oxen, fourteen cows and heifers, three calves, five "lots" of sheep, one black bull, one boar and three hogs. The amount realized from the sale was £236, 10s, 6d, which was paid into the treasury of the Province. The last heard of Nathaniel Dickinson was in 1786, when he was at St. Johns, New Brunswick, where it is believed he died a faithful subject of the King.

In January, 1776, David Saxton was on a committee with Joseph Hawley and four others, appointed by the General Court, to raise a regiment in Hampshire county for the Canada expedition.

May 23d, the town voted to purchase a number of intrenching tools, agreeable to an act of the "Great and General Court passed in January last."

Independence Day. June 25th, 1776, should be celebrated as Deerfield's "4th of July." At a meeting called for that day it was,— Voted that this Town will (if y^e Honorable Congress shall for y^e safety of y^e United Colonies declare them INDEPENDENT of y^e Kingdom of Great Britian) Solemnly Engage with their LIVES and FORTUNES to Support them in y^e Measure, and that y^e Clerk be directed to make an attested copy of this Vote and forward y^e same to Mr. Saxton, Representative for this town, to be laid before the General Court for their Information.

Here was treason, outspoken, proclaimed and recorded; any Whig voting for this declaration exposed himself to the doom of a traitor at the hands of the vindictive Lord North. Ten days later, July 4th, the Continental Congress issued that world-renowned paper, the Declaration of Independence, and the process of organizing a government, from the source of all political power, went on to gradual completion. Oct. 7th, it was voted,—

That this town do consent that y^e present House of Representatives of this State of y^e Massachusetts Bay in New England, together with y^e Council, if they consent in one Body with the House, and by equal voice, should consult, and agree on, and enact, such Constitution and form of Government for this State, as y^e said House and Council, as aforesaid shall upon y^e most Deliberation, Judge will most conduce to y^e Safety, Peace and Happiness of this State, provided the same be made publick for y^e Inspection and perusal of y^e Inhabitants of this State before the Ratification thereof by y^e Assembly.

With such cautious wisdom shown by the primary assembly in the very alphabet of the new political science, what wonder that the constitutions for State and Nation became the recognized exponents of the rights and duties of man, the admiration of statesmen to this day!

October 6th, 1776, a Committee of the House made a report recommending that a depot of ammunition be established at Northampton, to be under the care of Robert Breck; that:—

As soon as may be there be deposited in said Magosene two Tons of Gun Powder, Six tuns of leaden Ball and Eight thousand Flints, together with three Hundred fire Arms, to be under the care of the above named Breck, and in case of an alarm to be delivered over by him to such men in the County of Hampshire and Berkshire as shall appear in the judgment of the Selectmen of Northampton, or the major part of them to stand in need thereof * * * the above articles to be forwarded as soon as may be under a proper guard.

This action was probably in reference to matters soon to be considered.

December 9th, the selectmen, agreeable to a resolve of the General Court, took a census of the male residents of the town. They report, "There is 209, and there is 13 which by reason of age and infirmity, insanity, &c., have not been rated for a number of years, also two blacks." This might perhaps indicate a population of eight or ten hundred. December 2d, the town voted to provide for Aaron Scott and the family of Francis Leicester, and to build a work house 18 x 36 feet, one story high.

Personal letters are a part and parcel of the times in which they were written, and nothing brings us into a closer connection with the real life of the people. I add two of this period which have fallen in my way:—

ALBANY, May 9, 1776.

KIND SIR:—I take this opperteunity to inform you that I am well and I hope thease will find you so. We have orders this day to march for Canada to-morrow morning at 7 o'clock. No other News to write at Present, but remain your friend and humble Sarvent, LEMUEL PRESSON.

P. S. I should be very glad if you would take care of my cloaths and ear them once or twice this sumer if you can. I should be glad if you would send to my father and mother and let them know where I am and where I go.

To Mr. Zadock Hawks in Deerfield.

DORCHESTER HEIGHTS, Oct. 18, 1776.

MY DEAR FRIEND:—Through Divine Goodness I am Hearty & Well, which I Pray God these may find you & y^e children in the same Situation. I have had some thoughts of coming home before my Time is out, but believe I shall not. I should be glad to hear from you and all my Friends. I have business to do almost Every Day, so that I am out of Idleness, but I have but just time to write [blotted] and acquaint Father that I have rec'd four Dollars to Purchase Salt. I must give Ten Dollars a Bushel. I should be glad to know what he thinks the price of it will be. almost every thing is at a most Extravagant Price.

if we shall want more Sugar let me know it. Cotton Wool is 3s 4d a lb. I will get some if you think best.

I send this Letter by Ensign Slate [doubtless Jonathan of Bernardston] who is waiting—if you send a Letter to Landlord Saxton's by tenth (?) Day Night he will Bring it—if you have a p^r Stockings I should be glad of them, for yarn Stockin's are most comfortable—give my Duty to Father and Mother, Love to Brothers and Sisters and Compliments to all Friends. from y^r most affectionate Husband, SAMUEL TAYLOR.

P. S. Excuse the wandering Lines for I hant time to write otherwise.
[Directed] To Mrs Esther Taylor att Charlemont.

The writer was in command of a company in Roxbury, Sept. 17th, with the following named Deerfield men under him: Joseph Clesson, Ebenezer Graves, David Kendall, Moses Newton, Ezra Mudge and Samuel Smead; others who went from Deerfield this year were Moses Bates, Stephen Herrenden, Wm. Staple, substitute for Theodore Barnard, Silas Wright. The latter was charged "a pair mittens, p^r stockings, 4 pounds flax, a blanket, a gun, cash 1 s, knapsack, 5 lbs. pork, 3 lbs. cheese, $\frac{1}{2}$ loaf bread, when you went away." He was ancestor of Gov. Silas Wright of New York. Francis Munn, James Warren, Obadiah Wells, John Beaman, Arad Sheldon, served under Capt. Thos. Alexander in the expedition to Quebec, which they reached April 27th, 1776. Sheldon says while crossing Lake Champlain on the ice in April, he broke through. In June, in crossing the St. Peter's Bay, in command of a party carrying stores to Gen. Thompson's party at Three Rivers, he lost his coat, blanket and knapsack.

1777. This year opened gloomily for the Patriots. The disastrous battle of Long Island, the capture of Fort Washington, the retreat through the Jerseys, had had a depressing effect on the public mind, only relieved by the brilliant success of Washington at Trenton. Under this condition of affairs a general rising of the Tories was feared. The Committees of Safety were vigilant to guard against this. Our Committee sent Capt. Thomas Dickinson and Lieut. Joseph Barnard as delegates to attend a convention of the Committees at Northampton, January 29th, 1777, to compare notes and devise ways in this crisis.

The business of the convention was multifarious. It related to supplies for the northern army, to the establishment of judicial courts, to the desecration of the Sabbath by travelers. But the heaviest burden on their minds was the rampant condition of the Tories. They state the condition of affairs in this respect in a petition to the General Court. They believe that inimical persons in Hampshire county are daily increasing and that there is need for the General Court to take heed of this fact. They say:—

Ever since our army retreated from New York, and the inhuman ravage of the British troops in the Jerseys, our inimical brethren have appeared with an insulting air and have exerted themselves to intimidate weak minds by threatening speeches, saying that 'the day was over with us.'

They declare that the General Court has passed unjust acts in raising recruits, and say 'the committees or the Selectmen dare as well be damned as to draught them for the army, and if they were draughted, they would rather fight against our men, than our enemies.'

They are trying to destroy the currency by counterfeiting it. They pay 'no regard to the Committee of Safety, frequently meeting and holding correspondence from Town to Town.'

They try to prevent recruiting our army, and no other construction can be put upon their acts but 'that they are plotting our ruin.'

Our townsmen and their fellows may have magnified the danger, but the danger was real, and their fears well-grounded. Strong indications had been discovered of a rising of the Tories in Maryland and Delaware. Gov. Tryon had organized a large force of Tories in New York, three hundred men had crossed over to him from the Jerseys, and he had been made a major general. Congress "had reason to believe that an insurrection had been planned in New England." Gen. Gates wanted more troops posted in this region for that reason. Doubtless consistent loyalists in our midst would have welcomed such a movement, but I find no direct evidence of any concerted attempt in that direction.

An individual case can be cited. Phineas Munn left Deerfield and went to Burgoyne's camp. He did not enlist under him, and after a few days came back. He soon found that this place was too hot for him. He escaped, and again made his way towards Burgoyne's army. By that time the latter was surrounded by the American forces. Munn concluded he could find no harbor there, and made his way to Montreal, where he spent the winter. Here he "became satisfied," he said, that he had "imbibed a mistake in regard to Britian's power, intentions, &c., and he resolved to return to his country and deliver himself up." This is the story he told when captured near Concord, N. H. The Concord Committee of Safety took him to Boston, where a hearing was had before the Council. April 14th, 1778, the guard that brought him to Boston was directed to take him to Northampton gaol, where the sheriff was to keep him for trial at the county court.

Nothing more is heard of the case. Munn came back after the war, if not before its close.

At the annual March meeting, 1777, David Field, Joseph Barnard, Jonathan Wells, Zebediah Graves, Elias Stone, David Saxton, Joseph Barnard, Jr., Isaac Parker, Ebenezer Wells and Eldad Bardwell were chosen a "Committee of Safety, &c."

The General Court had made a call for all available arms and munitions of war, but "it was voted that the Town will not dispose of the two pieces of cannon." This action of the General Court was suggested by a petition of Jonathan Hobby. These guns were two field pieces, supposed to have been brought here by Gov. Belcher in 1735. One of them was wantonly destroyed at Hadley about 1840; the other is safely housed in Memorial Hall, as a relic.

The question was again raised whether or not to retain Mr. Ashley in the ministry. There was a vote to do so; but no firewood was voted him this year.

Under the authority of an act passed July, 1776, a hospital had been established here by the justices of the courts, for the inoculation for the small pox. Under a new law of April, 1777, it could not be continued for more than six months, without leave of the town. The prompt action which follows, shows that, at least, this hospital was not considered a desirable institution:—

April 9, the Question was put whether y^e Town will Suffer y^e Inoculation for y^e Small pox to be carried on in this town any longer and it passed in y^e Negative.

April 14, voted to give each recruit for the Continental army £20 in addition to what may be given by the State or Congress. A committee of Whigs was chosen to obtain an "exact account of services, both personal and pecuniary, performed in the war by the Inhabitants of this Town since April, 1775." At an adjourned meeting the Tories carried a vote not to accept the report of this committee. They also made a motion to reconsider the vote of the 14th, giving the £20 bounty; they failed to carry it at first, but in another attempt they succeeded and the vote was annulled. The Whig and Tory parties were nearly balanced in numbers at this time, and votes passed by one side were often rescinded by the other at the same or adjourned meetings.

Arrest of Tories. The exultant Tories, at the close of the campaign of 1776, really believed the end was near and acted accordingly. Israel Williams & Son of Hatfield, who had done a large business in selling English goods, being full in this faith, resolved to take time by the forelock, and import a stock of goods to be ready for the market when the bubble of the rebellion should burst, and the non-importation acts be but waste paper. Accordingly, Dec. 21st, 1776, a large invoice was made out and an order dispatched to a London house for the goods. They also wrote Gov. Hutchinson, and two other Tories in England, to aid them in getting the goods on credit. The order and the letters were dispatched to New York, to be sent thence to England. The messenger went over the mountain and down the valley of the Hudson. While passing through Claverack, probably on a sudden alarm, he threw the packet into some bushes by the roadside, and was afraid or unable to recover it. Here it was discovered and came into the hands of that eminent Whig, Theodore Sedgwick, by whom it was sent back to the Committee of Safety at Hatfield—a fateful message to the writers.

The excitement ran high. The Williamses had violated the written pledge of 1775. The Committee of Safety took the matter in hand, and March 1st, Col. Williams and his son gave a bond for £500, with O. Dickinson and Joseph Billings as sureties, to abide the action of the Council, and meantime to live up to the former pledge. The people were not satisfied with this, and April 1st both were arrested and taken to Boston by the Committee, and brought before the Governor and Council. David Wait went down to testify in regard to their general conduct at home. John Hastings, chairman of the Committee, wrote that the accused had been uniform in opposing everything to aid the cause of the country, and old letters to Hutchinson were produced against them. Among other things it came out that Col. Williams would not observe the fasts appointed by Congress, and that on one occasion he had said with emphasis, “The People are about to Fast for Strife and Debate and Smight with the Fist of Wickedness.” After a full examination, the result was announced April 14th:—

It appeared to this court that in violation of National Law, and solemn written engagements, entered into by said Israel Williams and son, to the People in Feb. 1775, they did in Dec. 1776, in order to obtain Large Quantities of Goods upon credit from our enemies, write to Joseph Green and Henry Laughton, Persons who did belong to this State, but who have now joined our enemies, and who were at the time of writing said Letters supposed to be there in England, and the said Israel Williams, the father, did on the same Day and Place, write to Thomas Hutchinson, Esq., respecting the same matter, and did therein represent to said Hutchinson, his certain Hope & Expectation, that our Enemies would very soon entirely defeat & fully subdue the Americans.

It also appeared that the General Conduct of said Israel Williams and son, ever since April, 1775, has been unfriendly to the American cause of Liberty, and no one Instance of Friendship in their Conduct since that time was produced, and it also appeared that the said Israel Williams, the father, by letters to said Hutchinson in 1770-71, fully expressed his approbation of that British System of Despotism, which has since plunged us into this unnatural war, in which we are now struggling for the Defence and Preservation of the Common Rights and Liberties of Man.

Therefore, Resolved, that the Sheriff of Hampshire County be directed to Commit the said Israel Williams and Son to the common goal in Northampton, and keep them in close custody until further orders of this Court. [Beyond this they were declared] unfit to hold any office or place under the government of the State.

It was hard lines for Col. Williams. He was a man of 67 years who had been for a generation the foremost man in northern Hampshire, and had served his country ably and faithfully in defending the frontiers against a French and Indian enemy. He had held the office of Register of Probate, Judge of the Court of Common Pleas, and many other offices of honor and trust. Bitter, indeed, must have been his feelings as the prison doors clanged behind him, and he was left alone to meditate in those cells, to which so many a poor wretch had been consigned by his orders.

In later years his treatment has been called persecution—a violation of the right of free thought and free speech. It certainly was that; but a thoughtful consideration of the case shows that if the Revolution itself can be justified, the action of the Council was not only expedient, but a high duty to the cause.

May 19th, a call was issued for another convention of the Committees at Northampton, on the 27th. May 20th, our Committee chose Lieut. Joseph Barnard as a delegate. June 3d, Col. David Field and Isaac Parker were chosen to attend another convention there on the 10th. Joseph Hawley was the main spring in all these conventions of the Committees of Safety, and through them his influence molded the public action in a very great degree in this valley all through the war.

The American troops had been driven from Canada and the lakes by Gen. Carleton. Burgoyne had forced them from Crown Point, Ticonderoga, Forts Anne and Edward, and he had reached the Hudson, intent on opening a communication with Gen. Howe, then holding New York, and thus cutting New England from the other colonies. The alarm was general, and the militia were hurried to the theater of war as fast as they could be raised and equipped. Near the last of February, Capt. Timothy Childs led a company of 72 men to Ticonderoga. They served 47 days.

As Burgoyne advanced, fear of the Tories increased, and one company at least, refused to march until a little arrangement had been made with this dangerous element. It was at Montague, and the details are worth preserving as a picture of those times:—

Montague, Aug. 19, 1777:—Whereas there is a No. of persons in this Tⁿ who are suspected to be inimical to the United States of America, respecting y^e present bloody, distressing war with Great Britian. The persons named are as follows:

Bildad Billings,	Moses Smead,	Moses Root,
Ebenezer Billings,	Nims Smead,	Elisha Root,
Ephraim Marsh,	Moses Severance,	Joseph Root,
Ephraim Marsh, Jr.,	Ira Scott,	Oliver Root,
Daniel Lawrence,	Reuben Scott,	Jonathan Root.
Eleazer Marsh,	Capt. Joseph Root,
Ezra Smead,	Philip Root,

These men seem to have been scooped together by the soldiers and held under guard at Gunn's tavern while further arrangements were being made for their disposal.

There being this day assembled at y^e house of Lieut. N. Gunn a No. of people from Sunderland, Leverett, Ervingshire and Montague, being Previously assembled to March for y^e relief of our Army, but being greatly Apprehensive of danger ensuing if these persons (who refuse to go) are left at home armed, therefore it is unanimously determined y^t this body of people will not leave this town til y^e above-named persons will consent to y^e following Requisitions, viz:
 1st, First, each one shall deliver up to a Committee appointed for that purpose all weapons & ammunitions & every other warlike instrument y^t may be of Quick and dangerous use.

That they shall be confined absolutely within the bounds of his own farm, excepting the privilege of attending public worship & funerals within this district, except the owners of the grist mill, who may pass and repass Directly to and from y^e mill & serve y^e public undisturbed as usual.

That Capt. Root, Reuben Scott, Moses Severance, Ephraim Marsh, senior, Samuel Smead, Ebenezer Billings shall be confined to the boundary of their home lots. [If any go beyond these fixed limits] they shall be Closely Confined upon their own Cost. The reason for y^e above-mentioned Confinement is, their Inimical Conduct heretofore and their present declaration, viz., that they do not choose to be Independent of Great Britian as Declared by Congress, July 4, 1776. [It was also declared] dangerous to the United States that any of the above-named persons should keep a tavern or entertain people as such, which, if they do for y^e future, may depend upon it, to incur y^e displeasure of this body of people. [They also include in the above directions] Seth Taylor, Eleazer Scott and Martin Root, who are not present, suspected to be of the same sentiments.

Three days before this episode, another affair, similar in some of its features, had occurred in the valley of Walloomsack. Burgoyne's little side trip over Green Mountain had there come to an end. His General, Baum, had been killed. The Hessians who were known "to be inimical to the United States of America" had also been required to "deliver up all weapons & amunition & every other warlike instrument," and as a further precaution to "be confined absolutely within bounds." They were not even allowed to attend funerals, or go to mill or to meeting, as were their friends in Montague.

Had the news of the battle at Walloomsack—better known as the Battle of Bennington—reached "this body of the people" at Montague, and had they been assured that the invaders whom they were marching to meet were then safe in the clutches of Gen. Stark at Bennington, it is not unlikely that their Whig prescription would have been administered to the Tories all the same.

This matter of shutting up Tories was by no means all talk. Ephraim Wright writes from Northampton, Aug. 30th, that a lot of Highlander prisoners sent there, "had lately refused to labor, and conducted in such a manner that we found it necessary to put them in goal, and more than twenty Tories had been sent there for confinement, for whose reception the goal must be almost cleared." The Highlanders were scattered among the towns about there. Aug. 22d, one hundred and fifty Hessians, taken at Walloomsack, arrived there. Wright says they are contented and have gone to work, and he would like them to remain there.

When the news reached here of these Hessians marching towards New England and their fate, a company under Capt. Joseph Stebbins and Lieut. John Bardwell marched directly to Bennington. They were too late for the battle, the captured Hessians being already on exhibition in the meeting-house. From Bennington, Capt. Stebbins marched to Batten Kill and joined the regiment of Col. David Wells of Shelburne, in which was Maj. David Dickinson of our town. From thence they marched to Fort Edward to cut off the retreat of Burgoyne's army. While at Fort Edward, Capt. Stebbins called for volunteers, to follow him across the Hudson to surprise an outpost of Burgoyne near Fort Miller. Jeremiah Newton was one of the volunteers. He says they were successful, capturing "2 British prisoners with considerable entrenching tools, blankets, arms, &c., which were divided up among the volunteers." Later Capt. Stebbins joined Gates and was under the direct command of Benedict Arnold, and was in the battles of Stillwater and Bemis Heights.

Burgoyne on his attempted retreat lost his personal baggage, which was distributed amongst the captors. Part of this spoil is now in Memorial Hall—a linen towel, brought home by Capt. Stebbins, and a brass candlestick, brought home by Capt. Maxwell of Charlemont. Stebbins also brought back part of a book belonging to the commissary department of Burgoyne, which was probably captured at Fishkill on the 11th of October. The last entry made in it was Oct. 8th. This book contained a detailed account of rations given out to the Tory volunteers and camp assistants; six hundred and seventy-five names appearing on the pages preserved.

To Capt. McAlpine's corps of vol's,	128 men.
To Capt. McKay's corps of vol's,	206 "
To Lieut. Col. Jessup's corps of vol's,	159 "
To Lieut. Col. Peter's corps of vol's,	121 "
Under Capt. Wilcox,	29 "
Under Gen. Frazer,	2 "

A dozen other officers were charged from one to four rations each. This interesting document is also in Memorial Hall. An examination shows that it was utilized by the Continentals as an orderly book at "Head Quarters Fort Edward," Oct. 13th, 14th, 15th. On the 14th, Col. David Wells was field officer of the day, with 47 of his men on guard duty. On one of the blank pages Capt. Stebbins made up a pay roll of his company Oct. 18. A copy is given below, except that the names of the privates are given alphabetically; one hundred and fifteen miles' travel was allowed to each man.

The Deerfield company was dismissed Oct. 18th, the day after the surrender of Burgoyne. There was no longer any fear of the Tories, and those on parole at Montague might now be safely released.

August 14th, Capt. Timothy Childs, Lieut. Samuel Wells with fifty-three men, left Greenfield, marched thirty-four miles toward Bennington, then marched back again.

Col. Williams and son were still in close confinement, and in November, William, son of the Colonel, petitioned the Council for a review of their case. By a resolve of December 13th, 1777, they were released on condition they give a bond of £3000 each, that the Colonel would not leave his home lot, except to go to meeting Sunday, and the son not to go out of the town, and neither to correspond with, or in any way to aid the enemy. Soon after his enlargement, Col. Williams sent a petition to the General Court, asking for the right of citizenship for himself and son, and that if they might not be allowed freedom here, they might have freedom to leave the State. This petition was dismissed—prisoners at home, they would not be enemies abroad.

Here follows the roll of Capt. Stebbins's company, spoken of above. William Chamberlain of Deerfield, killed at the battle of Stillwater, was probably under Capt. Stebbins:—

Capt. Joseph Stebbins,	Sergt. Daniel Slate,	Corp. Samuel Gladding,
Lt. John Bardwell,	Sergt. Samuel Turner,	Corp. Jason Parmenter,
Sergt. Geo. Herbert,	Corp. David Hoyt,	Drummer, James Warren,

June 3d, 1777, Deerfield received of the General Court £42, 1 s, 3d, as allowance for the mileage of fifteen men to Fairfield, and ten men to Albany, for transporting baggage and canteens. In October, £9, 15 s for transporting rations and baggage to Manchester.

1778. February 14th, Col. David Field, then sixty-two years old, tendered his resignation as colonel of the regiment, representing that the "frequent calls for the militia to turn out, and I not able to head the regiment under my command," makes it expedient, and he hopes the command may devolve upon some one in the "Bloom of Life." His resignation was accepted by the government.

The Committee of Safety, &c., chosen at the March meeting were Ensign "Joseph Barnard, Jeremiah Nims, David Saxton, Eldad Bardwell, Capt. Joseph Stebbins, Isaac Parker, Lt. Thomas Bardwell, Mr. John Sheldon and Capt. Nathan Frary." David Saxton was elected chairman and Isaac Parker, clerk. The only business of the Committee recorded this year was looking towards the care of the confiscated estate of Nathaniel Dickinson.

"Lt. Adonijah Taylor and others" petitioned to be set off to Whately, but their petition was dismissed. Taylor lived at Sanderson's Glen and owned a mill there.

April 23d, a town meeting was called to act upon a form of government which had been framed and submitted to the people, the original source of all power, and they assembled accordingly to exercise the highest prerogative of freemen. The new constitution was read by the town clerk, "Paragraph by Paragraph." After due time spent in discussion, the meeting was adjourned for ten days, "that the Inhabitants of this Town might have time to consider it Maturely," and after another adjournment for sixteen days, the meeting dissolved. This evidence of careful consideration is all that is found relating to the affair.

"May 20, voted that y^e Selectmen be empowered to hire £210 for y^e purpose of procuring those men to go into y^e service of y^e United States, called for from this Town agreeable to an Act of y^e Great and Gen. Court of this State y^e 20th of April last."

This act provided that towns might pay a bounty of £30, to be repaid by the State. By this vote it appears that our quota under this call was seven men. But another call followed closely. June 8th, Joseph Stebbins, Sen., sixty years old, was drafted to serve nine months in the Continental army, "or pay a fine of twenty pounds within twenty-four hours." The receipt of Capt. Thomas Dickinson of June 9th, shows that the fine was paid. June 17th, the town was called upon to furnish for the army thirty-four pairs of shoes and stockings and thirty-four shirts.

December 7th, the attempt to repress the irrepressible minister was continued by a vote not to raise his salary or to furnish him firewood.

On the petition of Paul Hawks a road was laid "from y^e road from Wapping to y^e Town, across New Field to y^e road leading to Hatfield." This is the south Wapping road across South Meadows.

1779. This was a dark year for the Revolutionists. The impetus given by the actual outbreak against tyrannical taxation had spent its force. Now it was steady pulling with a heavy load, and it required the utmost courage and wisdom in the Patriot leaders to sustain the cause. The operations of agriculture had been seriously interrupted by the heavy draft of able-bodied men for the war. The burden of taxation was heavy and increasing. The depreciation of the currency had unsettled all business transactions. The weak-hearted Whigs were growing faint, the indifferent weary of the war, and both were tending towards a "peace at any price" party. In this condition of affairs the Tories rallied and came again to the front. Town meetings were frequent and stormy. The Committee of Safety, on which so much depended, was made up of Capt. Joseph Stebbins, Eldad Bardwell, Simeon Harvey, Abner Mitchell and Elihu Field.

The annual March meeting went off quietly, the Whigs filling the leading offices, and the usual routine business for the year was done. At an adjourned meeting the Tories got control and tried to undo all that was done at the first meeting. The first motion was "to see if the Town will Reconsider the votes passed on the first of March." Not succeeding in this, some of the officers chosen then were "excused," additions were made to other boards, and by one plan or another Tories were substituted for Whigs in the principal offices. Some of the Whig incumbents resigned in disgust at their Tory associates. Justin Hitchcock was chosen town clerk. He says of the election, "As I attended public worship, and led the singing, I thought the Tories might have some hope of gaining me to their side by this mark of distinction." This was a true conjecture, and he was retained only so long as this hope continued, when he went out at the "same door he came in at." An attempt was made and defeated to raise money by selling the "Sequestered Land north of David Saxton's." This is the square in front of the Ephraim Williams home lot called for many years the town garden, and is a remnant of the ministerial lot remaining unsold in 1760. There were three adjournments of this meeting, and the Tories acted the part of obstructionists all through. This line of conduct, as we shall see, eventually came to an abrupt ending. At a meeting, July 5th, the Tories had everything their own way, also at another, July 12th, when a committee was chosen to wait upon the captains and lieutenants and desire them,— 1st, to lay before the Town an account of what each person hath Done or hath Paid for Supporting the War by Drafts fines or Gifts.

2d, To what use they have put the money received in consequence.

3d, the names of those who are subjected by Law to a Draft for Personal service & the names of those who are subjected to a Draft for Real or Personal estate.

This, and all other action at this meeting, was aimed at the Whigs, but the Tories got nothing for their pains. The committee reported at an adjourned meeting that these officers "neglected to comply with the Desire of the Town, Notwithstanding it is yet the opinion of the Town, the aforesaid Desire is reasonable and just, yet voted that this meeting be Dissolved."

August 12th, Col. David Field was chosen a delegate to the Constitutional Convention to be holden Sept. 1st.

A convention held at Concord in July, recommended that county conventions be called to fix prices of the common commodities in reference to the fluctuating currency. The town refused to take the matter into consideration.

September 6th, another town meeting was held and Samuel McCall was chosen a delegate to a convention to be held at Northampton, September 9th. This was the only business of the meeting. The Tories could not prevent a delegate being chosen, but they could cry out against the doings of the convention. At a meeting, Sept. 20th, "The question was put to see if the Town will approve the doings of the late county Convention, held at Northampton for the purpose of regulating the Prices of the several species and Necessaries of Life, and it passed in the Negative." To make this stronger it was then voted to "Disapprove of the said Doings." This was the only business of this meeting.

The following certificate shows something of the supervision over the Tories in their business transactions.

These may certify that Mr. Elisha Harrington of Weston has liberty to pass to Deerfield in the County of Hampshire with a Teeme Loaded with one Hogshead and tarse of Salt, and one tarse of oile, it being one of the Loads that Mr. John Williams had Liberty to Proceed to Deerfield by a committee of the General Court.

Weston, Oct. 11, 1779.

JOSIAH SMITH,	} Selectmen of Weston.
ISAAC JONES,
JOSEPH ROBERTS,

At a meeting Dec. 6th, a committee was chosen to procure Mr. Ashley his firewood. "Voted to raise a Sufficient sum of money to defray the Town Debts and £600 for contingencies," thus showing pluck enough to shoulder their burdens, heavy as they were, and to pay as they went. The modern curse of loading up with debt was not then so fashionable. "Voted to allow the People at Wapping for Building a school house there, three Pounds, to be augmented at the rate of twenty-four for one & will be Seventy-two Pound." This shows the exact value of the "fiat money" of Congress at this date.

Men known to have served short terms in the army this year are:—

Amsden, Simeon	Harding, Abijah	Ranney, Frederick
Barnard, Samuel	Kendall, John	Stebbins, Lt. Col. Jos.
Faxon, Allen	Nash, Moses	Stone, Elias
Faxon, Thomas	Newton, John	Taylor, Eliphalet (3 years)

1780. At the annual meeting, March 6th, Lieut. John Bardwell, Isaac Parker, Thos. W. Dickinson, Elihu Field and Abner Mitchell were chosen Committee of Safety, &c. There was great difficulty in getting anybody to collect the taxes. Finally a bargain was made with John Saxton to collect them for two per cent.

April 22d, the General Court directed the Committee of Safety to lease the estate of Nathaniel Dickinson in such a manner as will be for the best interest of the State. June 3d, they were directed not to lease it, but to keep it fenced, that it may be ready for pasturing cattle bought for the use of the army, "to be used by the purchasing Commissary as he shall think proper."

May 15th, a meeting was held to act on the new Constitution. The Clerk was directed to read the instrument "Paragraph by Paragraph, pausing between them." After this a committee of nine was chosen "to peruse the Constitution or Form of Government now presented to the people of this State for their Approbation or Disapprobation, and make such objections to it, as they think ought to be made, and Lay the same before the Town at an adjourned meeting." Met the 25th, when the paper was again read by the Clerk. June 1st, the operation was repeated, with another adjournment.

June 5th, voted not to have the Clerk read the Constitution again. Doubtless they had it all by heart, at this meeting. Voted, 14 to 9, "not to accept the third article in the Declaration of Rights." Voted unanimously that "in the Qualifications of the person eligible to the office of Governor Instead of his Declaring himself to be of the Christian Religion, it should be that he Declare himself of the Protestant Religion." They also objected that fifteen years was too long a period before the Constitution should be revised, and proposed eight years instead. In other respects it was satisfactory. The freeholders of Deerfield having done their duty with great deliberation the meeting dissolved. It is to be presumed from the small vote that the Tories held themselves aloof from the meeting.

June 2d, the General Court had ordered the State quota of soldiers to be raised by draft. The quota of Deerfield was thirteen. June 19th, it was "voted to choose a committee to procure the men now required of the Town with full power to procure by hire at the charge of the Town," and the "commissioned officers of both militia companies" were made the committee.

"Voted to reconsider the two last votes." The business was then divided between two committees and finally left in much the same condition as first voted.

Monday, Sept. 4th, 1780, was the first election under the new Constitution. The money qualification for a voter was a freehold estate worth sixty pounds and an annual income of three pounds. The vote for State officers was so small that it may safely be assumed the Tories did not vote. The vote for Governor stood:—

John Hancock,	-	-	-	-	19
James Bowdoin,	-	-	-	-	1
Joseph Hawley,	-	-	-	-	2

For Lieut. Governor:—

Azor Orne,	-	-	-	-	20
------------	---	---	---	---	----

“For Counsellors & Senators,” Joseph Hawley and John Bliss each 19; Salah Barnard, 15; Caleb Strong, 9; John Hastings and Noah Goodman, each 8; Timothy Danielson and Timothy Robinson, each 4; Samuel Mather, 2.

Sept. 4th. Voted to supply the articles of clothing now required for the army by the General Court, and individuals were invited to bring them in.

At a meeting Oct. 16th, “Voted to comply with the Resolve of the Gen Court of Sep^r 25, 1780.”

“Voted that the Assessors be directed to Assess the Town of Deerfield Immediately upon the Last Valuation list, the Sum of Ten Thousand Pounds for the purpose of enabling the Town to purchase the Beef now required of the Town by the Gen Court.” Eliphalet Dickinson, Amzi Childs and Lieut. John Bardwell were made a committee to buy the beef.

Men known to have served in the army this year, on short terms; men marked * were in for the war, those marked † deserted:—

Amsden, Simeon	Fletcher, John*	Newton, Alpheus
Batchelder, Jonathan	Frery, Nathan	Pratt, Joseph
Buckman, Benjamin*	Harding, Abiel	Pratt, Samuel
Cleaveland, Henry †	Hinsdale, John	Smith, Elijah

Jesse Billings, William Starr from Boston, William Loveridge and Jonathan Chapman from Colchester, Conn., who afterwards became citizens, all probably served this year. Lieut. T. W. Dickinson was at West Point under his old commander when the treason of Arnold was discovered and Washington came there.

Ministerial Affairs. June 19th, the town "Voted to hire some person to preach the Gospel in this Town for y^e present." Dea. Samuel Childs, Dea. Asahel Wright and Jeremiah Nims were chosen a committee for that purpose, "with Discretionary power to hire one for as Long a time as they think proper."

In absence of proof to the contrary I assumed and said in the "History of the Connecticut Valley" that the above vote of the town in taking the pulpit and putting it in charge of a committee with unlimited power seemed to prove that the connection between Mr. Ashley and the town had been dissolved. It certainly had that appearance, but evidence to the contrary has been found. Dea. Justin Hitchcock, a contemporary member of the church, says, in his MS. memoirs:—

There was an attempt made early in the spring [of 1780] to bring the unhappy controversy subsisting between him and a large part of the church and people to a settlement, and Mr. Ashley and the aggrieved part of the church chose a mutual Council which met in May & after sitting a number of days found they were equally divided and could do nothing, and the dispute remained as it was until Aug. 30, [28] when Mr. Ashley died.

Pliny Arms, in a lyceum lecture about 1840, says the difficulty between Mr. Ashley and a part of the church,—

Was submitted to Joseph Dana, Joseph Perry and Robert Breck, chosen by Mr. Ashley, and Joseph Bellamy, James Lockwood and Simeon Backus, chosen by the aggrieved members. Mr. Ashley had Wm. Williams, who married his daughter, as counsel, and the aggrieved brethren John Trumbull the historian of Connecticut. They had a ten days' session but never came to a result.

I cannot tell how far this list of the members of the Council is correct, but there are evident errors in it. Joseph Dana was not a member. I have a paper certified to as being a copy of one on the files of the Council by "James Dana, Scribe." James Lockwood died in 1772. Samuel Lockwood may have been the man. The advocate could not have been "John Trumbull the Historian," for the historian was Benjamin. It may have been John Trumbull, the poet, author of McFingal, &c. He was also a lawyer who had been in the office of John Adams at Boston, and was an ardent Whig. He was a classmate of Rev. Joseph Lyman of Hatfield, who was also a Whig and figured prominently in the preparation of this case on the Whig side.

Packard speaks of this affair in his "History of Churches in Franklin County." He says "the council sat ten days," but gives nothing more. Neither the town records nor those of the church contain the slightest allusion to the affair. Extended research has failed to bring to light a single syllable concerning the action of the Council or the questions before it.

A scrap of an account kept by David Saxton and a memorandum of Ensign Joseph Barnard show that great preparations were made for the hearing, and these give a clue to the actors. The expense of the preparation was borne by the following named men:—

Ensign Joseph Barnard,	Amzi Childs,	Col. David Field,
Samuel Barnard,	Samuel Childs,	Capt. Nathan Frary,
Zebediah Graves,	Lt. Joseph Barnard,	David Saxton,
Jeremiah Nims,	Joseph Mitchell,	Maj. Salah Barnard.

Ens. Barnard acted as treasurer. A paper in his handwriting, without date, but clearly referring to this occasion, gives the financial side of their operations:—

Memorandum of charges that have been gone into by the Company in preparing their Charges to lay before the late Ecclesiastical Council—viz.

To Lt Barnard for keeping Missurs Hopkins, Lothrop and their Deligates, 36 meals	36s—Keeping yr horses 12 nights	12s—12 lodgings 3s.	Sugar for mixed drinks 9d	£ 2 11 9
To Mr. I. [saac] Parker, Keeping Mr Trumbull and others	67 meals	67s—18 lodgings 4s 6.	Sugar 1s 6	3 13 0

Mr. J. Smead,				140
Each of the twelve named above, $407,				4,884
[Total in Continental currency.]				$5,127

One of the papers used before the Council was a "declaration" made by one of the church members, that some ten years before he had repeated "an ugly, false, abusive story about Mr. Ashley." "I did not receive it as truth," he says, and "I am heartily sorry I ever mentioned it, tho' not conscious of any evil design, I feel that this is not to do as I would be done by." He asks the forgiveness of "the Rev. pastor and brethren of the church." This paper was endorsed "May 25, 1780. A true copy from the files.

Attest: JAMES DANA, Scribe."

Dea. Hitchcock says, "not long after Mr. Ashley's death the parties became united;" but it will be seen there were other causes operating to bring about this union. Mr. Ashley was prostrated by sickness in May or June, from which he never recovered. The intentions of the town in assuming the charge of the pulpit June 19th, can only be conjectured. The remarkable Dark Day of May 19th occurred while this Council was in session. It filled the superstitious with sore alarm, and added to the gloom overshadowing the distracted town.

At the time Mr. Ashley died there had been no settlement of accounts between him and the town since 1774, when the town voted his receipt in settlement was "unsatisfactory," and very little had been paid him in the heat of the war. His executors brought a large claim against the town. In December, 1782, Joseph Stebbins, Seth Catlin and Asahel Wright were chosen a committee to examine this claim. They reported as being due to Mr. Ashley the sum of £787, 17s, 6d in silver, as arrearage for salary, firewood and rent of town lot. The town voted to pay that amount, which was accepted by the executors. The town also voted to refund to those who had paid any minister's taxes during this period the full amount so paid, thus assuming the whole amount of the salary in a lump and equalizing the burden by a new assessment. This action of the town shows that Mr. Ashley had been hardly and unjustly dealt with by withholding that support to which he had a legal claim. It also shows that the irritating cause removed, the town was willing to make full reparation.

An examination of the following tables will exhibit the sore financial condition under which our patriot sires fought for and conquered an Independence from a nation whose coffers were overflowing with gold.

These large sums called for in taxes represent the depreciated currency of the time—the Bills of Credit issued by the Continental Congress. It fell off in value until it became only waste paper. There was no end to the trouble and loss occasioned thereby. Prices rose correspondingly. It hardly mattered how much was paid for any commodity so long as the buyer could pay in Continental money. The sooner it was out of his hands the better, as its value fell off month by month. In paying debts, making contracts, and settling accounts there was constant friction, and it became necessary to fix by law, a basis for all business transactions. In 1780 an act was passed by the General Court, fixing a scale of depreciation to which all debtors and creditors were obliged to conform, and establishing a standard for the settlement of all business transactions and engagements from January 1st, 1777, to April, 1780. This scale is given below.

This has been well called "the time that tried men's souls." It must have equally tried their patience, their patriotism, their mathematics and their pockets. The table below shows how much in Continental bills one dollar in gold or silver would buy on the first day of any given month:—

1781. This was a year of town meetings. Eleven were held under warrant and eight by adjournment. It was a critical period in the political history of the town. There was a hot fight between the Whig and Tory parties for the ascendancy. The former had been weakened by the loss of the patriots who had gone to fight the battles of the country, and the latter were comparatively stronger. Hitherto the Whigs had generally carried the day.

The town meeting campaign opened with the year. At a meeting January 1st, Jonathan Arms, a Tory, was chosen moderator. The business of the meeting was to see if the town would take measures to procure the men and beef called for from this town by a resolve of the General Court, Dec. 4th, 1780. A committee of seven, made up from both parties, was chosen "to hire the men," and the meeting adjourned to January 8th. At that date the men had not been procured, and the committee were instructed to,— Try farther to get them & report to the adjourned meeting how they can hire them.

The Question was put to see if the Town will procure the beef now required of the Town by a Resolve of the Gen. Court of Dec. 4, 1780 & it pass^d in the Negative. There was then an adjournment to January 22.

Monday, Jan'y 22d, then met, & the Question being put to see if the Town will Instruct the Committee chosen to procure the men to offer to them a certain limited price, & it pass^d in the affirmative. The vote being disputed the Yeas & Nays were taken.

The result was thirty-six to thirty-six, the moderator casting the tie vote for the Tory side. The committee was then instructed to pay for each man engaging for three years ten pounds hard money at the beginning of each year, and voted to raise £140 hard money for the purpose—a Whig measure. The vote passed on the 8th not to furnish beef was reconsidered, and “voted that the Town will procure the Beef required of the Town.” A Tory committee was chosen for the work, who were not expected to comply with the vote, and they didn’t. Two of the committee to supply the men having resigned, two others were “excused from serving.” These were all Whigs. The committee was then filled with Tories and the meeting dissolved.

But the day’s work had only begun. The success of Washington in the field, the open alliance of France, and the manifest sympathy of Spain and other Continental powers, had led Great Britain to make an effort for a peaceful settlement of the questions now depending on the issue of the war. Commissioners were sent to our shores, with full power to grant amnesty for the past, and allow all claims but that of Independence. They came too late! Congress was willing to treat for a settlement, but only on the basis of Independence. The Tories, however, were ready and anxious to welcome the offer and settle the dispute on easy terms, and a new town meeting had been called here the same day, Jan. 22d. The business was,—

To see if the Town will Instruct their Representative in the General Court of this Commonwealth to repair to said court & there use his Influence that the s^d Court will Direct their Delegates in the Continental Congress to Endeav^r that some Immediate overtures be made to the Court of Great Britian (or persons deputed by s^d Court) in order to Effect an accommodation Settlement & Peace between Great Britian & the United States of America without further effusion of Blood.

There is no clue to the debate on the resolution, which was doubtless hot and personal, but the article was adopted by the following yea and nay vote, which has been arranged alphabetically:—

Voted that the Clerk be Directed to serve Mr. David Saxton, the Representative for this Town in the Gen. Court of this Commonwealth with a Copy of the Proceedings of this & the last meeting.

The Tories were now in high feather. But the end was not yet. Had the trio who took the lead in this matter the prescience to discern the result of these proceedings, the event would probably have been different. The instructions were laid before the General Court by the Representative. The Court does not quite understand the import of this document, and sends a rather pressing invitation to some who are supposed to know, to come and enlighten them; as appears by the Resolution below. Other information beside the instructions had evidently reached the Court. A hearing was had before a committee of both houses, of which Samuel Osgood, a man well known in the military and civil service in this State and New York, was chairman. He reported:—

Whereas it appears by Instructions given the Representative of the Town of Deerfield, and also by representations made to the Gen'l Court, that Divers persons, Subjects of this Commonwealth, are Disaffected to the Independence of the United States in General, & of this in particular, and are artfully propagating the most dangerous principles within the same, and are using their utmost efforts to prevent furnishing supplies of Men and provision for the army of the United States, and to withdraw the good people of this Commonwealth from their allegiance to the government thereof.

Therefore the committee recommend that the attorney general prosecute at law all such offenders, in order that they "may receive the punishment due their crimes." This action followed the report:—

Whereas, the Instructions given to the Representative of the Town of Deerfield are expressed in such manner as renders it doubtful what the Intention of the Inhabitants of said Town of Deerfield is, relative to the Subject Matter of said Instructions, therefore

Resolved, that Seth Catlin, Gent., John Williams, Gent., and Jonathan Ashley, Esq., all of Deerfield, in the County of Hampshire, be, and they are hereby ordered, forthwith to attend the General Court to make answer to such Questions as shall be put to them relative to their views and designs in such Instructions.

Feb. 10th, 1781, the Resolution was accepted in the Senate and concurred in by the House and signed by John Hancock, Governor. The sergeant-at-arms came for the men and took them to the Bar of the House. There is a tradition that the prisoners consulted Simeon Strong, who advised them to "think five minutes" before answering any question, and that John Williams literally followed the advice, taking that time for reflection, when asked his name, residence, &c. If this be true, it probably did not help his case. At all events he had ample time for reflection before the matter was finally disposed of. From the examination of the case by the General Court it appeared that,—

From the particular time at which these instructions were given, that there are just grounds of suspicion that the said John Williams, Seth Catlin and Jonathan Ashley are unfriendly to the Independence of the United States.

Therefore Resolved, That the Governor, with the advice of the Council be, and he hereby is requested to lay these men under such restrictions, as that the Commonwealth receive no injury from them or either of them.

They were accordingly put under bonds to appear at the Superior Court at Springfield in September, 1781, to answer to such matters as may be brought against them "touching their conduct in the war with Great Britian."

To return to Deerfield. March 5th was the annual town meeting for the choice of officers. The Tories were in a majority and carried things with a high hand. The principal offices were all filled with Tories; and, as if in open defiance of the Governor and Council, Jonathan Ashley was chosen town clerk and also treasurer. In the year 1779, the Tories had chosen Justin Hitchcock town clerk. He had acted with the Whigs, but, says Mr. Hitchcock, "I had reason to suppose they hoped to gain me to their party." He was now dropped as a bad investment,

At an adjourned meeting, March 19th, many of the Tory officers resigned and others were chosen in their places, and the meeting again adjourned to the 27th. But a new meeting had been called for this same, March 19th. The business was:—

To see if the Town will choose a Delegate or Delegates to meet the Delegates from the several towns in the county, in a Convention to be holden at the House of Col. Murry in Hatfield on the 27th of this month.

This was to be a Whig Convention and “the Question was put to see if the Town will pay any regard to the Article in the Warrant & it Pass^d in the Negative,” and the meeting was dissolved.

At the adjourned meeting, March 27th, there was a general stampede by the Tory officers. Every one resigned, and a full set of Whig town officers was chosen. To explain this action of the Tories, we shall take another journey to Boston. Prominent Whigs of Deerfield had been eye-witnesses to the treason of Arnold and the execution of Maj. Andre, a few months before. They knew the danger to the cause of liberty that lay in loyalty to the king, and treason to the State, and they were not disposed to sit quietly under Tory rule. The narrow escape at West Point made them vigilant, and they appealed to a higher power at the capital, to take a hand in the game at Deerfield. The result was a “lone hand” by the new partner. On the news reaching Boston of the rampant conduct of the Tories at our town meeting March 5th, the following action was had in the House:—

Whereas it appears to this court that some part of the inhabitants of Deerfield from disaffection to the American cause and from a wicked design of affording aid to Great Britian in subjugating the American States, have upon all occasions embarrassed the execution of the Measures of the government for maintaining the Independence of America and for the support of this Commonwealth.

Whereas David Field, Esq., and a number of other Inhabitants of said Town well affected to the American Cause of Liberty and virtue, have by their petitions represented their readiness to comply with the requisitions of this Court made upon the town of Deerfield, and the great difficulties that arise to them, from the conduct of the persons afore mentioned, and pray for Relief.

The relief came on call. An Act was passed that no person who refuses to take the Oath of Allegiance should be allowed to vote or hold office; and the town clerk was authorized to administer the oath. March 10th, an order was issued by John Hancock, the Governor, that John Williams, Seth Catlin and Jonathan Ashley should be confined in Suffolk county gaol at Boston. This explains the stampede above noted, and this lesson was enough. There was no more trouble in Deerfield town meetings about voting supplies for the Continental army. Every requisition was promptly filled thereafter.

April 2d, 1781, was election day. Hancock had every vote cast for governor, and there was but one "scattering" vote on the Whig ticket for councilors.

A warrant was duly issued and served for a town meeting, May 17th, "to choose a Representative to the General Court to be holden the last Wednesday in this month," but of this meeting not a scrap of record is found. Meanwhile our townsmen languishing in the prison at Boston are making urgent appeals for enlargement, as we see below:—

To his Excellency John Hancock, Esq., governor of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and the Honourable Council of the Commonwealth aforesaid:

The petition of Seth Catlin, Jona. Ashley and John Williams, all of Deerfield in the County of Hampshire, now confined in the common gaol in the County of Suffolk, in pursuance of an order of His Excellency the governor, Bearing date y^e tenth of March current Humbly sheweth that your petitioners are separated from their families, having left them unexpectedly and in circumstances that render them peculiarly ill accommodated, the said Seth Catlin having a wife and six daughters, and one son of 8 years, who almost Daily depend on his Daily Earnings for their Support who have no Rescours to Obtain the Shortest Relief but by his Immediate presence.

The said Jona. Ashley hath a wife and four daughters, the oldest of which is but seven years of age, who are in constant need of his Personal Attention for their Support and Sustenance, & at present totally unfurnished & without any male help, excepting a Servant boy about 13 years old—An aged mother, by y^e late death of his father, became in a Great Degree Dependant on him & whose mind for many years past hath been in Such a Situation as produces on his mind the most Alarming Apprehensions lest this Additional Trouble hurry her to acts too shocking to express—Besides he has been for years, Subject to Disorders which frequently and Allarmingly attack him & a Return of which he is in daily apprehension of from the want of exercise and a free air most essential to his health—being frequently and generally attacked with y^e Cholic.

The said Williams hath left a wife and Small children without supplies of some necessary articles even to this time, without means to procure these supplies & without a male person in the family more than 8 years old—He hath likewise a slender constitution & small share of health at y^e Best—now much impaired & attacked in a Degree & manner alarming to his Fears without a possibility of using y^e proper means for his recovery in his present Situation.

Also, y^e care of an Aged Aunt, (Mrs. Silliman,) & her family, who was obliged to abandon her Dwelling at Fairfield, in Connecticut, has principally devolved on him.

Your petitioners for these & many other Reasons, Humbly hope your Excellency & Honors will prescribe a mode whereby the safety of the community may be preserved, & your petitioners be restored to their Liberties & Families again—and as in Duty bound will ever pray

SETH CATLIN

[Boston] Mch 23, 1781
[Endorsed] In Council Mch 24 1781
Petition not Granted.

The allusion to Madam Silliman was not a happy one under the circumstances and could hardly help his case in an appeal for sympathy. She had been driven from Fairfield, Conn., when that town was burned by the infamous Gov. Tryon and his legion of New York Tories. Mrs. Silliman was daughter of the "Redeemed Captive;" a widow, seventy-one years old, when her house at Fairfield was burned by the brutal Tryon, July 8th, 1779. After a month more in prison, Esq. Ashley sent another petition to the Governor and Council, in which he,—

Humbly sheweth that your Petitioner is now & hath been for some time past in very ill health—That he hath waited some time in the Hope his Sickness would abate, or be removed, but on the contrary is increasing on him to a degree that renders it (as he apprehends) absolutely necessary for the recovery of his health to have a more free air and quiet Situation than is possible in his present confinement.

Your petitioner therefore prays your Excellency & Honors to grant him the Liberty of the gaol yard & to take the air, & of lodging in the gaolers house—Or such other indulgence as to you shall seem meet & as in Duty bound will ever pray— JONA ASHLEY

Boston April 23 1781

The same date Thomas Williams, physician, certifies to the impaired health of the prisoner and his need of fresh air. Upon these representations the Executive directs the Sheriff to "grant Jonathan Ashley the liberty of the gaol yard and of lodging in the gaolers house, for his better convenience in his ill state of Health." Encouraged by the success of Ashley's effort the three prisoners united in another petition to the Governor and Council which,— Humbly sheweth that in Addition to the Reasons offered—March 23, and to the obvious Personal Motives, which again prompt us to address you—are urged by the irresistable impulses of sympathy, for our unoffending wives and children, whose circumstances, when we left them, being peculiarly inconvenient, we fear have now become almost intolerable.

We beg leave further to observe, as we each of us depend upon Agriculture for the support of ourselves and families, we cannot revolve in our minds that it is now seed time, & think of our wives & children & immediate dependants, without being stung with the most anxious Apprehensions of the Consequences of our longer Confinement to them—which besides prostrating the expectations of our harvest—will we fear, overburthen that charity & Humanity of their Friends to which we know they must be indebted for a large share of the Comforts they enjoy—

Induced by these and Many other Reasons, and ever willing & wishing that the Laws of the Commonwealth may be made the criterion of our Conduct—We pray that it may consist with these, and the safety of our community we may be restored to our Liberty & Families again & that Your Excellency & Honors will prescribe a mode whereby we may obtain this privilidge.—And as in Duty bound will ever pray.

Boston April 24 1781

[Endorsed]

Council Chamber, Boston, April 25, 1781.

Advised that the prayer of the petitioners be so far granted, that the abovesaid persons now confined in the common gaol in Boston, as persons dangerous to this Commonwealth, be admitted to Bail in the sum of £2000 of the New Currency each, with two sufficient Surties, Conditioned that each of them make their personal appearance at the next Suprem Court of Judicature, Court of Assize and General Goal Delivery, to be holden at Springfield—and in the mean Time to be on their good Behaviour towards all the good people of this Commonwealth & particularly that they will not do or say any thing to the Injury of this or the United States, against the Independence thereof, and abide the order of the said Court and not depart without a License, and the Sheriff of the County of Suffolk be directed to take bonds accordingly, payable to the Treasurer of the Commonwealth.

By some oversight the papers in this case were not filed in the office of the Attorney General and no prosecution was made against our townsmen at the September Court. That would doubtless have been the end of the matter but for certain action of the town yet to be noticed.

Esq. Ashley was not a man of robust constitution and the turn affairs had now taken gave him a shock from which he never rallied. He died within four months after his release. Williams also suffered severely in health and the news of his condition reaching his brother—a captain in the English army—called forth the following letter to Daniel Jones, the brother-in-law of both. The writer was a lawyer in Keene, N. H., when the war broke out, and at once joined the enemy:—

NEW YORK, 26th March 1782

Dear Sir I have within these few weeks heard various reports from the country respecting my brother Jack which have given me great uneasiness and I am at this Time from the Reports in very great Doubt whether he is alive and beg you would take the very earliest opportunity to let me know—I am very desirous of having an interview with you or some other of my friends that I may get a particular account of the situation of my relations and Friends in the Country—for which purpose I would propose that you come to Norwalk or any Place opposite the refugee Post, and I make no Doubt but you can get a Flag to come to me, or that I can come to you—I wish you would write me immediately whether you will comply or not, and appoint Time and Place that I may not be out of the way. if you have not an Opportunity of sending directly to me please enclose a Letter to the care of Col^o Wm Tyng Comm'y of Forage at Brooklyn Long Island—

I have seen your brothers within a few days—they are all very well, as are all your Friends here—I have no particular news to write, so conclude with a sincere wish that the above proposal may be complied with, and with proper Salutations to all relations and acquaintances
Yours Affectionately ELIJAH WILLIAMS

Daniel Jones was a lawyer at Hinsdale, N. H., and if, as I suspect, he was son of Col. Elisha Jones of Weston, he had five brothers in the Tory contingent of the English army.

These cases have been given at length as a good illustration of this particular phase of the contest for independence. The men involved were not worse, nor better, than their fellows. They were honorable men, of good character, and of good repute; men who had done good service for the town and country. Nothing is heard against them except their political opinions and actions. They were Tories on principle—men loyal to their King and what they considered the best government. They had the courage of their convictions and suffered the consequences with what patience they could. But the logic of events was against them. They rebelled against a revolution, and the power of suppression was right at hand, and not three thousand miles over the sea. This was a fact they could not ignore—a barred door in their way. The temperature of a hot political zeal will naturally fall within the cold walls of a damp dungeon, especially in a case like this, when the unwilling conviction was forcing itself upon the martyrs that theirs would soon be a lost cause and they without a country. With the fall of Cornwallis soon after, this conviction became a certainty. It then behooved them to take new bearings and observations—to adapt themselves with the best grace they could to the new conditions. They appear to have done this in good faith, and before the next March meeting the survivors had taken the oath of allegiance, were in peaceful possession of all their rights, and henceforth took an active part in the affairs of the town. One prime cause of personal contention, the breach in the church, was removed by the death of Mr. Ashley, and harmony in church and State was soon restored.

In Greenfield this happy condition of affairs had been brought about the year before. April 4th, 1780, the church,—

Voted that it is our Duty to subject ourselves to the Authority of the united States of America, So long as Providence shall continue us under it

2 that we will attend upon the Sacrament of the Lords Supper as soon as Provision can be made therefor, all being willing to overlook the offences that had taken place respecting public and civil affairs.

Noah Allen seems to have objected to this fraternal measure, but the church was bound to have harmony if they had to use force for it, and Capt. Timothy Childs and Moses Bascom were appointed to “deal with him.” Another bone of contention may have been compromised by the following vote: “That we will sing half y^e time with reading” i. e., “deaconing.”

Perhaps the sequel to Mr. Williams’s enforced sojourn in Boston may as well be told now as ever. May 13th, 1783, in the flush of the era of good feeling, he was chosen Representative to the General Court. When he appeared to take his seat his right to do so was questioned on the ground of his Tory antecedents. The subject was referred to a committee to investigate the charges brought against him. All the facts relating to his arrest and imprisonment were brought up, and by a vote of sixty to forty-three he was excluded from the House.

A precept was issued for a new election at Deerfield and a meeting for that purpose was held July 31st. It seems the people took the exclusion of the man of their choice in high dudgeon and he was forthwith reelected by every vote save one that was cast. That vote was doubtless his own. He appeared at the next session of the General Court and was again declared "a person incapable of being a Representative of the Town of Deerfield," and was sent back by a vote of seventy-eight to thirty-six.

The attention of the Attorney General, Robert Treat Paine, being called to the case and the facts and papers being laid before him, Mr. Williams was indicted for sedition at the September term of the Supreme Court at Springfield, 1783. He was arraigned before the Supreme Court at Northampton, May, 1784. He here pleaded that the offense was committed before the peace with Great Britain and that the provisions in the 6th article of the Treaty of Peace covered his case and freed him from the complaint. The court so ruling, he was discharged.

The Deerfield people were not content to let the matter rest here, and May 12th, 1784, he was a third time chosen Representative, by every vote cast, save one. Once more he put in an appearance at the State House and his right to a seat was again challenged. A copy of the indictment of September 1783, was presented by the objectors. A committee was appointed who were furnished with a copy of the proceedings of the court of May, 1784. They reported in his favor and he finally was allowed to take his seat.

To return to the narrative. July 23d, 1781, the town voted to give those who will enlist three months a bounty of $10 and the same per month in hard money. Voted to raise £33 for bounty money and £125 for buying beef required "by a Resolve of the Gen. Court June 22, 1781." Sept. 6th, arrangements were made by the town for furnishing the clothing for the army under the last call. Dec. 3d, the Tory committee chosen in January to procure beef were now directed to perform that duty and to deliver the quota called for at Northampton, Dec. 10th. This direction was doubtless obeyed.

Soldiers for the Army. It became more difficult from year to year to supply the demand, and large bounties were paid. I give a few papers showing something of the methods adopted. I have been unable to find more:—

This may certify Joseph Ward has rec'd of the class of which we are members, the sum of 203 Spanish milled dollars in consideration of his enlisting as a Continental Soldier for y^e term of 3 years for said class

This Ward proved a bounty jumper and deserted. Pomp Cato says he has received "60 pounds silver," for enlisting three years in a class of which Capt. Oliver Shattuck was one. Aaron Allis gives a receipt for "70 pounds silver," from Simon Harvey and others of his class. Joseph Farnam had "60 £ silver coin of the class of which Samuel Barnard is the head." Phineas Rugg gave his receipt for "60 £ silver from the class of which Jeremiah Nims was the head, for his son Thomas Rugg," [17 years old.]

Rec'd of Joseph Stebbins [63 years old,] Fourteen Hundred Eighty eight Pound old Continental in Part Pay to hire a man in the service for three years. Received by me Joseph Stebbins Jun.

The above amount would be $367,120, "Old Continental," at the rate it passed in 1780.

Fourteen men were raised in April, I suppose after the class system. Below is a list, with date of enlistment so far as ascertained, of those who served that year.

Enlisted for three years or the war:—

CHAPTER XXIII.

CLOSE OF THE WAR—HARD TIMES—ELY INSURRECTION.

1782. With the capture of Cornwallis, Oct. 19th, 1781, the war of Independence was practically over, and only five men were called for to recruit the Continental army this spring. The struggle henceforth was to be with financial affairs and the establishment of a stable government. All business was unsettled. The currency issued to carry on the war had now become almost worthless. A large quantity had accumulated in the hands of the treasurer, and at the March meeting the selectmen were instructed to dispose of it as best they could. The bills might sell for a trifle in 1886, as relics, but at the close of the war their value was generally measured by the price of waste paper. The people had bought and sold by this stuff while it was falling from par to five, ten, twenty, forty for one, and debt and credit could not find a level without a disturbing struggle. There was little hard money to be had, but taxes must be paid in silver or gold. Creditors clamored for their pay and sued for its recovery. The costs of collection were heavy. To relieve debtors a law was passed authorizing Justices of the Peace to take acknowledgments of debts, and if they were not paid within a year to issue executions. This was called the "Confession Act." It saved the burdensome costs of court, but much injustice grew up under its provisions. Soon after, the "Legal Tender Act" was passed, which made live stock at a disinterested appraisal, legal tender in payment of all private debts; and "many a debt," says Justin Hitchcock, "which ought to have been paid in money was paid at the tail of an execution in pine boards, bulls and stags, as they were prised off to the creditor."

Remedies for the hard times were sought in every direction and the "crank" found full occupation—and some followers. A county convention had been called at Hatfield to consider the burdens of the people and seek relief; March 25th, at a town meeting Col. Joseph Stebbins and Capt. Thos. W. Dickinson were chosen delegates to attend it. The delegates met in the Hatfield meetinghouse early in April, and sat for several days discussing and voting upon the various "grievances" with which they were afflicted. Everything which touched their empty pockets was voted a grievance. The Court of General Sessions of the Peace—Justices of the Quarter Sessions—the Fee Bill—Sheriffs and their Deputies—the act for qualification of voters—even the Confession Act was not what it should be—and a committee was chosen to suggest changes to the General Court. They,— Voted that there be no County Court of the Sessions of the Peace.

Voted that y^e Constables be authorized to serve all writs in their own Town, the same as Deputy Sheriffs.

[A motion was made] To request the Inferior Court to forbear giving Judgment in civil causes, except the creditor make it appear he is in danger of losing his debt, or where the parties are agreed.

[This vote was taken "by yeas and nays by towns." The result is given below:]

YEAS—Granville, Norwich, Granby, Whately, Montague, Shelburne, Charlemont, Greenwich, Conway, Westfield, Palmer, Pelham, Leverett, Ludlow, Ashfield.

NAYS—Springfield, Wilbraham, Deerfield, Monson, Blanford, Northampton, Southampton, Hadley, Westhampton, Hatfield, Goshen, Cummington, Williamsburg, South Hadley, Amherst, Sunderland, Shutesbury, Worthington, Chesterfield, Greenfield, Belcher.

Deerfield stood with the strong conservative element in the convention. Col. Stebbins had led a mob in the cause of Liberty, and had been for six years constantly fighting in the field for the same cause, but neither he nor Capt. Dickinson had any sympathy with the mob spirit which was willing to wreck the new Constitution in seeking an impossible relief from financial burdens, by interrupting the execution of the laws. The General Court had gone to the very verge of injustice to the creditor in legislation to relieve the debtor and could do no more. The stubborn fact remained that hard times were upon the people and there was no easy way out. Samuel Ely, however, persuaded a sufficient number of sufferers that stopping the action of the courts was the true remedy. They administered it, and Ely in consequence soon found himself behind the bars in Springfield jail, where he was sent April 3d, as a leader in a riot.

In strong contrast with the complaints of those who were safe at home was the action of our soldiers in the field. The condition of the men in the Continental army at this time is well portrayed by the following letter, which should properly find a place here:—

NEW HAMPSHIRE HUTS Jan'y 28, 1782.

Hond Sir. I understand there was some confiscated estates sold some time last fall in Deerfield, in particular, Nathaniel Dickinsons. If father could have an opportunity to put off my next note, I should be very glad. I understand we are not likely to have them paid by the State. I think it would be better for me to have a Private mans security than the States. If father could [put] it off and git not more than one third part of the money down, I would willingly wait one year for the other, or longer if it be in good hands. it will not do for me to sell the Note to them—I may give them a Power of attorney to act for me in regard to the payment of the Note for it will not be assured (?) unless it is certified that the note is still my property, and that I am in actual Service.

We have been bamboozled Baffled so much by the State, that we are detirmed not to take State for Pay master any longer & have chosen a Committee to send to Congress & make a Settlement for wages for the year 1781 who sit out this week. As we are employed by Congress we have an undoubted right to look to them for our pay—I do not know that the State has a right to loan our money for four, five, six and seven years as they have done, without our consent.

I am sensible that the State labors under great embarrisments, much more than the common people know and neither do they ought to know it.

The whole army is very sensible that the State is by no means able to pay our wages as fast as they become due—If they would pay so much as to Support us, while in the service, and give us good security for the remainder I am very sensible it would be satisfactory to the army—only one fourth part would suffice, as the army would be willing to submit to any Embaresment from that Quarter if the State would only act the honest part. I have ever tride to put on the Best construction on the conduct that I possibly could, but it is my sincere oppinion that the State as a Body wish to wrong the army out of every farthing that is due them.

We have been under marching orders about fifteen days, but did not know which way were to march until yesterday I understand it was on account of the Rebellion, and disturbance which hath lately happened on the Grant in consequence of which Gen^l Washington requested Gen^l Heath to order 2^d Connecticut Brigade and the 10 Massatts Regt to hold themselves in readiness to march at the shortest notis to Albany. If there [is] no further disturbance it is not likely we shall march Otherwise we shall.

from your dutifol son O. TAYLOR

Capt Othn^l Taylor Charlemont.

The “marching orders” referred to were doubtless given in consequence of an address to Congress from the “Yorkers” in Vermont, dated Jan. 8th, 1782, representing that the "Vermonters" were abusing them and intriguing to deliver the "Hampshire Grants" over to Great Britain. Neither Washington, nor Congress, nor the Yorkers themselves, knew the underlying facts in the case until the cessation of hostilities. Then appeared the consummate skill which had hoodwinked the English ministry, saved Vermont from invasion, and built up an independent State.

If Capt. Taylor was a representative man, the broad patriotism of the Massachusetts 10th, under their privations and hardships, the sting of injustice, and the loss of faith in their native State, is something to wonder at and admire. And the genius of a commander who, with such a state of affairs as this letter shows, could conquer a peace with Great Britain, seems almost superhuman.

The events I am about to narrate did not occur on the territory of Deerfield, but our people had part in them and they illustrate our social history in this dark period of apparent injustice and real hardship—a period marked by a false expectation of prompt relief from the new government, and the general demoralization usually attendant on a long war. On this occasion Deerfield took a stand on the side of law and order—albeit her military efforts came to an inglorious end—as she also did in the Shays Rebellion, of which this was but a premonitory symptom.

June 12th, about half-past eight in the morning, a hundred men in military array marched through Northampton for Springfield, "with great steadiness and in good order," although going to execute mob law, and release Samuel Ely. Some two hours later fifty law and order men left Northampton for Springfield. Part arrived before the mob and tried to get some cannon from the park to defend the prison; but before this could be done the doors were broken down and Ely was set free. The rescuers then turned and marched northward in triumph, some mounted and some on foot.

Half an hour later Sheriff Elisha Porter of Hadley appeared on the ground. He took in the situation at a glance, rallied a force and sent it under Col. Burt in pursuit of the mob; then crossed the Connecticut and made haste to secure all the boats on the river to prevent the mob from passing westward. This he did as high up as Hadley, and was thus able also to cross himself at his pleasure.

June 13th, the news reached Porter in the morning that Burt had overtaken the mob at South Hadley, where, after a smart skirmish in which nothing was accomplished, both parties had camped for the night. Porter at once rallied a force, crossed the river to Hadley and picking up such aid as he could, took post at the south end of Hadley street. The mob, finding no boats on the river and Porter in their front, turned off towards Amherst. Porter then sent Capt. Allen by a cross way to intercept them, while he slowly followed in their rear. Allen struck them on the flank and got between their horse and foot. There was some lively work and hard blows, and "Sol. Clapp had his head broken" by a clubbed musket, when a parley was called. Ely and a few others had escaped. The parties were now formed in two lines in the road facing each other and within bayonet reach. To prevent bloodshed a committee of five on each side was chosen, and after a short consultation the mob agreed to march to Northampton with Porter, that all might be sheltered from the pouring rain while negotiations were pending, but in no sense as his prisoners, Porter promising to leave them in as good a position for defense as they then were, in case of failure to agree. The account of this affair given by Holland in his Western Massachusetts, vol. 1, p. 231, is glaringly erroneous in almost every particular, and he does gross injustice to Col. Porter, whose firmness sustained the law, and whose prudence alone saved disastrous bloodshed. The present sketch is written from letters penned upon the spot by reliable men, while the events were transpiring.

This joint committee, after considerable conference, came to an agreement—that both parties should unite in a petition to the General Court for some action to abate the grievances complained of—that Ely should be given up and that three hostages be given for his return. Capt. Abel Dinsmore of Conway, Lieut. Perez Bardwell and Paul King were selected as hostages. Lieut. Bardwell, a Revolutionary soldier, lived near the south bounds of Deerfield—it is not certain on which side the line he lived at this time. The hostages and Porter now did what they could to secure Ely, but without success. It was soon winged abroad that the terms of the parley had been broken and the leaders of the mob arrested and confined, and in consequence there was great excitement among the people, who began to gather about Northampton. Before nightfall a crowd had collected who swore they would burn the town unless the hostages were given up. This mob does not seem to have been organized and nothing else was done. A strong guard garrisoned the jail night and day.

June 14th, the mob increased; the demand and threat were repeated. At eleven o'clock the demonstrations were so strong that Porter caused the alarm to be "fired and rung," and he sent out expresses to the towns about for help. Efforts to find Ely were unsuccessful. Porter was firm and would not give up the hostages. The Patriot Hawley says the Tories are doing what they can to foment the trouble, and that the hostages or Ely must be held at all hazards, or it will be "a triumph to the Tories and Great Britain." He says the condition of affairs is most ticklish and dangerous, and that the "Tories have great expectations from the view and prospect of them." The mob soon rose to the dignity of "insurgents." Hawley writes, June 14th, "The Insurgents are our equals, our acquaintances, our Brothers," we could fight them if they were "our common enemy," but "to meet an enemy who are determined to fight and may not be resisted unto bloodshed and death is a case extremely singular," but we are "absolutely in a state of war." Seventy men are paraded at Hatfield and others coming in to join them. Meanwhile the Sheriff's posse is increasing and the jail is strongly guarded.

When Porter's appeal for help reached Deerfield Col. Joseph Stebbins, who had himself been the leader of one mob, and a witness to others, and who well knew their dangerous tendency, forthwith rallied a party and marched for the scene of disturbance. He was not notified of the disposition of the insurgent force, and in marching through Hatfield found himself in their very midst and was captured with his whole party. He found there a well organized body of six hundred men under the command of Reuben Dickinson of Amherst, a man who had done good work in the Continental service. "Uncle Sid" was one of the captured party and used to entertain his cronies in "Dr. Charles' Senate chamber" with a graphic account of this affair. But alas! there was no "chiel amang 'em takin' notes."

The people had been made to believe that the three leaders of the mob of the 12th had been confined through a gross breach of faith on the part of Porter—that their own rights were being arbitrarily trampled upon under color of law, and they seem to have been fixed in the determination to vindicate the people and release the prisoners. The Tories edged the matter on, meanwhile laughing in their sleeves.

All negotiations having failed, on the afternoon of June 16th, Capt. Dickinson with his six hundred men left Hatfield for Northampton, while other parties approached from different quarters. About three o'clock a message from Dickinson reached Porter proposing a conference by a committee of three from each side, who were to meet one mile from the town. Nothing came of this meeting. The insurgents demanded the release of the hostages, or, as some declared, "Northampton people should sleep in Huts that night, that 300 men of their body were fully determined on that." Porter told them that "in that case they must expect to sleep in their graves."

About six o'clock Dickinson sent word to Porter that he was within half a mile of the jail, and unless the hostages and all papers received as security were given up within half an hour an attack would be made. Porter replied that he was willing to enter into a reasonable treaty, but he would not accede to that demand, adding, "It is my earnest desire to have peace, and it is in your power to prevent bloodshed." About dark, Porter, who had four hundred men posted about the jail, was joined by Gen. Parks, with one hundred and fifty more, just as the insurgents had reached the point of attack. Porter now felt sure that he could hold the jail, but being anxious to avoid bloodshed called out to have Dickinson meet him between the lines. They met, and Capt. Dickinson was persuaded to go into the prison and see the hostages—the bone of the contention. Some others of his side joined him. They found they had been deceived by false reports, and that the hostages had been treated in accordance with the agreement. Dinsmore, Bardwell and King united in advising Dickinson to stop proceedings for their release. The upshot was that the insurgents agreed to give up Ely, and Porter the hostages, and the matter was settled on that basis. During the night, however, there was an alarm in Northampton; signal fires were discovered on the hill-tops and a new gathering was feared. Ely was given up—the people had found him out—and the worthless fellow was taken to a prison in Boston. We have seen what a crank or a demagogue may do in a time of public distress, and I have no desire to follow his fortunes further.

July 2d, 1782, the Legislature voted to send a committee to Hampshire county to investigate the cause of the trouble, with power to grant amnesty to all offenders except Ely. On the 5th, this committee was made up of Samuel Adams from the Senate, and Artemus Ward and the speaker, Nathaniel Gorham, from the House. The committee repaired to Conway, then one of the largest towns in the county, and the home of Capt. Abel Dinsmore, the probable leader of the mob which released Samuel Ely. Samuel Adams, the “man of the town meeting,” met the people of Conway in town meeting assembled, but they refused to act upon the matter in hand separately from the rest of the county. July 29th, delegates from thirteen towns in the north part of the county met the committee at Conway. The following paper in the handwriting of Capt. Jonas Locke, who may have been secretary of the meeting, gives the one result of the conference:—

At the Request of a Number of Persons from 13 Towns in the Northerly part of y^e County of Hampsher assembled at Conway y^e 29th Instant—in Consequence of the Hon^l Committee sent by the Gen^l Court of this Commonwealth to examine and heal the Unapinesses arising in this County—There fore s^d Assembly thought it Expedient to send Circular letters Requesting y^e s^d County to meet by their Delegates in a County Convention on Wednesday y^e 7th of August next, at Coll Murrys in Hatfield at 9 o'clock in the morning of said day whar the Hon^l Committay above s^d will attend s^d Convention

JONAS LOCKE—p^r Order

Deerfield 30 July 1782

At a town meeting here, Aug. 6th, the following delegates to this convention were chosen: Elihu Field, Capt. Thomas Wells and Capt. Jonas Locke. They were instructed:—

To inform the Convention when met, that it is the wish of their Constituents, in order to promote equal Justice throughout the Commonwealth—

That the Treasurer of the Commonwealth may be directed by the Honorable, the Gen. Court, to Credit each Town for the sums received by him for Taxes in Paper Currency, the Value only of such money at the time of Payment, according to the Rules Established by Law for the Adjustment of Accounts between Individuals.

This was the only "grievance" Deerfield had to present to the convention. Other towns had a plenty to offer. A string of fourteen resolutions was passed asking for more equal taxation, fewer civil officers, more economy in the administration of affairs, &c., and indemnity for all engaged in the late disturbance except Samuel Ely. Having thus relieved their minds, they took breath and then declared themselves loyal to the State, and determined to stand by Congress until the country was free.

The mission of Samuel Adams and his committee was a success, and Oct. 2d, the Senate:—

Resolved that this Court highly approve the Proceedings of that Committee for their indefatigable, and successful endeavours in so great a degree quieting the disturbances that had arisen in that County.

Salah Barnard, David Saxton and John Bardwell, commissioners to settle the estates of Elijah Williams, Moses Taylor, James Oliver, and Nathaniel Dickinson, absentees, settled their account to the satisfaction of the government, Oct. 21st, 1782.

The following bill is worth preserving from its relation to finance, labor and supplies:—

Close of the War. The loss of Cornwallis and his army at Yorktown so strengthened the Whigs in the English Parliament that on the 4th of March, 1782, they carried a resolution through the House against a further prosecution of the war in America, and beyond a little skirmishing in Georgia and South Carolina, where the last blood was shed in August, 1782, no hostile movements were made or attempted on either side after this date.

April 19th, 1782, Holland acknowledged our Independence.

Nov. 30th, Provisional Articles of Peace were signed at Paris.

January 20th, 1783, England and the United States made a treaty for the cessation of hostilities.

March 24th, news was received through Lafayette of a general peace in Europe.

April 19th, just eight years from the first bloodshed at Lexington, a general peace was proclaimed to the army by Washington.

The final and definite Treaty between England and the New Nation was not signed until Sept. 3d, 1783.

CHAPTER XXIV.

MISCELLANEOUS—SHAYS REBELLION—SPECIE TAXES—COUNTERFEITING—SMALL POX—COMMON FIELD.

When the burden of active hostilities was lifted and our townsmen were able to give more attention to municipal affairs, the subject of highways became a prominent one. In March, 1782, a new road was laid across Deerfield river to New Fort. In December the town voted that it had "no objections to a County Road being laid from Old Fort North Gate, back of Old Fort, Carters Land, across Pettys Plain to David Smeads Esq in Greenfield." Upon further deliberation and consultation this vote was reconsidered at an adjourned meeting.

The question was which was the better route to Greenfield Meadows—the most important part of that town—whether across North Meadows, by the Pine Hill ferry and through Green River street—or by the ford at Old Fort, through Little Hope and across Petty's Plain. To test the distance to the objective point—the Green river bridge on the Colrain road—Joseph Stebbins and David Saxton were chosen a committee "to measure the Road from Deerfield Meetinghouse by the Ferry to Greenfield Bridge, and from said Bridge across Pettys Plain back of Carters Land & Old Fort to said house." The committee reported the distance by the ferry to be "3 miles 14 Tallies & 6 Rods." By Old Fort "3 Miles 15 Tallies & $7\frac{1}{2}$ rods." David Saxton was chosen an agent to represent the town in the matter at the next Court of Quarter Sessions. It will doubtless be a surprise to the present generation in both towns to learn that this question was ever raised. A road was laid through Cheapside on the east side of David Wells's land on condition that Wells, or Jonathan Hoyt, would pay half the expense. Another road was laid, "from the County Road leading from Deerfield to Conway, to the Seven Mile Line." Did the county road to Conway go from Old Fort through South Wisdom across Foot's ferry and through Hoosac? and was the new road one leading from that to the Old World?

Another road was one "beginning at the Seven Mile Line where the Old Charlemont Road crosses said Line, thence running to said Charlemont road." Still another road ran "from the County road leading from Hatfield to Deerfield, to the County Road leading from Deerfield to Conway."

There was a meeting to see about building a new school-house in the Town Street and general legislation concerning the school there and in the outlying districts. Provision was made for preaching at Bloody Brook and the £14 appropriated was paid to the afterwards famous Dr. Timothy Dwight for preaching there.

It is curious to note the little interest taken in the general elections. In 1782 the whole vote for governor was fourteen, all for John Hancock, and thirteen for Thomas Cushing for lieutenant governor. In 1783 the party feeling must have run high. The result showed equal activity on both sides. The total vote was eight: Hancock had four, four were cast for Nathaniel Gorham, the same who came up on the Legislative committee with Samuel Adams the year before. He also had two votes for lieutenant governor, while Cushing had six.

Monday, Sept. 20th, 1783, a convention composed of committees from the towns in the northern part of the county met here at the tavern of David Saxton. The delegates from Deerfield were Capt. Abner Mitchell, and Dr. Ebenezer Barnard. The object of the convention was to "take into account the deplorable condition of the people, and the more deplorable condition they are soon likely to be in, by reason of the great scarcity of a circulating medium." The delegates aired the hardship of being obliged to go so far as Springfield to attend the Courts of Justice, the offices of the Treasurer and the Registry of Deeds. The Probate Court and records were at Northampton, and they wanted the other courts held there too, as a more central situation, or, that the county might be divided. The convention judged it best to call together delegates from all the towns in the county, to take this and other matters into consideration, and meanwhile they enjoined industry and frugality as the most hopeful means of relief. The delegates were to meet at the house of Col. Seth Murray in Hatfield, October 20th. Oct. 15th, Deerfield chose Simeon Harvey a delegate to this convention and voted to pay his expenses. No report of the meeting has been found.

The question of the division of Hampshire County was much agitated in this formative period. Agents of the towns in the north part met at the tavern of David Hoyt in Deerfield, Sept. 2d, 1785, to petition the Legislature for a division of the county. Samuel Field and David Saxton represented this town. The meeting was probably called by those interested in the petition of James Ball and others, asking that a new county be erected from certain towns in Hampshire and Worcester counties. Deerfield was opposed to this particular scheme and chose John Williams and Samuel Barnard to lay their reasons before the General Court.

Nothing came of the Ball movement, but another was soon afoot. A convention of the northern towns was called to meet Jan. 29th, 1787, at the house of John Burdick in Shelburne, to consider the matter. Jona. Arms was Deerfield's delegate.

It was probably one result of this agitation that in 1787 a Registry of Deeds for Northern Hampshire was established at Deerfield and John Williams made Register. The office was continued here until Franklin county was established in 1812. The records of this period are now in the Registry at Greenfield and it may interest searchers to know that some deeds given a century and a half ago may be found recorded upon its books for the first time. John Williams was Register 1787-1796; Elijah Williams, 1797-1801; Epaphras Hoyt, 1802-1814, when he resigned.

In the election for Register in 1787 John Williams had the unanimous vote of Deerfield. Dec. 3d, 1791, the town chose David Saxton and Samuel Field a committee to meet committees from the other northern towns, at the house of Beriah Willard in Greenfield, Dec. 27th, to consider the subject of a petition to the General Court for a division of the county.

The General Court so far considered the propriety of a division as to send a committee of that body to make an examination with reference to it. Dec. 3d, 1793, Deerfield chose John Williams her agent to meet this committee. But the end was not yet. Another meeting to consider the subject was held at the house of Calvin Munn at Greenfield, Dec. 17th, 1804, and a convention of the agents of the interested towns met in Greenfield four weeks later. This agitation was continued until the times were ripe, and Franklin county incorporated, June 24th, 1811.

Shays Rebellion. As it has been said, the war left Deerfield people in a deplorable condition financially; but socially and politically the clouds passed away with the smoke of the conflict. Whig and Tory put their necks to the collar to pull through as best they might. It was uphill work, but they manfully maintained the Constitution and the laws. The demagogism of the Shays excitement did not carry them away; on the contrary, they took an active part in putting it down.

The Court of Common Pleas had been broken up by the mob at Northampton in August, 1786. The Supreme Court was to be held in Springfield in September, and the government called out the friends of law and order to protect it; Deerfield responded. Dea. Justin Hitchcock, in his "Remarks and Observations," says:—

I went with a company from Deerfield, above forty, well armed. The mob turned out at the same time, and we frequently passed them, or they us, on the road, but was no dispute. We marched to Springfield in about 24 hours, and passed by the mob stationed on the west side of the road above Ferry lane. When we came to the Court House we found it well guarded by friends of the government who were well armed and had two pieces of artillery. The court was setting but could do no business amid the noise and confusion. The mob were numerous and as they marched by us, by agreement I counted the sections and allowing 8 men to a section I made them from 1200 to 1300. Others did the same. Daniel Shays was at their head. About 300 in front were armed—the rest were not—or not generally so. The court adjourned A. M. We had no further business. A sort of agreement was entered into with the mob by which we all returned home in peace.

Joseph Stebbins, Samuel Childs and Thomas W. Dickinson each had command of a company under General Shepherd, when the insurgents finally came to grief at Springfield, January 26th, 1787. More than a hundred men went from Deerfield. The government troops were occasionally here, in their marches, and an old billeting roll shows that nearly a thousand men spent one day and night here, quartered on the householders. John Williams entertained ninety-five, Joseph Stebbins ninety-three, Salah Barnard eighty-four, Joseph Barnard sixty-five, T. W. Dickinson sixty, John Bardwell fifty-eight, Seth Catlin fifty-two, Simeon Harvey forty-nine, Hannah Russell forty-four, Aaron Arms forty-four, Amasa Smith forty-two, and the others lesser numbers.

The following bill shows the kind of ammunition used in quelling the rebellion:—

We may fairly infer from the above that Capt. Dickinson had forty-seven or forty-eight men in his company. They were not disbanded on their return as appears from the fact, that in February, 1787, David Dickinson furnished Dickinson's company with 25½ pounds bread, 12½ pounds salt pork; Zadock Hawks 12 pounds do., and Eliphalet Dickinson 6½ do., and Amasa Smith 4½ pounds of bread; as appears per bill.

After their dispersion at Springfield many of the misguided men, accepting the offer of amnesty, came in and gave up their arms, but, as appears by the following, not fast enough to suit the fiery Maj. Catlin, now a firm supporter of the government:—

DEERFIELD, Feb. 20, 1787.

Sir I must insist that you exert yourself to the utmost that the Insurgents in your part of the County who have not already given up their Arms, and taken the Oath of Allegiance to this Commonwealth, do attend on me, at Reuben Wells, in Greenfield, on Thursday next at ten o'clock Fornoon for that purpose. Let them know that now is the Day of Grace—and it may be soon over.

I am Sir Your Humble Servant SETH CATLIN

Lt. James Stewart.

Stewart was of Colrain, where there had been general sympathy with the insurgents. A large number gave up their arms, which were placed in charge of Col. Joseph Stebbins. Some of them were put to use by the government, as appears by Shepherd's order below:—

NORTHAMPTON Mch 3 1788

Dear Sir You will please furnish Lieut Hoit with twenty five arms from the arms the Insurgents lodged with you

By order of Gen Shepherd

Col Stebbins

ABEL WHITNEY, A. D. C.

Rec'd March 4th 1787 of Lt Colo J. Stebbins twenty five arms.

DAVID HOIT Jun

These arms were eventually restored to the owners. On some scraps of paper I find the names of sixty-nine of those who gave Col. Stebbins their receipts for their guns. I recognize none of these as inhabitants of Deerfield.

A Last Faint Echo of the War. Sometime after the war about thirty of the leading Tories of the Connecticut valley sent a petition to Lord Dorchester, modestly asking the grant of thirty townships of land south of the St. Lawrence and adjoining the Vermont line, each to be six miles square. This was to be in consideration of their former sufferings and their present persecutions. Col. William Page and Dr. Isaac Moseley were sent to Canada to forward this movement. John Williams, Seth Catlin and Samuel Field were the Deerfield representatives in the association, and Williams and Col. Eleazer Fitch were its active home agents. The result of these operations is not found. It was probably a purely financial speculation.

A letter written in 1787 speaks of the hardships of the debtor class. The writer says a great deal of property is sold at auction on execution, at a very low price, that the men of means are improving the opportunity of increasing their store, while the poor are in a sad strait. No reason is known why the hardships following the war did not press as heavily upon this town as upon others. But our people appear to have had no fellowship with those who were seeking a remedy in an impossible way and at the risk of losing the benefits of their dearly bought Independence. The town taxed itself to pay off at once all the war debt—preferring to carry its own burdens rather than impose them upon their children. They thus left us the legacy of a good example, instead of a public debt. I do not recall having in any instance seen the statement, except the one here given, that tobacco was taken by the Government in payment of Taxes. It indicates that the weed was cultivated to a considerable extent at this time.

This paper also shows that John Williams had recovered his standing with the State government as he had years before with his fellow townsmen. He was now as loyal to the new Commonwealth as he had been to George III.

JOHN WILLIAMS

Dec. 3d, 1787, Samuel Field was chosen delegate to the State Convention at Boston, the second Wednesday in January, 1789, called to ratify the United States Constitution. The militia being reorganized under the State Constitution, Joseph Stebbins, Jr., was commissioned May 22d, 1788, colonel of the 2d Regiment, 2d Brigade, 4th Division; David Hoyt commissioned captain, Ithamar Burt, lieutenant, and Seth Nims, ensign, June 9th. Dec. 18th, 1788, the town voted to raise money to arm and equip such men as the selectmen think unable to procure the same. May 25th, 1789, commissions were given to Capt. Abner Cooley, Lieut. William Tryon and Ensign Elijah Arms, as officers of a company at Bloody Brook.

In March, 1789, there was great excitement in town on the breaking up of a gang of counterfeitters, whose operations had caused much disturbance in the circulating medium. Fourteen men were arraigned before Esq. John Williams and Esq. [Elisha?] Porter; all were bound over to the Supreme Judicial Court. It appears from notes of the testimony that they were engaged in counterfeiting Spanish milled dollars. The center of operations seems to have been at "Goff's Mill." Another place was on an island in Deerfield river, near Conway, where the rushing waters drowned the noise of their stamp mill. "A man in Greenfield" offered, according to the evidence, "to make $1000 for 500 good ones." The accused testified freely against each other, and one is surprised to find them alternately in the witness stand and at the criminal bar. It would seem that most of the men had been victims of a set of sharpers, who would sell them a base metal and receipts for "transmuting copper into silver" and "Silver into gold." Sometimes they would offer to prove the virtue of these receipts by experiment. The invariable result was, that after melting a lot of good dollars, they would disappear with the crucible. The accused were doubtless a set of weak, ignorant men, and judging from the operations of the "green goods" men of to-day that class did not become extinct at their death. Julius Allis, who was somehow mixed up in this affair was set off to Conway by an act of the General Court in 1791.

March 27th, 1793, there was an article in the warrant for the March meeting,—“To see if the Town will allow any hospital for Small Pox in Town.” Voted “No. * * * Nevertheless considering that the Small Pox is already in the house of Jona. Hoit 2d, voted that he may have liberty to inoculate his children in his own house and no others.”

This exception shows the belief of the voters in the efficacy of the act, and it is difficult to understand the prejudice which forbade others the benefit of it.

Hoyt lived in Wisdom, and, although we find no evidence on record to that effect, his house may have become a pest house. Some years later, Lieut. Joseph Barnard "died of small pox at the pest house in Wisdom."

In 1794, the town voted to make a plan of the town agreeable to the Resolve of the General Court passed June 26th, 1794.

March 1st, 1795. The town voted that "if Col. Stebbins will erect a grist mill in the South Meadow * * * Said mill shall be tax free so long as water runs and grass grows." A mill was built soon after, which became and continued for many years a famous and popular one. Following this period came the palmy days of Deerfield in stall-feeding cattle for the Boston and New York markets, and between the hurrying and groaning stones of this mill, passed nearly all the cereal products of Deerfield Meadows, in the form of "provender" with which they were fattened. Provender in those days meant a mixture of Indian corn, and "peas-an-oats" usually about half-and-half. This mill was burned August 19th, 1838, but it was rebuilt at once. It was finally destroyed by floods.

Around the water power developed by Stebbins, Mill village grew up, and active industries centered there. I name some as memory serves me; saw mill, carding mill, fulling mill, shingle mill, clothiers works, lead pipe works, dye works, machine shop, blacksmith shop.

The Common Field. As we have seen, the affairs of the Common Field were at first under the direction of the town. About 1719 those owning lands on the Meadows organized under some general law as the "Proprietors of the Common Field in Deerfield." A parchment covered book in Memorial Hall, contains a record of the doings of this body, and its successors for one hundred and twenty-five years. The first entry is dated March 14th, 1733-4, the last Nov. 5th, 1858. The Proprietors had power to raise money by taxation for incidental expenses and to compel each land owner to keep up his proportion of the encircling fence which was assigned him by the Proprietors. In 1734 the ratio was "fifteen feet & two Inches & one quarter of an Inch pr acre to every lot of which part is under Improvement." The rate varied slightly from time to time as the amount of territory enclosed varied. At first only the meadows east of the Pocumtuck river were enclosed; this required a fence of four miles, one hundred and ninety-two rods and twenty-five feet, in addition to one-half the west fence of the home lots at the Street and Wapping—about one mile more. This fence began on Green river just above the lower bridge and ended at Stillwater. To enclose the Wisdom meadows required five miles and thirty-eight rods more. Every owner was obliged under a penalty, to put up a stone with his initials at the north end of his string of fence, that it might be easily identified; and he was held responsible for any damage to crops incurred through his neglect.

This cumbersome method of protecting the meadows continued until the corporation was reorganized by a special act of the legislature passed Nov. 30th, 1785, under the style of the "Proprietors of the Common & General Field in the Town of Deerfield." The Proprietors assumed the ownership of all the fence and ever after supported it by a money tax on the land owners. The power to do this they seem to have lacked before. They now had sole control of all general matters pertaining to the Common Field. From the first the corporation met, under a regular warrant, at the meeting-house, and in its later years in the Town House. They had a regular organization, with a clerk, assessors, collectors, and necessary agents. They raised money by legal taxation, according to valuation, bought supplies of fencing stuff and fixed its price and the price of labor. An annual meeting was held in the spring for choice of officers and the transaction of other business; another was held in the fall to fix the time for "Opening the Meadows" for feeding. Appraisers were chosen to examine the condition of each owner's land, and decide how many "rights" each was entitled to. Below is a sample of the lists of feed and stock handed in to the appraisers:—

Mathew Clessons feed in the Common field.

Grass Land Clessons Swamp five acres

On the plain 5 do

Stubble do 3 do

Stalks do 4 do

Cattle. 2 oxen

3 cows

2 two years old

1 Horse 1 Colt 1 do

The appraisers determine, after examination, whether Cles-son's feed and stock balance, or whether he will be obliged to buy "Rights" to supply his need, or have Rights to sell.

A Right admitted one ox. On this standard the privilege for entering other stock was finely graded. The Rights were merchantable and changed hands in wholes or fractions, according to need or convenience. All entries of stock and sales of Rights were made a matter of record on the books of the appraisers. The hour of opening was high noon, and woe be to the owner of any stock seen running at large before the first stroke of twelve from the meetinghouse bell. Before the echoes of its last stroke had fairly melted into silence, the gates on every road leading into the meadows were flung open and hundreds of cows and oxen were cropping the sweet grass, or battling for mastership. These conflicts were one of the prominent features of the day. The strife was renewed as often as stranger herds met, and continued until it was settled which animal "beat." Sometimes a lordly beast would go the rounds "with a chip on his shoulder," and hundreds would give way to him without a question, and no animal was molested who did not offer to lock horns with him. When two of this kidney met there was usually much turf torn up and much good feed spoiled. The battle was hot and often prolonged, once one gave up "beat" the belligerents became the best of friends.

The Meadows usually remained "open" about four weeks, when all gates must be closed by law. This shutting-up of the gates was a source of great annoyance to travelers. On every road leading through or into the meadows, the passer was obliged to open the gate and close it behind him. In time men began to think this annoyance to travelers, this hindrance to business, and damage done to the land, outweighed the advantages gained by utilizing the feed, and gradually a party was formed which acted on this conviction. For many years there was an annual struggle between this party and the Conservatives, which grew sharper as the parties grew to be more equal and the Radicals gained an occasional victory. All votes were by interest, a certain amount on the valuation list giving one vote. As the day approached for the fall meeting, proxies were gathered from far and near; in some cases real estate was deeded to parties solely to make them personally interested in the battle.

The parties in a general way divided along these lines:—Men opposed to changing any customs of their fathers, men who summered a large stock of oxen and wished to eke out their failing pastures with a month of fresh fall feed before putting them into their winter stalls, on one side; on the other, men with no pastures, who bought their oxen for the stall just before winter set in; men whose land was newly seeded, or lay in low places, or in locations which exposed it to unusual tramlings; with side issues on both sides.

At the fall meeting, Nov. 5th, 1858, the first question to test the strength of the opposing parties was on the choice of moderator. While the slow process of taking the vote by interest was going on, both parties became shaky as to the result and the count was interrupted. After much haranguing it was agreed on all hands that the meadows should be opened without any ceremony that year and never afterwards.

Thus came the end. Originally the meadow fence was a vital necessity to keep out the cattle which roamed at large on the hills; the very life of the settlement depended upon its integrity. In later years, when individuals kept their stock in their own pastures, and cattle found running at large were impounded, the meadow fence was only needed to keep them in while the meadows were opened in the fall. When opening the meadows came to an end the need of the fence ended. As regulating the feeding and fencing had been the only business of the corporation, so, as feeding was at an end, its occupation was gone. It never met again. As the above meeting was not organized, the writer, as clerk of the Proprietors of the Common Field, presided at its last meeting, and its records and papers were left in his hands. They can now be consulted in the library of the Pocumtuck Valley Memorial Association.

The forwardness or backwardness of crops, as compared with "old times," has been among farmers a prolific theme of discussion. The date of opening the meadows, decided each fall, tells the story of the ripening of Indian corn for that season, that being the last crop gathered in "clearing the meadows." The following table gives the results of one hundred years' practical observation on the subject. It gives the year and date of opening:—

CHAPTER XXV.

MINISTERIAL AND MUNICIPAL.

Feb. 14th, 1778, eight men in the south part of the town made a move for annexation to Whately. Living "Six, Seven & Eight miles from the meeting House" they cannot conveniently attend public worship in Deerfield, but "are so Cit-yated as we can and do Commonly Attend the Public worship of God in Whateley" a distance of a mile or mile and a half. They ask the selectmen to put an article in the warrant for the March meeting:—

To see if the Town will give there Consent that we should be set of to y^e Town of Whateley with the Land which we Request to have set of is as follows [sic] viz Extending as far east as the east Line of Sam^l Hardings and Beginning at the Northeast corner of s^d Hardings Land and extending westwards a strait Line to y^e East line of Conway &c and in so doing you will greatly Oblidge us your Humble Pertitioners

ADONIJAH TAYLOR
THOMAS FAXON
SAMUEL HARDING
OLIVER SHATTUCK

JOHN TAYLOR
GIDEON DICKINSON
JULIUS ALLIS

The question was put whether y^e Town will grant y^e Petition of Lieut Adonijah Taylor and others, requesting to be set off to Whately and passed in y^e Negative.

These men lived in a body at the southwest corner of the town.

Nov. 4th, 1781, Samuel Barnard, Elijah Arms and Samuel Harding, committee, ask that the money they pay for minister and school tax be refunded to be expended by themselves for those purposes. At the town meeting Dec. 3d, 1781, £15, 12s were allowed them for preaching and £6 for schooling.

After the death of Mr. Ashley in 1780, the pulpit was supplied about a quarter part of the time by ministers from surrounding towns and young clerical graduates, and Deacon meetings were held the rest of the time. In the fall of 1784 David Selden, Yale 1782, preached here seven Sundays and was so well liked that a movement was made to give him a call to settle. But at that time he was hoping to receive a call from Longmeadow, and he declined to come back. He was disappointed about Longmeadow but settled in Haddam, Ct., in 1785, where he died in 1825. Samuel Goodrich, Yale 1783, supplied the pulpit most of the time from April 3d to July 17th, 1785. July 18th the town voted to give him a call. When it became apparent that Mr. Goodrich would be called to the ministry of Deerfield, other movements for dividing the town were made. March 28th, 1785, Lucius Allis and the other selectmen of Conway petition Deerfield in behalf of Julius Allis, that "by reason of the impracticability of a Road, as well as the Distance of y^e Way," to Deerfield, "he with his family might be annexed to y^e town of Conway."

I find no action of the town on this petition.

May 4th, 1786, Julius himself asks the town to abate his taxes. He says there is no public road leading from his farm towards Deerfield, and he can get no benefit from the meeting or school for which he has paid taxes eighteen years. The town voted to abate his unpaid ministerial tax. Under the circumstances, Bloody Brook people make a bold push for independence. After the usual statement of the difficulty of attending meeting in town they say:—

Whereas providence has so ordered that we are so situated as that we can with Tolerable convenience attend the Public Worship of God among ourselves if we may have y^e Liberty and whereas we suppose there is a prospect of there being a Minister Settled in said Deerfield soon and although we have nothing to object against the Gentleman who is about to be Settled but wish you may be So Happy as to unite in and Settle him yet we do think it very unreasonable to be obliged to assist you in Settling him or any other Gentleman inasmuch as we cannot have any priviledg thereby. Therefore we the Subscribers by order and in Behalf of the major part of the Inhabitation of the South part of Deerfield do Humbly Request that you forthwith warn a Town Meeting to see if the Town will be willing to set us off for to be a Town by ourselves and exempt us from paying any Taxes which may be granted and made in said Deerfield for the purpose of Settling of a minister or the Support of the Gospel. We also Request that we may have the Benefit of our part of all such moneys or Lands as has heretofore been granted or Sequestered for the Support of the Gospel or Schools in Deerfield and all such other privilidges as may be made to appear to be our just Right and we request that we may be set off and exempted as above said in Maner and form as followith (viz) Beginning at Connecticutt River at the Southeast Corner of a gore of Land called and known by the name of Wapping gore and extending from thence westwardly to Conway line and Soposing that these our Requests are Reasonable we trust they will be granted which in Duty bound we shall ever pray

Deerfield, July 12, 1785.

At a town meeting July 18th, "Voted in the negative."

[On a motion] to concur with a vote of the church in Deerfield passed on the 4th of July Current in giving a call to Mr. Samuel Goodrich to Settle in y^e work of y^e Ministry in said Town and the votes being called on said Question there appeared thirty five yeas, and twenty seven nays.

A committee was chosen to report the vote to Mr. Goodrich, and the meeting adjourned to the next day. On a petition of Asahel Wright and thirty-three others, a meeting was called Aug. 8th, 1785. Voted forty-two to eighteen that,—

The town will refund such part of the money that may be paid by the Inhabitants of the South part of the town towards the Settlement of a Gospel Minister in Said town * * * provided they shall in some future day be incorporated into a Seperate Town, Parish, or District and Settle a Gospel Minister,

But not to include any who may wish to be set off to another town. Voted to renew their invitation to Mr. Goodrich, sixty-two to sixteen. "Voted £250 as settlement, £150 to be paid within one year after his ordination and £100 within two years," to give him a yearly salary "of £100 or £88, and 40 cords of wood." Nothing more concerning Mr. Goodrich is found on the records. In 1786, he was settled at Ridgefield, Ct., whence he went to Berlin, where he died in 1835.

Nov. 16th, 1786, the town voted to "concur with the church in inviting Mr John Taylor in settling in the work of the Ministry; 50 to 2. Voted him a Settlement of £250, £100 within a year and £50 a year for the second and third years, 47 to 7: and a salary of £100, unanimously." The reply of Mr. Taylor to this call was so characteristic of the man, it seems best to give it entire.

DEERFIELD Dec 18, 1786

To the Ch^h of Christ and to the Congregation in Deerfield—

Friends and Bretheren. Since you presented me with your request to Settle with you in the work of the Ministry; I have taken it into consideration, and I hope have considered it with that Seriousness which is becoming so important a concern, both for the Ch^h the congregation and myself. I have taken a proper time for Consideration, have advised with most of the Ministers in the vicinity—have attended to your long destitution, and the difficulty you have met with in gaining an unity. I have considered the necessity you stand in of a resettled Minister, that you may have the regular administration of Ordinances. I have attended also to your present unity, and the agreeable consequences naturally resulting from such a happy union. I have also with pain considered the present situation of our political matters, the Embarrassments upon the regular administration of Law and Justice, the General Confusion of the Commonwealth, together with the deep rooted prejudices in y^e minds of many against the Constitution, and the higher officers of the Government. I have been and am still full of the most alarming apprehensions with regard to the disturbances which have taken place, and which appear still to be increasing.* What the future Consequences of these things will be is known only to an overruling God.

Finally Bretheren, the time has now come in which I am to give you an answer to your request, and after having considered the greatness of the work and the above observations in connection with the encouragement you have given and after having taken the advice which so great an undertaking demanded, I find it my duty to answer you in the affirmative.

Provided that the Town shall furnish me as many cords of wood yearly at one Dollar per cord as shall be called for—and may the Lord grant that the union between us may be productive of the happiest effects, and last as life, and that time may serve to unite us still more in affections and Spiritual interests, And that we may ever have reason to give Glory to God. These from your Pastor Elect

JOHN TAYLOR.

Mr. Taylor was the thirteenth child of Eldad of Westfield, who was the fourteenth child of Edward, the first minister of that town. He was born Dec. 23d, 1762, just one hundred and twenty years after the birth of his grandfather; was a graduate of Yale 1784, and was ordained at Deerfield, Feb. 14th, 1787.

The division between Whig and Tory of the Revolution was fast dying out. The advent of Mr. Taylor brought an era of union and peace, at least to the north part of the town. The Constitution of the State had been put to the test and proved good. The great mass of the people were satisfied with it. The impractical followers of Shays had seen their weakness, wickedness and folly. The Constitution of the new nation was in practical operation. The yeomen of Deerfield, almost to a man, stood by both. The times were hard

*Shays Rebellion had rapidly spread since his invitation from the church, and had reached its height; and, in point of fact, it had received its death blow at Springfield, three weeks before the date of this letter.

indeed, but the people gradually softened them by adopting and practicing upon the key-note of the convention held here in September, 1783, that "Industry and frugality were the most hopeful means of relief."

The settlement of Mr. Taylor again brought to the front the question of a division of the town. Joseph Sanderson petitioned to be allowed to go, but April 2d, 1787, the town voted not to consent that he should be set off to Whately. A vote to the same effect was passed in December. Julius Allis, failing as we have seen to get relief through town action, applied to the General Court, and June 17th, 1791, an act was passed setting him off with his farm to Conway. In 1792 his delinquent ministerial taxes were all abated by Deerfield. The Bloody Brook people continued to agitate the matter of a separate fund to be at their own disposal. The trouble lay in the distance and not in the theology. April 23d, 1792, Nathan Frary and fourteen others petitioned for a town meeting:—

To see if the town will relinquish the Ministerial charges of a certain number of inhabitants of the South part of the town, and let them have the privilege to lay out, or expend the same where they can be best accommodated for preaching the ensuing year.

This effort failed, and during Mr. Taylor's ministry no further attempt in this direction was made to disturb the town or church relations.

Mr. Taylor was interested in literature and historic research, and doubtless did his part in developing a taste for those things for which Deerfield was somewhat noted in the half century following. He was also interested in the affairs of the town and the policy of the nation. He and his fellows looked upon Washington as the beacon by whose light all might be guided into a safe harbor. Deerfield men were not unknown to this great leader. One of her citizens had been urged by him to accept a commission in the army of the United States.

The sorrowful news of Washington's sudden death was sad-denying and stunning. Here as everywhere a great shadow of gloom darkened the land, and stately obsequies gave expression to the universal mourning. A fragmentary account of their celebration here has been found, which is as follows:—

1799, Dec. 29. The Citizens met at the Academy to make arrangements for 'Commemorating the Death of his Excellency Gen^l George Washington.'

Voted unanimously to invite Mr. Claudius Herrick to deliver a funeral oration adapted to that day

Voted That Dr. William S. Williams, Lieut Ep^s Hoyt, Col^o Dickinson, Capt Hoyt & Col^o Stebbins, be a Committee to make such arrangements and regulations for the proceeding on said Day as to them shall appear most suitable for the occasion

Voted That the Musical Society be requested to make preparations for singing on said Day an Anthem, or other Music, adapted to the Occasion:

Thursday, Jan. 9th, was set apart for the Commemoration, and there was a great gathering from all the towns about here. The militia were out in force, including the artillery company from Greenfield. The following report was made by the secretary, Dr. Wm. S. Williams:—

On Thursday, the ninth instant, the inhabitants of Deerfield and the neighboring towns assembled to pay a mournful tribute of respect to the man of the Age, the ever to be lamented Gen^l George Washington.

While Freedom lives his memory shall be dear,
And reap fresh honors each returning year.
Nations preserved shall yield immortal fame,
And endless ages bless his glorious name!

The morning opened with the tolling of the bell for one hour. At eleven o'clock the citizens and military assembled at the Academy Square and formed in procession in the following order:

Music of Col. Dickinsons Regt with Drums Muffled

Officer	{	Coulors half staff	}	Officer
Officer		fringed with Black		Officer
Officer		& the initials G. W.		Officer

Officers of the Continental Army

Military officers

Civil Magistrates

Orator of the Day and Clergy

Selectmen

Citizens.

The procession then marched towards the meetinghouse, music playing a dead march, troops in platoons, with arms reversed. When arrived at the meetinghouse, the troops formed in line and stood leaning on their arms reversed, while the procession passed them into the house. The pulpit was shrouded in black exhibiting the following inscription, 'His memory shall while freedom lives be the—' [illegible].

The procession formed as before and returned to the Academy. Minute guns were fired by Capt Smead's artillery while the procession was moving. Three volleys, fired by Capt. Nims's company, closed the proceedings.

1801. March 2d, the town voted to make "a grant of one hundred and twenty-five dollars to the Rev^d Mr John Taylor, in addition to his salary."

1802. March 1st, a committee of the town reports that "Mr Taylor has no objections to preaching 3 or 4 Sabaths in the year, at Muddy Brook if this Town are wanting it."

July 12th, Samuel Childs and nine others petition the selectmen to call a town meeting "To see if the Town will consent that the Rev^d John Taylor shall go on a Mission to the Westward agreeable to a request of the Missionary Society in the Co. of Hampshire." No record of any action on this petition is found. It may have been concluded all round that no formal action was necessary. He is soon after found on his field of labor in the far west. He made a three months' missionary tour to New York, visiting many settlements on the Mohawk and Black rivers. He went on horseback, traveling nearly one thousand miles, speaking five or six times a week, organizing churches, ordaining deacons, visiting schools, the sick and dying. With all this, he found time to visit noted historical places and natural curiosities, which he described; of some, drawings were made, notably, the ruins of ancient forts or mounds on the Sandy Creek, near Lake Ontario. A journal of this tour was published in the Documentary History of New York.

1803. March 7th, the town "Voted to make an addition of one hundred Dollars per Annum to Mr Taylors Salary during his Ministry here." These repeated donations to Mr. Taylor not only show a great affection for him, but also a prosperous community. In 1804 his voice failed. It is probable that the fatigue and hardships of Mr. Taylor's missionary tour, with the rough roads and bad weather, and with the scanty accommodations, or none at all, for suitable rest, together with the constant mental strain, made a serious inroad upon his constitution. His health gave out. "Debility of the lungs * * * effects caused by public speaking," he gives as a reason for being obliged to ask a dismissal.

The following item shows that the women of his flock gave practical tokens of their sympathy with the loved pastor in his misfortune, and also that the character of Deerfield women for "female benevolence" has not been changed by the decades that have passed since then. The Gazette, in its issue of April 17th, 1806, as an editorial personal,—a rare thing in those days,—tells how the ladies of Deerfield,—

Convened and presented to the wife of Mr. Taylor, with 96 runs of linen yarn. such examples of female benevolence, and such tokens of friendship towards the teachers of religion, we shall always notice with pleasure.

1806. June 9th, the church met at Mr. Taylor's house, and he made a formal request for a dismissal. This was accepted, and a committee chosen to ask the concurrence of the town in the dissolution of the ministerial connection; and ask also a grant of money for Mr. Taylor. June 16th, the town chose a committee of twelve,—

To wait upon Mr. Taylor and receive from him reasons for making him a grant, and also to report to this meeting what it will be proper to grant him. Who report the following, viz:

To the Inhabitants of the town of Deerfield—

Gentlemen As I have requested you to make me a grant, previously, to the dissolution of my ministerial connection with you, I would observe as reasons why I have entered a petition of this kind, first, unless I am assisted, I shall be in a state of trouble and distress soon after my Salary ceases; and shall be under a necessity of disposing of some part of the little landed property I possess, to satisfy demands now against me, which demands, as near as I am able to calculate amount to between three and four hundred dollars. 2, I am so reduced in health as to be unable to attend to any business, and I have a large family to support, and at present know of no way by which they can be supported.

For these reasons I have felt myself constrained to ask for your kind assistance

My friends, I do not wish to trouble you with a long statement of my unhappy condition—nor with many remarks, nor, indeed will my feelings admit of it, under such heavy frowns of Providence: you will readily conceive, that a man with a large family, who has passed the meridian of life—with a debilitated constitution—and unqualified for any new course of life—and not knowing what course to pursue for a livelihood—must experience the most painful sensations, however firm his reliance on a kind providence—And, on an occasion like the present, when gloomy prospects, indeed, are before me, your generosity will be duly appreciated.

Yours affectionately JOHN TAYLOR.

Deerfield June 16th 1806.

Voted to make a grant of six hundred and sixty two dollars to Mr. Taylor * * * provided he relinquish all claim to any salary from the present time.

A committee was chosen "to supply the Desk until the next December Meeting."

June 17th, the church met again and made arrangements for an ecclesiastical council to dissolve the connection between the church and its pastor. Aug. 6th, the council, consisting of Dr. Newton of Greenfield, Dr. Lyman of Hatfield, Emerson of Conway, Wells of Whately, and Packard of Shelburne, met and went through the ceremony, and Deerfield was again without a minister. His farewell sermon was read, I think, by Rev. James Taylor of Sunderland.

Mr. Taylor advertises for sale his "homestead 9 acres 26 acres pasture & arable land adjoining, 26 or 27 acres adjoining said pasture, of wood land * * * also 21 acres 1 mile north $\frac{1}{2}$ pasture $\frac{1}{2}$ wood." On leaving Deerfield, Mr. Taylor engaged in farming in Enfield, Conn., and became a leading man; was often elected Representative, and several times Speaker of the House. In 1817, he removed to Mendon, N. Y., and acted as a missionary. In 1822, he was settled as minister at Bruce, Mich. He was an ardent Abolitionist and established here a station on the "under ground rail-road" to Canada. Here he died, Dec. 20th, 1840. He married, June 14th, 1788, Elizabeth Terry of Enfield. Of his ten children seven, between the ages of seven and seventeen, were living when he left Deerfield. His published works that I have met with are:—

An Appendix to the Redeemed Captive, 1793.

Oration at Deerfield, July 4th, 1796.

Thanksgiving Sermon at Deerfield, 1798.

Journal of a Missionary Tour in New York, 1802.

Centennial Sermon at Deerfield, Feb. 28th, 1804.

Farewell Sermon, Aug. 6th, 1806.

During the closing years of Mr. Taylor's pastorate the dysentery, as an epidemic, raged fearfully in this and neighboring towns. Almost every family in which there were young children lost a member. From Mr. Taylor's imperfect bills of mortality for Deerfield, the following table is compiled:—

Year.	Total deaths.	By dysentery.
1802	19	8
1803	65	40
1804	15	4

During the same period Mr. Taylor records ten deaths by "old age." The average age of these ten was 85.3 years.

During the summer of 1806, Samuel Porter Williams preached here acceptably as a candidate, and Nov. 6th, 1806, a special town meeting was called, "To see if they will concur with the church in Said Town in giving Mr Samuel Williams an invitation to Settle in the work of the Gospel Ministry." "The town Concured with the church, and offered a Salary of $666.66, to be paid June 1st of every year as Mr Taylors was." It had been understood that Mr. Williams would accept the call, and great was the disappointment when a long letter was received from him, giving the reasons why he must decline the invitation. He writes, Dec. 15th, 1806:—

I considered the church in Deerfield well united in the faith and order of the Gospel & not therefore necessarily liable to be divided or disturbed by disappointment. The Town populous & Wealthy, Respectable & Respected & of consequence pecuniarily inviting; & Capable of commanding a pastor after their own Heart, on the other hand I behold the church & people of Mansfield, long broken & divided, wandering & prone to wander 'as sheep without a shepherd' yet eagerly & unanimously looking to me, as the only Instrument of future union, peace & Happiness. I viewed them with mingled emotions of gratitude, sympathy, & regard; & could a Christian do less? * * * You cannot but be sensible a great and Singular Sacrifice, both as respects my personal support, & the Education & welfare of my family.

The only comment found on this flattering but manly letter, on the conclusion of its reading in town meeting is:—"Voted to dissolve the meeting."

Mr. Williams was of good Connecticut valley stock, being descended from Rev. William Williams of Hatfield, and Rev. Solomon Stoddard of Northampton. He was born at Wethersfield, Ct., Feb. 22, 1779; was a graduate of Yale when seventeen. In 1805 he had a call to settle as colleague with Dr. Howard, but declined. He was ordained at Mansfield, Jan. 1st, 1807; he left there after about ten years; was settled pastor of the first Presbyterian church in Newburyport, Feb. 8th, 1821; died there Dec. 23d, 1826.

The condition of things in Deerfield as pictured by Mr. Williams was doubtless a correct one. The last decade of the 18th century had been marked by unusual mental and physical activity, as was indeed the whole period of Mr. Taylor's ministry. The Deerfield Academy had been established by the energy and generosity of its citizens. Men and women of high character presided over it, who responded heartily to the demands of the town, making the interests of society their own. The young men and women who attended the Academy were the pick of the best families in the county of Hampshire. Libraries and literary societies were in full operation. Military art was studied as a science, in connection with the great wars of Europe, and the subject was taught by a professor in the Academy and illustrated in the field; books on the subject were here written and published. Here was an active centre of operations for internal improvements; new roads were laid out and bridges built; the earliest canals in the country found here projectors, stout defenders and actual builders; manufactures were fostered and new avenues of trade opened. Men who had weathered the tempest of the Revolution were at the fore,—men of brain and brawn,—they were mostly farmers, cultivating their own broad acres, and thereby growing wealthy—as wealth was then reckoned. The philosophical reason of all this intellectual and material activity is not far to seek. Two distinct causes were in operation to bring it about. One was the natural rebound from Colonial vassalage and ministerial domination. The people were free. Along with liberty of political action came responsibilities which they were required to meet, and which they did meet, wisely and well, with clearer intellects and broadened views. But underlying all this and pervading everything, lay the second cause. It was the spirit of self-reliance, the habit of self-denial and self-control, the habit of industry, of frugality and economy, engendered by the hardness and suffering of the Seven Years War. A generation grew up with these cardinal virtues, under the teaching of stern necessity, when every man must stand or fall by himself; when the bare necessities of life were indeed hard earned, and the idler could not be tolerated; when every man, woman and child was enrolled in the service of productive industry. This generation was now in its prime. Their education had brought them safely through the danger of the formative period following the war. Their minds as well as their bodies had become emancipated from the traditions of authority, and the vigor and success with which they embraced their new opportunity, met and overcame difficulties, opened up new avenues for thought and business, was but the natural outcome of the circumstances. And if they made the wilderness blossom as the rose, they also set free thought in the high places among them, and set adrift on the sunless sea of oblivion, barks freighted with the enfeebling superstitions and harassing fears which had been their heritage; and the eternal backward set of the current carried these away forever.

The next minister of Deerfield was Samuel Willard. The settlement of Mr. Willard was such an important chapter in the theological history of the Connecticut Valley as to require more than a mere statistical notice.

When the ministers of the neighboring churches found out that the views of Mr. Willard differed from the hide-bound and musty theology handed down with little or no change from the Puritans, the alarm was at once sounded and means taken to suppress the threatened danger. Those men feared that the wedge of a more liberal belief once entered in the ministry of Mr. Willard, the breach would grow wider and wider, and the Pope-like dominion of the clergy grow weaker and weaker. They were wise in their day and generation, and the event proved they were true prophets. While in many churches hereabouts, the name and the creed, it may be, remain unchanged, the spirit and the life are changed utterly; and the old power of the priesthood is gone forever. Many of the churches whose pastors persecuted Mr. Willard, refusing him Christian fellowship and communion as a heretic, would to-day welcome him with open arms to their pulpits. There is a spirit of freedom and liberality of thought, as the term is now understood, which can recognize the earnest seeker after truth, although he may not be able to subscribe to every particular in their antiquated creeds. That this condition of things came about when it did and where it did, is owing largely to the advent of Mr. Willard in the Connecticut Valley in 1807. For a clear understanding of this movement, the actors and the motives must be made to appear as well as the results.

It would be folly to say that Mr. Willard made converts of his congregation in the few sermons he preached before his call. The field was ripe for the harvest, and his coming was timely. The spirit of free thought was abroad and recognized its champion. To be sure his settlement was the first important breach in the "Standing Order," his the first distinctive, out-spoken Unitarian church in the state, and here the first break in the fellowship of the Congregational body. But the distinctive dogma of the Unity was held to be of so little importance that some of his closest friends and supporters were Trinitarians to the day of their death.

Mr. Willard preached his first sermon here March 15th, 1807. May 18th, the church gave him a call to settle, by a vote of twenty-two yeas and one nay, while two wished to hear the candidate longer and one was not ready to act. At a town meeting called June 4th, 1807, "To determine whether they will concur with the Church in Said Town in giving the Rev^d Samuel Willard an invitation to settle in the work of the Gospel Ministry in the Town," "Voted in the Affirmative, Mem. Con." The salary was fixed at $666.66. July 6th he sends the church a letter of acceptance, and it is laid before the town the same day.

Rev. Samuel Willard's letter of acceptance;—

To the Church and to the People of the Town of Deerfield.

Respected Fathers, Brothers & Friends The vote of the Church, which was given on the 18th of May last, inviting me to labor steadily in this part of God's vineyard, & the concurring vote of the Town given on the 4th of June, together with the vote of the same date making provision for my support in case of an affirmative answer & settlement among you, were duly made known to me by your respective committees.

The subject is undoubtedly a very important one, and deserved the most attentive and mature consideration. It is the more important because the connection between a minister & people is in a measure indissoluble. It is true the great Head of the Church may in various ways dissolve the sacred bond. But 'What God has joined let no man put asunder.'

Considering the lasting effects of my present determination, I have enquired whether this be the most suitable place for the exercise of my humble talents; whether I might here do most for the aid and comfort of my fellow men & for the honor of Him whom we are all bound to 'glorify in our bodies and in our spirits.' Connected with this is the question whether I might here expect to live in harmony and contentment.

I have now, my friends, come to a decision, which has I hope been formed under the influence of divine wisdom, & will meet the approbation of that Being, whose approbation should be our object in all that we do; & I do hereby accept your invitation to settle among you in the office of a Christian minister on the terms you propose. Sensible of the arduous undertaking and of my present defects, I ask your prayers to the Author of all good, that I may be abundantly furnished with ministerial gifts. And should it please God to unite us in the sacred relation of minister & people, may he by his continual presence & blessing make the connection conducive to our mutual happiness and spiritual improvement; which is the fervent prayer of

Your Servant in the Lord And Companion in the Duties and hopes of religion SAMUEL WILLARD

July 5, 1807.

Dea. Justin Hitchcock, H. Wright Strong and Samuel Childs were made a committee to confer with Mr. Willard. They agreed upon Aug. 12th as the time for his ordination, "and that the ordaining council consist of nine churches (together with what Mr. Willard shall choose). The selectmen were made a committee to provide for the ordination, and pay all expenses, which are to be Assessed" in the next Minister's Tax. July 6th, the action of the town being known, the church,—

Voted the following churches by their Pastor & Delegates be applied to for the Ordaining Council, viz: The Church of Portsmouth N.H. the Church in Petersham; the Church in Amherst; the Church in Greenfield; the Church in Hatfield; the Church in Whately; the Church in Conway; the Church in Shelburne.

Rev. Mr. Taylor was invited later.

The council met August 11th, all the churches named above except Portsmouth, being represented. A long and searching examination of the candidate was made, during which his confession of faith was laid before it. At the adjournment of the council it became evident that ordination was to be refused Mr. Willard, and great excitement followed. It was on this adjournment, or on that of the next day, that the boys,—as I was told by one of them, Jona. A. Saxton, then seventeen years old—expressed their indignation by bowling stones at the shins of the members of the council, as they were crossing the Common between Dea. Arms's and the meetinghouse. As this gentle hint did not have the desired effect, other measures were taken. On the 12th, the council spent most of the day in examining the candidate, and in debate on the ordination; and about 5 o'clock a large number of the citizens appeared before it with the following address:—

To the Ecclesiastical Counsel here convened—Fathers Being unexpectedly alarmed with the report of your declining to proceed in the ordination: which was the object of your meeting: We members of the church and congregation in this place: Seize this early Opportunity to present ourselves before you that you may read in our Countenances a regret which we have no language capable of Delin-enating: We hope, nay, may we not say we trust this report is altogether premature; but such is the agitation which the slightest apprehension of its truth has occasioned in our breasts that we are thus as it were, Involuntarily Constrained to Discover the emotions which have arrested us if Reverend Gentlemen, our fears are unhappily founded in truth, permit us to ask a moments Suspension of the Dread Decission: permit us first to enquire what must be our condition what conceivable measure can possibly avert our Destruction; with an upright zeal for the establishment of the Instituted means of Christian Instruction we had Selected for our Pastor, a [young?] Gentlemen whose talents learning and Christian Character Promised eminent usefulness to the Church, we have had opportunity of witnessing his graces in publick and private, and many of us, from a personal attendance upon his examination, can express a full Satisfaction in the correctness of his faith; from expectations thus raised, attachments have been formed, and affections excited the cords of which cannot be severed without a Struggle little Inferior to the Pangs of Dissolving nature—We are persuaded, we feel that on your final Decission, rests the preservation or Destruction of our Dearest and most Sacred Interest—Pause—Reverend Fathers for Heavens sake—Pause.

Deerfield August 12, 1807.

Reading between the lines of this crude and excited address, one may see the spirit of independence, which a few hours later rose in rank rebellion against the domination of the priesthood, and gave the man of their choice a new call to their pulpit. This paper gave vent to the indignation of the elders, as the rock practice did that of the boys. One availed as much as the other. The fiat had gone forth and the “result” was a fixed fact. I have never seen any allusion to this appeal in any record or report of this day’s action. This copy is found in a MS. pamphlet, containing also the Result and the creed of Mr. Willard, which is given below:—

MR. WILLARD’S CONFESSION OF FAITH.

I believe in the existence of one GOD, invisible, eternal, unchangeable, self-existent and independent, omnipotent and omniscient, perfectly just, and unalterably good, and infinite in every glorious & amiable attribute.

I believe that GOD is the Creator and the continual preserver of all things, visible and invisible.

I believe in the absolute sovereignty of GOD; that he has a right to do his will in the army of heaven and among the inhabitants of the earth; and that he does, indeed, exercise a moral government over all creatures that are capable of moral action.

I believe that man is a subject of this government; that being a dependent creature of God, intelligent and free, he is accountable to him for all his actions and affections.

I believe that man was created in the image of him that made him, innocent and happy; but that he early fell from this state by sin, and involved the whole human race in ruin.

I believe it was utterly impossible for any to save themselves from this deplorable condition; 'that every mouth must be stopped;' and that it is through the free and sovereign grace of God, that one of the human race is ever saved.

I believe that the grace of God is dispensed to the guilty through the mediation of his only begotten Son, who existed in the bosom of the Father before the world began; who was the 'brightness of his Father's glory and the express image of his person,' 'by whom all things were created in heaven and on earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones or dominions or principalities or powers;' and between whom and absolute, underived divinity,* there is an ineffable, incomprehensible, and mysterious union, described by himself, in the words, 'I am in the Father and the Father in me,' and by the Apostle, 'in him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily.'

To execute the office of Mediator, I believe the Lord of Life laid aside the brightness of his glory, descended from heaven, assumed our nature, and was born in a miraculous manner.

I believe that he yielded perfect obedience to the divine law; such obedience as no mere man since the fall ever did; that in his life he endured many sorrows, and that he finally suffered a most ignominious and painful death on the cross, to make expiation for the sins of the world, and purchase them pardon, reconciliation and immortal bliss.

I believe that as Christ 'was delivered for our offences, so he was raised again for our justification;' that he has ascended into heaven, and is seated at the right hand of the Father, far above all principality and power, and that he is head over all things to the Church.

I believe in the immortality of the soul, and the resurrection of the body.

I believe in a future judgment and a righteous retribution of rewards and punishments according to the different characters of men.

I believe that faith and holiness are necessary to future happiness, and that all, who on the great day are found destitute of these, will go away into everlasting punishment.

I believe that all who are finally acquitted, will be justified, not by works, but by faith; that although the law is and ever must be the rule of life, the gospel is the rule by which all, who believe, will hereafter be judged.

I believe that we are indebted to the grace of God for the qualifications, as well as the provision for future blessedness; that we are dependent on him for spiritual life; that those who follow Christ in the regeneration, are born not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of GOD; that the operation of the Divine Spirit is necessary to enlighten our minds with the knowledge of religious truth, to subdue our stubborn wills, sanctify our affections, and bring us to embrace the offers of mercy as they are made in the gospel.

I believe that we cannot of ourselves do anything, by which we can in the least promote our salvation; that independently of the gracious promise we can never have the slightest claim to the divine favor; that when we have done our utmost, we shall still be unprofitable servants, who might justly have been forever excluded from the mansions of bliss, and that it is through the atonement and merits of JESUS CHRIST and in no other way, that we are to be saved.

I believe in the divine inspiration of those writings, which are usually styled the sacred scriptures. I believe they contain a revelation of the doctrines we are to believe, and the duties we are to perform, or in other words, that they are to be the rule of our faith and practice; that it should be our great concern to understand them, and that when we have reason to think we do understand them, we should submit without reserve to their dictates, however mysterious: and I believe that as the scriptures are the proper rule of faith, so they are a sufficient rule.

I believe it to be the will of GOD that his people, should in all ages, be separate from the world, and that from the earliest generations he has always had a church on earth.

I believe that the privilege of admission into the visible kingdom of GOD, is free to all; that in this respect there is no difference between Jew and Greek, male and female, infant and adult.

I believe that the ordinances of Baptism and the Lord's Supper were instituted by the great Head of the Church, to be observed by his followers to the end of time; the former as a token of admission into his visible kingdom, the latter as a memorial of his sufferings and death.

I believe in the divine appointment of an order of men, whose peculiar duty it is to preach the word, administer the ordinances and execute the discipline of the Church; that they are to be consecrated to the holy work by prayer and imposition of hands, and that the succession is to continue to the end of the world.

Thus I believe, while I pray GOD to enlighten me by his good Spirit, to preserve or deliver me from error, and teach me all important truth thro' his rich grace in JESUS CHRIST.

THE RESULT.

DEERFIELD, Aug. 11th, 1807.

AGREEABLE to letters missive from the Church in Deerfield, were present at the house of Capt. Seth Nims, the Rev. Roger Newton, D. D. of Greenfield, the Rev. John Emerson, Conway, Wm. Billings Delegate—the Rev. Rufus Wells, Whately, Maj. Phinehas Frary, Delegate—the Rev. Joseph Lyman, D. D., Hatfield, Mr. John Chester, Delegate—the Rev. John Taylor, Enfield, Con.—the Rev. David Parsons, D. D. Amherst, Deacon Seth Coleman, Delegate—the Rev. Jesse Appleton, Hampton, N. H.—the Rev. Theophilus Packard, Shelburne, Mr. Robert Hubbard, Delegate—Rev. Festus Foster, Petersham, Deacon Josiah Willard, Wm. Willard, jr. and Ezekiel Bowker, Delegates; who formed themselves into an Ecclesiastical Council by choosing the Rev. Roger Newton, D. D. Moderator, and the Rev. Theophilus Packard, Scribe.

The Council was opened by a prayer by the Moderator; on a motion made, the Council invited Ministers of the Gospel, Candidates for the Ministry, and Students in Divinity, to be present with them as spectators. The Council having examined the records of the Church and Town of Deerfield, relative to the invitation and proposals to Mr. Willard to settle with them in the Gospel Ministry, and the answer returned by Mr. Willard to them, and having gained satisfaction of the regularity and propriety of both, and also of his credentials as a member of the Church and his license to preach the Gospel, proceeded to the examination. Voted to adjourn to six o'clock tomorrow morning.

Wednesday, 12th Aug.

The Council met according to adjournment: Dea. Jonathan Leavitt, Delegate from the Church in Greenfield, joined the Council. The examination of the Pastor elect being finished, the Council appointed the Rev. J. Lyman, D. D. and the Rev. John Emerson, as a committee to assist the scribe in draughting a result. The committee presents the following Draught.

That the Council having attentively and patiently examined the Pastor elect, as to his religious doctrines, found him to be a gentleman of rich talents and acquirements in theological knowledge, of a most amiable temper and disposition, and of an exemplary frankness and sincerity in communicating his opinions. But yet, after a long and patient investigation, the Council did not discover in him that belief of the true and essential Divinity of our LORD JESUS CHRIST, nor those sentiments respecting the entire moral depravity of fallen men, while in a state of unregeneracy, nor of the supernatural, special and effectual influence of the holy spirit, nor of the sovereign gracious election of God in choosing believers to everlasting life, nor of the certain perseverance of all true believers in faith and holiness thro' the influences of the spirit and the promises of the covenant of grace, which doctrines they seriously and deliberately believe to be contained in the Gospel of Christ, and to be not only important but necessary to be believed and taught for the ingathering of souls to the great Shepherd and Bishop of souls.

The Council therefore, in fidelity to their Lord and Master, cannot proceed to separate him to the work of the Gospel Ministry over the Church of Christ and the Congregation of God's people in this town. The Council most sincerely lament their own disappointment and grief which this decision must occasion to the Church and people in this place. With ardent affection they commend the Pastor elect to the grace of God and the guidance of his holy spirit, and pray that this heritage of our LORD JESUS may be the charge of his watchful providence, that they may be happily united in christian doctrine and affection, and may by their prayers and endeavours obtain a Pastor, in God's time, to feed them with knowledge and understanding in divine things, and that they might be kept by the mighty power of God through faith unto their final and eternal salvation.

The above Draught was reported and accepted by eleven members of the Council, but five members not having the same views of the candidate's sentiments upon the above points, with the consent of their Fathers and Brethren, would have proceeded to the ordination. Two members of the Council being Brothers of the Pastor elect did not vote. By the direction of the Council.

R. NEWTON,
Moderator.

The next act in the drama is found on the church records. Aug. 12th, "The Council having met on the 11th of Aug did not see fit to ordain Mr Willard the reasons for which appear in their result." "Voted to desire the Committee on Supply to hire Mr Willard to preach here longer" and voted "to desire Mr Willard to meet the Church Aug 18th." At the meeting Aug. 18th, voted that "the profession of faith made by Mr Willard is satisfactory" twenty-eight yeas, eight nays, two not voting. "Voted to renew the invitation to Mr Willard" twenty-seven yeas, twelve nays.

The matter was next taken up by the town. As soon as the action of the church was sent in, the selectmen issued the following warrant:—

HAMPSHIRE SS To the Constable of the Town of Deerfield in said County Greeting

Wheras a majority of the ecclesiastical Council, which was convened in this Town, for the purpose of ordaining M^r Samuel Willard to the work of the Gospel ministry here, on the twelfth day of August current, did then decide and determine that said Council would not proceed to ordain said M^r Willard to said work—and wheras the Church in this town, at a church meeting held since the decission of said Council, viz^t on the seventeenth [18th] day of August current, did vote and agree to continue their invitation to said M^r Willard to settle in the work of the Gospel Ministry in this Town.

You are therefore hereby required in the name of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, forthwith to notify and warn the Free holders and other Inhabitants of the Town of Deerfield aforesaid, legally qualified to vote in Town Affairs to assemble at the Meeting House in said Town on Friday the twenty eighth day of August current at two of the clock in the afternoon of said day—then and there after a moderator is chosen to regulate said meeting:

^{1stly} To determine whether they will again agree with Mr Willard upon a time for his ordination to the work of the ministry in this Town, and the number the ordaining Council shall consist of, and act thereon.

Other articles provide for carrying out any vote passed on this cardinal one. At the meeting under this warrant,—

On the 1st Article first clause voted that the question be Determined by yeas and nays; which being called for, there were one hundred and fourteen yeas, viz^t

A committee was chosen to consult with Mr. Willard and take all necessary steps for his ordination if he accepts the call.

Sept. 1st, the church voted to unite with Mr. Willard in the choice of another council. Beside those named below as composing the 2nd council, the following were invited :

Rev. Dr. David Osgood of Medford, Rev. Dr. Abiel Holms of Cambridge, Rev. Dr. Daniel Chaplin of Groton, Rev. Dr. John Barnard of Salem, Rev. Abiel Abbott of Beverly, Rev. Dr. John Reed of West Bridgewater. The committee having charge of the affairs of the ordination were Dea. Jona. Arms, H. Wright Strong, Dea. Justin Hitchcock, Ebenezer H. Williams, and Capt. Seth Nims.

The second council which met, Sept. 22nd, was made up as follows :—

Lincoln, Rev. Charles Stearns and Thomas Wheeler, delegate.
Concord, " Ezra Ripley " Samuel Ripley, " Wendell, " Joseph Kilburn " Abra. Stone, " Warwick, " Samuel Reed " Medad Pomroy, " Berlin, " Reuben Puffer " Stephen Barley, "
Western, Samuel Kendall, D. D., Nathan Warren, Amos Bancroft, Ebenezer Hobbes, delegates.
Lancaster, Rev. Nathaniel Thayer, and Jonas Fairbanks, delegate.
Bolton, " Isaac Allen, and Jonathan Ives, "

Stearns was chosen moderator and Thayer scribe. They "voted that the deliberations of this council be as public as this meetinghouse will admit."

The condition of the Deerfield people, which has been before pictured, may perhaps apply more particularly to those in the northern part, for it is a curious fact to note, that the division was on territorial as well as theological lines; while Mr. Willard had considerable support in the southern part of the town, the opposition was practically all from that section. In the nay votes given above, there was but one man from the Wapping and Bars zone, and but one north of that. This one was in a chronic quarrel with the church, and several times had been called before it for cause.

At the sitting of the council, Sept. 22d, a remonstrance was presented by some who objected to the ordination of Mr. Willard,—

On the ground of his not believing some which they received as essential doctrines—The essential divinity of Jesus Christ. The total depravity of the human heart, and Its natural enmity against God.

These objections not being sufficiently weighty to prevail, Mr. Willard was ordained by this council, Sept. 23d, 1807; six weeks after his first rejection. Before the end of the year a large number of communicants living in Bloody Brook, withdrew from the church. Some united with the church in Sunderland and some with that of Whately. The next step of the aggrieved south end brethren followed naturally. They wished to shake the dust off their feet on the path that led towards the heretical preacher and his adherents. It was for a division of the town:—

1808, April 4, Art. 4. To see if the Town of Deerfield will agree to divide s^d Town, as it shall be set forth in the petition of the Inhabitants in the South part of the Town. [Warrant.]

Art. 4. After hearing the Petition mentioned therein, and protests against the same, voted in the negative. [Record.]

[This petition was for] a Division of the Town by a line running east and west through the territorial centre thereof, parrallel to the north line of Whately * * * the South part to be a Separate Town by such name as may be thought propper.

The following is a list of the signers to the petition. For convenience of reference I have arranged them alphabetically.

Allis, Eber	Blodgett, Timothy	Hawks, Seth
Amsden, John	Clap, Elisha	" Waitstill
Anderson, John	Cooley, Abner	Hubbard, Giles, Jr.
" William	" Azariah	Johnson, Asa
" William, Jr.	" Eli	Locke, Jonas

Barns, John	Graves, Zebediah	Tryon, Calvin
Billings, Jesse	Hale, James	" William
" Timothy	Hawks, Asa	Whitney, Stephen
Blodgett, Joseph	" Elias	" Stephen, 2d

Residents south of the proposed line presented a remonstrance, setting forth at length the reasons moving them:—

1st Heavy taxes in the commencement [and in the future of a new town] tho somewhat less, will far exceed our ability to pay, or what we are now obliged to pay, and which in these dark and oppressive times are sufficiently burthensome. Such an increase will prevent commercial or mechanical men from settling here.

2^d [Rivalry, each trying to obtain] more than is severally due, will create animosity and contention, thus destroying social and congenial intercourse of friends and families.

3^d [Those who disagree with Mr. Willard can be accommodated at Sunderland,] but should they give a cool and dispassionate consideration to the subject, duly know and weigh it, they would have the firmest reliance and satisfaction in Rectitude of the church, and the character, purity and ability of the Minister

4th The town has but 1500 inhabitants part of them Baptists who claim exemption from the Ministers tax

[The expenses of two towns would burden both The head petitioner said he was] always willing to pay his ministers tax, but does not wish to pay 25 where he pays 8

5th Mutual taxation of non-residents land will lead to trouble, suspicions and discontent in assessing and Collecting taxes. Lastly, While those Zealously engaged for the division, hardly amount to one Eighth [of the whole, they are called upon to make] an oppressive sacrifice and loss without any comparable benefit.

This was signed by Ebenezer Stebbins and thirty-two others whose names are alphabetically arranged:—

Allen, Asaph	Cobb, Marcus	Morton, Justin
" Caleb	Dumram, (?) Sylvanus	" Lewis

[Another remonstrance] We the Subscribers non-resident proprietors of land in the South part of said Town now petitioned to be sett off as a Town beg leave, on account of the great increase of taxes, and great inconvenience of paying them to two Separate Collectors, to protest against, and dissent to a division of said town.

The next move was for a division of the money raised on the ministerial tax. After hearing "the petition of Sundry Persons in the south part of the Town respecting the ministry taxes, voted to dismiss the article and the Petition mentioned."

This petition was dated Feb. 25, 1809. Its request was to draw their proportional part of the ministry taxes from the town treasury "for the term of 3 years," to pay some preacher they should regularly employ, claiming a "Right" under the 3d Article in the Bill of Rights to pay their money where they can "Conscientiously and Conveniently attend."

"We are conscious in our own minds," they say, "of a very essential difference in opinion from the Rev Mr Willard on some of the most important doctrines of the Gospel, & consequently cannot derive that Instruction & Edification by attending on his Ministry we otherwise can." The petitioners were:—

Allis, Eber	Cooley, [Abner?]	Jewett, Reuben
Amsden, John	" Azariah	Johnson, Asa
Anderson, Solomon	" Eli	McCall, Elihu
" William	" Russell	Morris? John
Arms, Eliakim	Dickinson, Levi	" ? William

" Elijah	" Nathan, Jr.	Richards, Bela
" Eliphas	Graves, Zebediah	" Ephram
" Erastus	Hale, James	" William
Barnard, Elihu	Hawks, Asa	Tryon, William
Barns, John	" Elias	" Zebina
Blodgett, Joseph	" Waitstill	Whitney, Stephen
" Timothy	Hubbard, Giles
Clap, Elisha	" Joseph

Matters remained quiet on this field until 1817, when a movement was made for a territorial parish, which, after considerable trouble was arranged to mutual satisfaction.

Besides the measures already spoken of there were more successful attempts to disturb the south line of the town on other than theological grounds.

1789. Joseph Sanderson petitioned the town for its consent that he with his farm be set off to Conway. By votes April 2d and Dec. 3d the town voted "not to consent."

Nov. 15th, 1806, Thomas Sanderson, son of Joseph, Justin Morton and Ebenezer Barnard asked the consent of the town to be set off to Whately by these bounds:—

Beginning at Conway line at the northwest corner of No 16 in the Long Hill West Division, running east on the north line of said lot to the east end of Justin Mortons land then South to the South line of Capt William Tryons land, thence easterly on said line to the County road that leads from Deerfield to Hatfield, then Southerly on said road to the old dividing line between Deerfield and Whately.

1806. Dec. 1st, the town voted not to grant the request. Failing here the men appealed to a higher Court, and in January, 1808, sent a petition to the legislature asking to be set off to Whately by the above-named bounds. An order of notice was served on Deerfield and Whately for a hearing April 19th, 1808. In a warrant for a town meeting May 2d, Article 1 was,—

To hear the petition of Thomas Sanderson and Justin Morton to the Gen. Court of this Commonwealth to be set off to the Town of Whately and the order of said Court thereon, and to take such measures respecting the same as they shall judge expedient.

Voted that John Williams Esq, Ephraim Williams Esq, Dr W. S. Williams be a Committee to draught a Remonstrance against the prayer of said Petitioners to be presented to the Gen. Court.

Voted that the Representatives from this town be instructed to oppose the prayer of said Petition in the Gen. Court and to present the Remonstrance.

1809. The petitioners do not give up so, and May 8th they make another petition to the town for its consent that they be "set off from the town of Deerfield in order that we may obtain an act of the Legislature of this Commonwealth to be annexed to the Town of Whately." They send the same petition to the General Court again, except that the line of division is defined as beginning "at Conway line at the northwest corner of Thomas Sandersons farm." "Ordered in the Senate June 9th, that an order of notice be served on both towns before the last Wednesday of the 2d Session of this General Court."

Dec. 9th, the town chose Dr. W. S. Williams, Ephraim Williams Esq., and Maj. Epaphras Hoyt, a committee to remonstrate against granting the prayer of the petitioners, and the representatives were directed to use their influence against it. In spite of their influence, however, the deed was done by an act of March 5th, 1810. I have heard it said that "politics did it," but I have not made the connection. A new administration came into power that year and Deerfield was on the wrong side, giving her vote for the unsuccessful candidate for governor. So there may be something in the story, that the votes on this territory would hold the balance of power in Whately and give that town to the administration.

1810, Dec. 3d, in town meeting:—

Art 8 to hear the Petition of Seth and Ebenezer Clark to have all their land Lying in this Town sett off from this Town and annexed to the Town of Conway.

Voted on the 8th Article to consent to the Annexation to Conway of all the Land in Deerfield which lies Southerly of the North Line of Lot N^o 16, in the Long Hill West Division, so called, and West of the West Line of a tract of Land which was set off from Deerfield and annexed to Whately by an act of the General Court passed on the fifth day of March last.

The Clarks petitioned the General Court to ratify this act.

June 11th, 1811, the legislature granted their petition and added a lot of land in the tract set off to Whately the year before, and set the whole to Conway, and set another piece of Sanderson's land from Deerfield to Whately, knocking the town lines about hap-hazard to suit the land owners.

To conclude these southwest corner migrations of lands from town to town, I add the following:—

[April 4th, 1814, in town meeting] voted that the Town will consent that all the lands in Deerfield lying Westerly and Southerly of the east & north line of the road leading from Whately to Conway, by Thomas Sandersons, should be set off from Deerfield & annexed to the Town of Whately.

The Ministerial Fund—The money received in 1760 for that part of the ministerial lot sold to “tradesmen” [see ante, p. 200.] was of course devoted to the support of the ministry. That was doubtless the nucleus of the present “Ministerial Fund” belonging to the “First Congregational Society in Deerfield.” I am unable to give a connected account of its increase and history, but will make a contribution towards it. Aug. 5th, 1775, by vote of the town, “David Sexton Esq, Lt Catlin, Maj. Dickinson Lt Barnard & Mr David Hoit, were appointed a Committee to devise Ways & Means, to Establish a Fund for the Support of the Ministry in said Town, and to make report to s^d Town.” I hear nothing more of this matter until March 1st, 1802. There was an article in the warrant for the town meeting:—

To determine whether the Interest of the Obligations in the Town Treasury, Sequestered for the use of the Ministry Shall be Annually put upon Interest until a sufficient fund shall be funded in addition to the Lands Sequestered for that purpose to pay the ministers Salary.

Voted to make application for authority to take such action. “An Act authorizing the Town of Deerfield to loan the Interest of Certain Monies in the Treasury of said Town,” was the result of this application. In 1803, the town chose Dr. W. S. Williams, Solomon Williams, Epaphras Hoyt, Asahel Wright, and Seth Nims, a committee to make the proper Investments of the Ministerial fund under this act. These men served until 1816, when they resigned.

There seems to have been other sums in the treasury devoted to the same purpose and it being thought best to consolidate this with what was already sequestered, the legislature was again appealed to. Feb. 11th, 1807, an act was passed entitled, "An Act in addition to an Act Entitled an Act authorizing the Town of Deerfield to loan certain monies in the Treasury of said Town." April 6th, 1807, there was an article in the warrant for the town meeting,—

To determine whether they will Sequester a sum not exceeding $500, of any monies in the Town Treasury, in addition to the money already Sequestered in said Town for the support of the Ministry, and on loan for the purpose of raising a Fund Sufficient to Support the Ministry of Deerfield, agreeable to an Act of the General Court of this Commonwealth passed Feb 11 1807.

By a unanimous vote the town "determined" to do this.

A petition dated Jan. 30th, 1817, signed by forty-nine citizens of the south part of the town, was presented at the March meeting 1817. It prayed for the consent of the town that a "minister may be called and settled to preach among them" at such place as they may select, his salary to be paid from the town treasury. It was signed,—

March 4th, 1817, Negatived.

The next move is May 3d, 1817, in a petition of Abner Cooley and fifty-four others to the legislature for a territorial parish.

Bounded North by a line beginning at the South East corner of Lot No forty-four in the East Mountain Division so called on the West bank of Conn River, thence Westerly to a stake and stones on the top of the Mountain East of the Valley, thence westerly to a stake and stones in the fence in the east side of Simeon Childs home lot, on the West side of the road leading from Wapping Village so called to Sunderland, thence west ten degrees south to the South West corner of Simeon Childs farm; thence westerly on the meadow fence to the County road leading from Deerfield to Hatfield at the north west corner of a farm lately owned by John Williams Esq deceased; thence southerly on said road last mentioned as far as the north line of John Amsdens home lot; thence West twenty seven degrees North fifty two rods; thence north fifty four degrees East twenty eight rods and five links to the North East corner of said Amsdens farm; thence north fifty two degrees West—one hundred and seventy six rods to the South East Corner of a Lot recorded to Samuel Dickinson; then Westerly to Conway line [to be called the] South Parish in Deerfield—[They also ask for] their just proportion of all the Ministerial lands and monies funded for the use of the Ministry in Deerfield.

This dividing line might well be termed a theological line; it twisted and zigzagged to take in or leave out the land of men according to their affiliation. An order of notice on this petition was voted in the Senate, June 4th, 1817. A town meeting was held Dec. 1st, 1817, when Ephraim Williams, Pliny Arms and Rufus Saxton were chosen a committee to present a Remonstrance to the General Court against granting the petition for a territorial parish.

This committee drew up a long memorial, in which they say that while the petitions "assign as the principal, if not the only reason of their request" to be their distance from the place of worship, "it is a well known fact, which it would be in vain to attempt to conceal," that the real trouble lies in the fact that they are taxed to support a minister with whose doctrines they are dissatisfied. The committee represents that a similar condition of affairs would exist in the new territorial parish asked for, many there preferring to retain their connection with the old congregation.

To the request for a share of the Sequestered land, and Ministerial Fund, the memorialists object to giving up any of the lands, or funds arising from their sale in 1760, but are willing to concede a right in that part of the fund established by the legislative act of Feb. 11th, 1807. They say,—

There is now in the South part of the town, only the families of Arms, Frary & Stebbins, who were here at the time of the Sequestration of the lands, none who shared in the perils & misfortunes of the first settlement, except those. Two of these are not petitioners. It was perhaps the exposedness of the town, which made it necessary to create inducements for ministers to settle here.

George Arms and Seth Nims, town assessors, certify,—

That the total area of the town is 18832 acres; unimprovable 1643; Roads 370; water 520; improved & capable of improvement, 16299; of this, 1597 acres belong to the Baptists, nearly, if not all, north of the proposed line,— which is exempt from levy for the ministerial tax. Abner Cooley and his fellow petitioners are taxed on 4193 acres; non-petitioners on that territory are taxed on 3689 acres, by which it appears that the demand is far from general.

After many meetings and much discussion, a committee was chosen by the town to confer with a committee of the petitioners and report the result. The committee made a long report April 6th, 1818, that they had made the petitioners, “three different propositions, either of which if acceded to by the Town and the Petitioners,” they believe to be an eligible method of settling the difficulty. At an adjourned meeting, May 4th, one of the propositions was accepted, and June 30th, 1818, the Second Congregational Society in Deerfield was organized at Bloody Brook; not on the territorial basis as asked for, but as a “Poll Parish.” The Ministerial Fund was divided to mutual satisfaction. Money had occasionally been voted to hire preaching at Bloody Brook during the season of bad traveling, and President Timothy Dwight of Yale, then a young man, was employed to preach there before the close of the Revolutionary war. A meetinghouse was raised there July 12th, 1820, and dedicated Jan. 18, 1821. Further notice of the organization will be found later.

The Brick Meetinghouse. Feb. 17th, 1823, the town voted not to repair the old meetinghouse; “voted to build a new meetinghouse provided a sufficient sum be raised by subscription the subscribers to be reimbursed by the sale of pews & the old Meetinghouse.” The house was to be placed near the old one unless some other suitable site be purchased “by voluntary subscriptions of individuals, somewhere on the Meetinghouse hill.”

“Voted that the size of the Meetinghouse shall not exceed the size of the new Meetinghouse in Springfield lately erected by Jonathan Dwight, Esq.”

To buy a site for the new structure and so save the common from a permanent incumbrance, forty men and one woman, Persis Sheldon, subscribed $530 and bought the site now occupied by the brick meetinghouse. The business was pushed at once, Asa Stebbins, William Russell, Pliny Arms, Orlando Ware and Quartus Hawks were appointed a building committee with ample powers. A guarantee fund was provided to carry on the work by the following named citizens, the money to be refunded through a sale of pews:—

Asaph Allen,	$ 80	Seth Nims,	$120
Christopher T. Arms,	60	William Russell,	500
Pliny Arms,	120	Asa Stebbins,	500
Samuel Catlin,	75	Orlando Ware,	500
Thomas W. Dickinson,	120	Samuel Willard,	150
Aaron Fuller,	50	Ebenezer H. Williams,	500
John Hawks,	100	Ephraim Williams,	500
Quartus Hawks,	500	Ralph Williams,	80
Zur Hawks,	50	Solomon Williams,	120
Charles Hitchcock,	30	John Wilson,	100
Augustus Lyman,	75	Asahel Wright,	50
Edwin Nims,	60	Judah Wright,	60

Some idea of the substantial character of the house they built may be gained from one bill of timber furnished by Samuel Moore of Warwick. It contained sixty-five pieces of "Good Sound white pine timber, hewed in a workmanlike manner, suitable to the erection of a Meetinghouse." Among these were,—

8 sticks, 46 feet long,	8 x 8,	5	"	58	"	"	13 x 9,
1 " 55 " "	12 x 10,	2	"	66	"	"	10 x 8,
4 " 56 " "	12 x 10,	4	"	66	"	"	8 x 8,
2 " 56 " "	12 x 12,	2	"	58	"	"	12 x 12.

The transportation problem I will not attempt to solve. The price, delivered, was "ten dollars for every hundred cubic foot of said timber."

The corner-stone was laid with appropriate ceremonies June 1st, 1824. Under it was put a brief relation of the settlement of the town with notice of the former meeting-houses, and settled ministers, prepared by Col. Elihu Hoyt. By means of this paper the exact site of the meetinghouse of 1729 can be determined. The new edifice was raised July 24th and was dedicated Dec. 22d, 1824, Mr. Willard preaching a sermon on the occasion. There were one hundred pews. On the lower floor seventy-eight were appraised at $6,034; seven were reserved for the needy, the rest sold at auction for $6,068.88. In the gallery were twenty-two pews appraised at $782; three were reserved, the rest brought $818. March 1st, 1731, the town voted to purchase a brass cock and balls for the meetinghouse, not to exceed in price £20. Jonathan Hoyt was chosen a committee to procure it. The cock was renovated when the meetinghouse was repaired in 1768, by "gilding, rectifying Bruisies, and fixing new Globe eyes." In 1824, with feathers newly dressed, the old watchman was again restored to his accustomed perch, where he still remains keeping watch and ward over the shifting wind, having seen the generations of men come and go for more than one hundred and sixty years.

The completed structure was of brick, with a graceful spire of wood, finely fitting its location. It stands to-day, as it stood the day the workmen ceased from their labors, with an air of sturdy independence and strength, well befitting the generation of its builders.

Mr. Williams, our first minister, put his heart and his work into the building of a new meetinghouse in 1729, but he never beheld the completed work of his hands, nor did his third successor, Mr. Willard, ever see with bodily eyes the next meetinghouse, built in 1824, which he had been so instrumental in projecting. He had gradually lost the use of his eyes, until in 1819 he became totally blind. This, however, did not prevent satisfactory parochial work, which he continued until 1829. After a short residence in Hingham he came back to the scene of his labors, where he died Oct. 8th, 1859, aged eighty-three. From the first Mr. Willard took an active part in the affairs of the town, and his influence was widely felt in social, literary, agricultural and horticultural affairs. To his inspiration and aid, Deerfield is largely indebted for her beautiful shade trees of which we are all so proud. Long may they wave in memory of the grand old man!

Ministerially speaking, Mr. Willard's lines were not cast in altogether pleasant places, but it is neither pleasant nor profitable to dwell upon the bigotry and bitterness of the surrounding congregational clergy towards the intruder. Suffice it to say, he lived down their personal enmity, and some became warm friends, although his stride beyond their narrow limits could never be forgiven. Mr. Willard engaged heartily in the reforms of the day, was early and outspoken in the temperance cause; and the anti-slavery movement had few warmer or more practical advocates. He was deeply interested in educational matters, and took an active part in caring for the schools; he wrote many books for school use; one series of four was widely adopted, and passed through many editions. He had rare musical talent; he wrote and published hundreds of hymns, and at least one musical note book. His miscellaneous writings were many and to the last he kept in touch with the affairs of the town and nation.

Ministerial, after Dr. Willard. Rev. John Fessenden was the fifth pastor of the First Church. After preaching about two months, he was given a call March 24th, 1830; with a salary of "200 pounds Annually." He sent his letter of acceptance April 17th and was ordained May 19th, 1830; the sermon was by Rev. Charles Lowell of Boston. The new minister was a graduate of Harvard in 1818, of the Cambridge Theological school in 1821, tutor at Harvard 1825-27. He was a man of scholarly attainments, and his sermons were better adapted to the learned than to common people. He was singularly gifted in public prayer, which inspired his hearers more than his sermons. At a parish meeting Feb. 1st, 1840, upon a question of vital interest to Mr. Fessenden, the vote was a tie, and on the 5th he sent in his resignation. He removed to Dedham and engaged in teaching. In 1835 he preached a sermon before a party of Indians from Canada, who claimed to be descendants of the captive, Eunice Williams, and who were on a visit to the graves of her father and mother. This sermon was published.

After hearing many candidates, Daniel B. Parkhurst was given a call May 10th, 1841. His letter of acceptance was received June 6th, and he was ordained July 21st, 1841. He was born Feb. 20th, 1818, and was the son of Dr. William Parkhurst of Petersham. He was two years at Amherst college and two years at Yale, where he was graduated in 1836; he finished his studies at the Cambridge Divinity school. His life of rare promise was cut short by consumption; he preached only nine sermons and died at Keene, N. H., where he was under medical treatment, Feb. 16th, 1842. James Blodgett, a graduate of Harvard, 1841, and of the Theological school there in 1843, was the next minister. He was ordained Jan. 17th, 1844. His health failed; he lost his voice and was dismissed June 16th, 1845. He removed to Lexington, where he died July 11th, 1845, leaving a widowed bride, who followed him just three months later.

John Farwell Moors, born in Groton, Dec. 10th, 1819, was the eighth pastor of the First Church; he was a graduate of Harvard, 1842, and of the Divinity school in 1845. From there he came directly to Deerfield, where he was ordained Jan. 28th, 1846. After a successful ministry of fourteen years he was dismissed April 9th, 1860; on the 23d he was installed over the Third Congregational society in Greenfield; was chaplain to the 52d Mass. Vols., under Gen. Banks, in the Louisiana campaign, 1863, and in later years wrote the history of that regiment. He returned with his regiment after the capture of Port Hudson, July 8th, 1863. Representative from Greenfield, 1874, senator from Franklin county, 1877, and made D. D. in 1884.

Mr. Moors was dismissed from his charge at Greenfield, in 1884, to assume a wider field of labor as superintendent of the missionary work of the American Unitarian Association of New England. This work he resigned and returned to Greenfield in 1893, where he died, as these sheets are going through the press, Jan. 27th, 1895, which day rounded out the 49th year of his ministry.

James K. Hosmer, son of Rev. Dr. George Hosmer, was born in Northfield, Jan. 29th, 1834. He graduated at Harvard in 1855; at Divinity school, Cambridge, in 1857. He was ordained Sept. 6th, 1860. In September, 1862, he enlisted in Co. D, 52d Regiment of Massachusetts Volunteers, which joined Gen. Banks's Louisiana Expedition. Declining a position in the military household of Gen. Banks, he was made corporal of the color-guard, and served through the campaign. He was in the actions of April 12th and 14th on the Teche, under Gen. Grover, and with him through the Red River Expedition, and at the siege and surrender of Port Hudson, July 8th, 1863. Mr. Hosmer was dismissed, Sept. 2d, 1866, to take a professorship in Antioch College. Professor of the State University of Missouri 1888-92, when he became head of the Minneapolis library. He is author of "The Color Guard," 1864,—one of the most entertaining books which the Rebellion has brought forth; "The Thinking Bayonet," 1865; "A History of German Literature," 1879; "Story of the Jews," 1884; "Life of Samuel Adams," 1885; "Young Sir Henry Vane," 1888; "Short History of Anglo-Saxon Freedom," 1890; is now [1894] engaged upon a life of Gov. Thomas Hutchinson. He has also been a liberal contributor to papers and magazines.

Edgar Buckingham, A. B., son of Joseph T., was born at Boston, Aug. 29th, 1812. He graduated at Harvard in 1831, and was the principal of Northfield Academy, 1831-32; graduated at Cambridge Divinity school, 1835; settled minister at Dover, N. H., 1835; in Trenton, N. Y., 1840; in Troy, N. Y., 1853; and Deerfield in 1868. He married, June 5th, 1835, Sally Ann Hart. Mr. Buckingham was a voluminous writer for newspapers and magazines. He was an early advocate of the abolition of slavery, especially in an oration delivered July 4th, 1842. This was printed, as have been several of his sermons. Of the Unitarian denomination, but maintained the view that "the religion of Jesus Christ consists in obedience to God, unconnected with sectarian opinions." He had an active, ingenious mind and scholarly culture. He died 1894.

The Orthodox Society. Oct. 1st, 1838, a portion of the First Congregational Society organized a new body under the title of the "Orthodox Society." A church of the seceders had been formed June 2d, 1835. In 1838 a meetinghouse was built on Memorial Lane, the frame being raised July 12th. The first stated supply for the pulpit of this society was Rev. Pomeroy Belden. He was born in 1811; son of Aaron of Whately; graduated at Amherst in 1833; from Andover Theological Seminary in 1836. He was ordained evangelist Aug. 8th, 1837. Installed at Deerfield, 1837; dismissed 1842; installed the same year at Amherst, where he died in office March 2d, 1849. He married, in 1836, Louisa Tenny of Gill; (2d) 1841, Miranda Smith of Hadley.

Rev. Henry Seymour, son of Horace of Hadley, was born in 1816; graduated from Amherst in 1838; and the Union Theological Seminary in New York, in 1842. He married, in 1844, Laura I. Fisk of Shelburne; (2d) 1851, Sophia Williams of Ashfield. Settled pastor at Deerfield, March 1, 1843; dismissed March 14th, 1849; settled at Hawley, Oct. 3d, 1849, where he is still in charge.

Rev. Alfred E. Ives was born in New Haven in 1809; graduated at Yale in 1837; studied theology at New Haven; pastor at Colebrook in 1838-48; settled here Sept. 5th, 1849; dismissed in 1855; removed to Castine, Me.

Rev. Robert Crawford, D. D., was born in Paisley, Scotland, in 1804; came with his father to Canada in 1821. After a few years of frontier life in the woods, he became an operative in a cotton-mill at Hoosick Falls, N. Y., in 1826. After three years there, and two or three more in a mill at Bennington, Vt., he entered Williams College, graduating in 1836; was a year or two tutor there. He studied theology at Princeton, N. J., and at the Union Theological Seminary, and was ordained pastor at North Adams, Aug. 20th, 1840. He married, Sept. 30th, 1840, Ellen M., daughter of President Griffin of Williams College. Jan. 13th, 1858, he was installed in Deerfield, where he still remains an example to his fellows and an honor to the town. He received the honorary degree of D. D. from Jefferson College in 1858; he was State Senator in 1863.

Second Congregational Society at Bloody Brook. Rev. Benjamin Rice, the first pastor, was born in Sturbridge, in 1784; graduate of Brown University in 1808; at Andover Theological Seminary 1811; pastor at Skeneateles, 1813-17, was installed here Feb. 10th, 1819; dismissed Dec. 29th, 1826*. Pastor at Gloucester, Me., 1828-35; at Buxton, Me., 1835-42; preached at Winchendon, Mass., 1843-46. Mr. Rice married Harriet Barrett of Sharon, Conn.; (2d) Almira Whipple of Charlton; (3d) Lucy Whitney of Winchendon. He died July 12th, 1847.

Tertius S. Clarke was born in Westhampton in 1799; graduated from Yale in 1824; studied theology at Auburn; ordained here Oct. 3d, 1827; dismissed April 1st, 1833; pastor at Haddam, Conn., 1835-37; at Stockbridge, 1837-50; at Penn Yan, N. Y., 1850-53; at Franklin, N. Y., 1853; D. D., Hamilton College, 1856.

Rev. William M. Richards was born at Hartford, Conn., in 1805; graduated from Williams College in 1832; studied theology at Auburn; ordained at Bloody Brook, Nov. 25th, 1835; dismissed Sept. 6th, 1843; pastor at Norwich, N. Y., 1844-45; at Oxford, N. Y., 1846; at Hamilton, N. Y., 1847-50; at Morrisville, N. Y., 1850-52; removed to Waukegan, Ill., 1852.

Rev. Abraham Jackson was born in Carver in 1793; graduated from Bangor Theological Seminary; ordained pastor at Machias, Me., 1821; dismissed 1834; pastor at Kingston,

*" 1825, April 12th, Priest Rice's house raised." Diary of Rufus Rice.

1834; at Walpole, N. H., 1838-45; installed at Bloody Brook, Oct. 22d, 1845; dismissed 1847; preached a year or two at Machias, and until 1852 at Quechee, Vt., and after that at Windsor, Vt. He became a Unitarian after leaving here, and was at Waverly, Iowa, in 1872.

Rev. Moses K. Cross was born in Danvers in 1812; graduated from Amherst in 1838, and from the Theological school of Andover; ordained pastor at Palmer in 1842; dismissed 1849; installed pastor here, Sept. 4th, 1850.

Rev. Perkins K. Clark graduated at Yale in 1838, where he was tutor; installed at Bloody Brook June 29th, 1859; dismissed Sept. 26th, 1865.

Rev. Edward O. Bartlett, chaplain in the war of the Rebellion; installed Jan. 17th, 1867; dismissed in 1868; settled in Providence, and was successor of Dr. Todd at Pittsfield; now pastor at Lynnfield.

Rev. Simeon Miller came from the First Church in Holyoke; installed April 13th, 1870; dismissed 1872.

Rev. Charles S. Brooks graduated at Amherst in 1863; installed Jan. 14th, 1873; dismissed April 17th, 1877; now settled pastor in Putnam, Ct.

Rev. Spencer R. Brownell graduated at Amherst in 1872; teacher in Japan several years; ordained tenth pastor of this church, July 2d, 1878.

Monument Church. A serious difficulty arising in the community at Bloody Brook, a party seceded from the Second Church, built a meetinghouse in 1848, and organized the "Monument Church," Jan. 25th, 1849.

Rev. David A. Strong was born at Haddam, Ct., in 1820; graduated at Williams in 1845; at the Theological Institute of Windsor, Ct., in 1843; was ordained first pastor March 21st, 1849. This church reunited with the Second Church, Sept. 26th, 1865, and Mr. Strong was dismissed. He was a representative to the General Court from District No. 4 in 1866.

The Methodist Society at Bloody Brook was organized in 1843, and built a meetinghouse in 1848. Dedication sermon by Rev. Mr. Raymond of Wilbraham. First pastor, Rev. Francis Griswold. Following him were C. A. Perry, John Smith, 1849; Wm. F. LaCount, 1851; Wm. H. Hubbard, 1853; Randall Mitchell, 1854; David Todd, 1855; E. A. Standish, 1856; — Carpenter, 1857; M. D. Herrick, 1860; R. Gerrish, 1861; O. W. Adams, 1862; J. M. Clark, 1866; J. Cadwell, 1868; Andrew Baylies, 1870; (Mrs. Mary J., his wife, married Oct. 9th, 1857, died at Bloody Brook, July 9th, 1871); N. M. D. Granger, 1873; N. J. Merrill, 1875; C. E. Seaver, 1876; A. R. Nichols, 1879; H. G. Buckingham, 1880; S. A. Bragg, 1882; J. J. Woodbury, 1884; H. G. Clark, 1885.

The Baptist Church of Shelburne and Deerfield was organized Feb. 26th, 1787. Deacon Daniel Long was called to the pastoral office, Aug. 27th, 1791, and was ordained at his own house in Shelburne, Sept. 19th, 1792. He was a faithful minister of this church until his death, May 31st, 1831. In 1794 the question of building a meetinghouse began to be agitated. Before 1806 one had been partly built, and perhaps finished. In 1809 it was agreed to build a meetinghouse between Elder Long's and Aaron Hawks's. The same year the Deerfield part of the society agreed to build a meetinghouse in Wisdom. This was finished in 1810. On the death of Elder Long the Shelburne people withdrew, and the church was reorganized in Wisdom, under the title of the "First Baptist Society in Deerfield." Some trouble arising, a party seceded and formed the "Second Baptist Society in Deerfield." Nov. 25th, 1823, this society took the name of the "Long Baptist Society of Deerfield." Feb. 20th, 1834, the "First Baptist Church in Deerfield," was dissolved by a majority of one vote, and the minority applied to the church of Sunderland to be organized as a branch of that church. A council met June, 1834, which decided that the church was not dissolved, and could not be by a simple vote. The trouble continuing, a second council, Aug 27th, advised the aggrieved members to ask for letters of dismissal.

Orra Martin, who was the first minister of this church, was succeeded in 1837 by W. H. Dalrymple. Edward Hale was the minister 1841-5, when Geo. W. Bills was settled; Milo Frary and W. A. Pease supplied at times. Of late there has been no regular preaching. The "Long Baptist Society" was supplied by Tristram Aldrich for about seven or eight years, when the two societies reunited.

The Roman Catholic church at Bloody Brook was organized in 1871. It occupies the building erected by the "Monument Society" in 1848.

CHAPTER XXVI.

POLITICAL.—WAR OF 1812—ANTI-MASONRY—ANTI-SLAVERY.

Little will be said of the political parties in the town, but the vote for governor for forty-eight years, given below, will show that Deerfield was generally with the dominant party; when otherwise, the name of the successful candidate is first given:—

Political. During the formative period following the peace of 1783, this town did not take an active part in political affairs, but she was in full accord with Washington and Adams, and those favoring a close federation of the states and the constitution finally adopted. Gratefully remembering the aid rendered by France in the critical time of the Revolution, our people were now in sympathy with those who had thrown off the fetters of monarchy and declared France a republic. This feeling was clearly shown in a 4th of July celebration in 1794, a part of a contemporary report of which is given below:—

Yesterday a number of patriotic citizens of this and the adjacent towns assembled at Samuel Barnards Esq, and formed in procession precisely at 12 o'clock; and at the discharge of the federal salute, the procession moved by a circuitous march to the meetinghouse, in the following order:—

Two Sergeants with advanced arms
Musick
Detachment of Artillery with a field piece and standard
Master of Ceremonies
Clergey
Selectmen
Citizens
Military officers

A well adapted energetic discourse was delivered by the Rev. John Taylor; after which, the procession moved by a retrograde march to Samuel Barnards Esq and mutually congratulated each other on the auspicious day. The company repaired to Citizen Consider Dickinson's and partook of a decent repast. After dining the following toasts were given:—

- 1 The day—The glorious anniversary of our INDEPENDENCE; May we annually celebrate the freedom of Empires.
- 2 Our illustrious PRESIDENT—May his wisdom convey us safely thro' the present as well as former tempests.
- 3 The Commonwealth of Massachusetts—May the purity and frequency of our elections preclude the necessity of Popular Societies.
- 4 The American Republic—May she shun the rocks on which former republics have been dashed, and never want heroes to defend her rights. (A song)

5. May the terms TYRANNY and SLAVERY soon become sounds without ideas.

6. The RIGHTS OF MEN—May they be universally known and vindicated.

7. No European tincture in American Politics.

8. May America rightly know and estimate her privileges.

9. An adequate compensation to the VIRTUOUS MILITIA of Massachusetts—(a song)

10. The Military Art—May its professors continue the asserters and defenders of our rights.

11. May the soil of America ever prove unpropitious to the seeds of ARRISTOCRACY.

12. The Slave Trade—May its advocates be taught its use in an ALGIRINE School (Drum and fifes—a cheer)

13. Agriculture, Arts, and Science—(a song)

14. The brave FAYETTE—May he ere long reap the rich crop of Liberty, sown by his patriotic exertions in America.

15. The fair Daughters of Columbia—May their virtues heighten the enjoyments of freedom, and soften the misfortunes of life.

The remainder of the day was spent in decent hilarity; each eye sparkled with joy while strains of gratitude poured from every tongue!—not like the strains which monarchs' ears salute—they were the generous effusions of hearts warm with the love of their Country, and rejoicing with the emancipation of this and our sister republic FRANCE.

Two years later, July 4th, 1796, there was a similar gathering at the meetinghouse to listen to a "very patriotic and well adapted prayer by Rev. Roger Newton of Greenfield, and a nervous and patriotic oration by Rev. John Taylor," after which the company "repaired to the festive board, and partook of convivial entertainment and drank a number of toasts." In 1798 the day was celebrated in a similar manner, Taylor was again the orator and gave an address big with the spirit of the times. This was emphatically an "Adams and Liberty" celebration.

When political parties became organized under the administration of John Adams, Deerfield became a "Federal" town, being opposed to the "Democratic Republican" party, under Thomas Jefferson. The Federalists dominated the town until the close of the war of 1812, when in the "era of good feeling" which followed the settlement of great military and political questions, old parties became extinct. The principal elements of this party, however, gathered again, about 1828, as the "Whig" party. In the next great contest for freedom the Whigs were generally absorbed in the "Republican" party of to-day. The "Democratic Republican" party soon dropped the Democratic half of its name, and as the "Republican" party under the lead of Jefferson, soon got control of the general government and held the reins until after the war of 1812. Its elements were gradually collected and about 1828 the name of "Democratic" was adopted by a party which still bears the name.

As will be seen by the foregoing table of votes, Deerfield did not engage earnestly in party politics until the Republicans, who followed Jefferson, were doing all in their power to involve the United States in a war with the Continental powers, as an ally of France. With Republicanism merged in despotism in that unhappy land, the sympathy of our people had been smothered in hatred of the new oppressors; and the opposition to the Republican party was united at the polls, almost to a man. The Federal vote jumped in two years from forty-five to two hundred and fourteen, while the Republican party mustered one vote. The average vote of this later party for the sixteen years it was in power was a trifle over 6. For six of these years not a Republican vote was cast.

The warning of Washington against entangling alliances with foreign powers seems to have been a strong factor in the political action of Deerfield. For the first decade under the constitution the total average annual vote for governor was 31.7; and for the second decade only 42. For the first sixteen years of the century the average vote was 242.6:

Before me lies a letter written in one of those periods, familiar to old men: "A crisis in the affairs of the country." We smile as we read the customary statement that, "on the result of this election, as on that of no other since the government was founded, does the life of the nation depend." The letter is from Capt. David Hoyt, Jr., tavern-keeper, to Jonathan McGee of Colrain. He tells him "the Indefatigable Industry of those People who are unfriendly to the Federal Interest, is perhaps without a paralel. Every Art is used to delude the People, to draw off their Affections from those who have faithfully served out their lives in their Country's cause." Every measure of the former administration is represented to have been "actuated by designing and selfish views." He sends the news just received, that, "the French nation has demanded—observe the Term DEMANDED—a Loan of six MILLIONS of Dollars of the United States. Should Mr. Jefferson get Mr. Gerry appointed Governor of this Commonwealth * * * would he not use his interest to obtain a Land Tax to procure the money for his dear Friends?"

He writes Colrain to pool issues in the coming race.

We shall be on the turf at one o'clock P. M. with our Horse the Swiftsure. He is rather below the common size, we are sensible, but sure footed as he is, we risk him * * * We mean to use every exertion in our power, (consistent with constitutional right) to train our steed in the best manner.

This was written a few days before the election of 1802. Result of vote in Deerfield, 214 to 0.

At one time there was a serious scare for fear of France. It was expected that Napoleon would turn his victorious armies this way, and that he would be made welcome by Jefferson and the Republicans. The dread of the usurper brooded like a nightmare over the land. Personified evil would be a civil name compared to those given him. He was a bogie to frighten naughty children and rouse the Federals to new activity. A census of men liable to military duty was taken in 1806. An official blank of enquiry left at one house was returned with the following statement:—

" Not a male in my house, excepting a mouse,
To repell the bold Corsican foe ;
But when times are so bad, that men cannot be had
I, a spinster, will willingly go."

If taken seriously, as expressing the feeling of the community at this time, the above would not have been far out of the way. In 1807 a new professorship was established in Deerfield Academy. It was for teaching, as we learn from a prospectus the,— Theoretical and Practical Art of War, viz.: tactics according to Steuben and Dundas, * * * Practical Geometry on the Ground; Elements of Fortifications, and the constructions of small works in the Field; Elements of Gunnery; Topography; military History; Partisan war, or war of Posts; * * * These subjects will be under the direction of Maj. Hoyt, Brigade Inspector. * * * It is believed that the Present Critical Situation of our Country will induce young men to qualify themselves for an honorable defence against every hostile attack on their native land and lay a foundation for Military Glory.

Hosea Hildreth was principal of the academy at this time and was living in the Dr. Willard house where his son Richard, the historian, was born, June 28th.

1808. In spite of the Deerfield vote of 203 to 16, against him, Madison, the Republican candidate, was chosen president. The war fever ran higher and higher. At the town meeting, April 4th, the first article in the warrant was:—

To hear the addresses from the selectmen of the Town of Northampton to the Selectmen of this Town relating to the present distracted condition of our National concerns, and to determine whether any, and if any, what measures ought to be adopted by the Town respecting the same.

A committee of five was chosen to give the matter proper consideration. It is clear that our fathers, while adhering to that party which held extreme Federal views, believed this to be a government of the people, for the people, and by the people, and were alive to the responsibility thereby laid upon them, and that they never shirked the imposed duties.

July 13th, the town bought a new supply of military stores. Sept. 1st, the town voted that,—

John Williams Esq, Ephraim Williams Esq and Mr. Pliny Arms, be a Committee to draught and prepare a Petition in behalf the Town, to the President of the United States, praying him to suspend either wholly or in part, the Embargo Laws, or if he have doubt as to the Sufficiency of his power for that purpose, to request him to call Congress together as soon as possible.

Can it be that this action gave the president courage to modify the Embargo act in some of its features most offensive to New England, in spite of the fact that Sunderland, about the same time, sent him an address in favor of the obnoxious act?

1811. This year occurred the great fire in Newburyport, and "Deerfield people were moved to take up a contribution, in aid of the sufferers, and there was raised $94.40."

War of Impressment. During the trying times of the political disturbance, business seems to have been stimulated in every direction and the substantial fruits of a free government were abundantly gathered. There was a marked increase in one of the most important productions, and the year 1812 proved to be unusually prolific. Mrs. Joanna Smith Williams, "Aunt Anne," made a party at her home, now "Frary House," at which she gathered twenty-four mothers, each with a baby born within the year. Nearly all of these were of the old Town Street. This was a notable party, and I will give the names of the younger moiety.

War was declared against England June 18th, but we had been practically in a state of war years before. May 11th, Capt. John Wilson received an order to "detach a Lieut and eight privates." I find the list "detached,"—whatever that may mean—are William Williams, Parsons Smith, Seth Sheldon, Gilbert Hoyt, Sylvanus Dibble, Stephen Harris, Levi Stookey and Peleg Chase. I find no occasion for this order. I have heard my father, Seth Sheldon, say in reference to this war, "I was drafted as a drummer to go to Boston, but we did not go." This was probably the occasion.

July 9th, a special town meeting was called:—

1st To hear the Circular Letters from the selectmen of the Towns of Boston, Northampton and Greenfield, to the selectmen of this Town concerning the impending Calamities of the United States.

2^d To determine whether they will Petition the President and Congress to avert if possible the ruin and horrors of WAR and restore peace and commerce to the nation voted unanimously in y^e affirmative.

3. To Express their opinions and feelings respecting an alliance with the French nation. [There was a free expression of "opinion and feeling" not at all complimentary to Bonaparte and France, and resolutions were adopted to be sent to the convention, "A copy to be lodged with the clerk." This cannot be found in our archives.]

4 To determine whether they will choose Delegates to meet other Delegates from the Towns in this County and the Counties of Hampshire and Hampden at Northampton on the 14th of July * * * Ephraim Williams Esq Major Epaphras Hoyt and Pliny Arms Esq, were chosen Delegates.

5. To determine whether they will appoint a Committee of Safety and Correspondence * * * Ephraim Williams Esq, Major Epaphras Hoyt, Pliny Arms, Esq., Solomon Williams and Rufus Saxton, were chosen as such committee.

6. To determine whether they will take any measures respecting the cannon belonging to the Town.

As we have seen, a vote was passed under this article, "not to dispose of the two pieces of cannon." Aug. 28th, the town voted that "Col. Asa Stebbins, Maj. Epaphras Hoyt, and Capt. Samuel Wells, be a committee to build a magazine for the Towns Military Stores, near the new Burying ground;" and $40 was appropriated for the purpose. Aug. 24th, the amount of military stores on hand was reported to be "117^{lbs} Powder, 260^{lbs} Ball, 263 Flints and 6 Tin camp kittles." The methods of keeping the town ammunition creep out here and there, in various ways. In the earlier days it was the custom to store the powder in the meetinghouse, either under the pulpit or in the steeple, the two places of all others it would seem, the most exposed to an explosion.

In 1745 a different system prevailed, as shown by a loose scrap of paper. That year the selectmen put into the hands of James Corse 25^{lbs} of powder, and of Thomas Wells, Elijah Williams, Jonathan Ashley, and Jonathan Arms each 20^{lbs}. In 1747, Thomas Wells had charge of 31^{lbs} of town lead, Elijah Williams 32^{lbs}, Jona. Ashley 50^{lbs}, James Corse 52^{lbs} and Widow Mary Wells 40^{lbs}.

Probably nothing was done about building a magazine under the vote of 1812, for, March 4th, 1817, "A committee was chosen to Report on a magazine for the Town Stock of military stores." The committee, Elihu Hoyt, Solomon Williams, and Seth Nims, made a report and were directed "to build a magazine on the west end of the new burying ground at the east end of Thomas Williams home lot."

1813. Capt. Elihu Hoyt was a member of the legislature this year, and was in Boston at the time of the duel between the "Chesapeake" and the "Shannon." An extract from his note book gives an account of his visit to the former just before the fight.

May 29, went on board the Frigate Chesapeake, stayed 3 or 4 hours, saw them exercise their great guns & go through all the movements for attack & defense of a ship in time of battle; was disappointed, did not find so good discipline as expected, they were not so expert at the great guns as I expected. Capt Lawrence is a fine looking fellow.

June 1. Chesapeake went to sea was taken same day by the British Frigate Shannon, went down to see the action, was too late, saw the Frigates & the smoke of the guns, but the distance was too great to distinguish the movements. Saw 4 or 5 Gun boats at anchor below the lighthouse, saw them fire their great guns. Got back to Boston ab^t 12 at night.

June 15th, David Willard, secretary of the "Washington Benevolent Society," gave notice of a 4th of July celebration in Deerfield, at Cooley's hall. "There will be a meeting at 9 A. M. to innitiate new members. * * * The Friends of Washington and of Correct Principles are respectfully invited to join the Procession & the festivities of the day."

It was soon found that the "Franklin Celebration at Deerfield," had taken such a deep hold on the public that it outgrew its original programme. June 28th another notification was sent out by Maj. Hoyt, chairman of committee of arrangements:—

Believing that the Public Entertainment, mentioned by the committee in the last Herald will not accommodate the number of persons who wish to testify their respect for the day, and the principles of Washington, they have made a different arrangement with Mr Cooley, and with pleasure anounce to their bretheren of the Society, and their fellow citizens generally, that our entertainment will be provided in the field with suitable accomodations, and provisions for 600 persons. Tickets furnished by Mr Cooley for 75 cts. The refreshments will consist of a cold cut of ham, beef, lamb, crackers, bread, cheese &c, together with an exhilerating supply of brandy, spirits, & wine.

In times like the present 'tis presumed that this arrangment will meet the cordial approbation of every friend to his country and to social order.

The celebration was a great success. Col. Newcomb, president of the day, made the opening address. After prayer by Rev. Samuel Willard, an oration was delivered by George Grenell, Jr., of Greenfield; and Edward Hitchcock made "a spirited, eloquent, and appropriate address which was received with universal applause." This was afterwards printed. After this solid feed there followed a dessert in the form of seventeen toasts, and the responses thereto. This was no doubt accompanied and made more palatable by the "exhilerating supply of" liquids, mentioned in the programme.

While Deerfield furnished the place for this celebration, she also provided the orator for an opposition celebration the same day. The Republicans met at Bernardston, with Rodolphus Dickinson as the central figure. He was doubtless Deerfield's only representative of that party; but being in such a hopeless minority he did not even cast a vote. His oration was lauded to the skies, the eulogist thinks, "a specimen of eloquence, so Splendid, Classical and Patriotic ought to have a permanent abode in the annals of Literature." Probably this justice was not done it, as these annals have been searched for it in vain.

1814. Sept. 6th, Gov. Brooks issued a general order calling upon the militia of the State, "to hold themselves in readiness to march at a moment's warning." Special orders were sent out at the same time for a certain specified number of companies to march at once to Boston; these included four companies of the 4th Division. These companies are to be reorganized when they reach Boston, and "will form the Elite or Advanced Corps of the Massachusetts militia." The Governor also orders that "16 companies of Infantry from the 4 Div. be arranged into two regiments properly officered to march to Boston with the Least unnecessary delay."

Sept. 9th, Major General Ebenezer Mattoon of Amherst, commander of the 4th Division, orders Brig. Gen. Isaac Maltby of Hatfield, to detach from his brigade, eight companies of Infantry, three of Light Infantry, and two of Artillery; the Light Infantry and Artillery to "march forthwith to Boston without waiting for each other or any other corp." The Infantry regiment of the 2d Brigade was to rendezvous at New Salem. Brig. Gen. Maltby is made "commander-in-chief of the Elite or Advanced Corps." Maltby's order is not found, but on that same Sept. 9th, Lieut. Col. William Edwards issued his orders to the two Artillery companies of his regiment to march "to Boston without delay." The Artillery company at Northfield received this order the same day at 7 o'clock, p. m., and on the 11th took up its line of march and entered the camp at South Boston, Sept. 18th. While this exodus of troops to Boston was going on, there were two companies of Infantry at Deerfield; the north company officered by Capt. Thomas W. Ashley, Lieut. Charles Hitchcock and Ens. Josiah Lyman Arms; the south company by Capt. Zebina Russell, Lieut. Zebediah Graves and Ensign David Wright. I do not find evidence to prove that either of these companies was detached under Maltby's orders, but probably they made part of the force raised. I find some evidence that a company marched from Greenfield under Capt. David Strickland, Lieut. Theodore D. Lyman, and Ensign Thomas Gilbert. Capt. Strickland was certainly at the South Boston camp in some capacity. Lieut. Samuel Coolidge of Colrain is also found there. Deerfield was well represented, at least, by staff and line officers. Epaphras Hoyt, Brigade major; John C. Hoyt, Brigade quartermaster; Stephen W. Williams, surgeon's mate; George P. Field, fife major; all on the staff of Brig. Gen. Maltby, and John Wilson, major of 2d regiment. The time of service was about two months, when, the scare being over, the camp broke up and the soldiers became citizens again, with no deeds of martial valor to recount and no scent of British powder in their garments. The camp was made a sort of picnic ground. We find on one day the following as Deerfield visitors: Elihu Hoyt, Dr. William S. Williams and wife, with children Delia and Ephraim; Maj. Wilson's wife and her sister, Nancy or Lucretia; Capt. Samuel Wells and his wife; Quartus Wells, his wife and son Benjamin, with Ralph Williams, William Barnard, and — Catlin on the road there.

The following are known to have been soldiers in the war of 1812. Time and place of service unknown:—

Israel Boyden
Samuel Frink
Alvin Goodenough
Moses Hawks
James Hogan

Ephraim Lanfair
Robert L. Lanfair
William Loveridge
Ichabod Nelson
Jeremiah Newton

William Palmer

During the war, party animosity had raged fiercely and bitterly; on the return of peace the old parties gradually dissolved. The mission of the Federalists was accomplished; the Republicans had learned the true character of the French Revolution and had seen the folly of attempting to mingle in the wars of Europe, and all united in the support of the Constitution. The Republican leaders were glad to be well quit of the war. It had indeed brought brilliant and unexpected victories over the "Mistress of the Seas," but the treaty of peace did not secure to us a single disputed point on which the war was declared. The party fever having died out, what was called the "Era of Good Feeling" prevailed, until about 1824-8, when the Democratic and the Whig parties grew up, nearly equally dividing the community. The former still exists, but in 1855 the Whigs were absorbed by the Republican party of to-day. This is true broadly stated, but in the slavery contest many Democrats became Republicans and some Whigs joined the Democrats.

In the onslaught upon Masonry under the Morgan excitement, Deerfield was with the anti-Masons, and an anti-Masonic newspaper was started here in 1830, by Gen. Hoyt.

Deerfield on the Right of Petition. The anti-slavery movement obtained an early foothold here, and here were some of the stoutest advocates of the cause. At the time John Quincy Adams, "The Old Man Eloquent," was bravely fighting the battle of freedom at Washington, against the whole power of both parties, a controlling element here was in sympathy with him and sent him words of cheer. April 2d, 1838, a town meeting was called to act on the following article:—

1 To consider and determine the expediency of remonstrating with the Congress of the United States against the infringement of the right of petition, and the abridgment of the freedom of debate,

2 Of petitioning Congress for the passage of a law for the protection of the citizens of the north, while passing through, or sojourning in the slave holding states,

3 Of petitioning Congress for the abolition of slavery in the District of Columbia, and the territories of the United States, and for the suppression of the slave trade in said District, and between the States.

[The action on the above was as follows:—]

Art. 1, Sec. 1. Resolved That the right of petition is the barrier against the aggression of rulers upon the public, essential for the protection of the rights of minorities, and the last right which a people determined to be free, should surrender, or permit to be abridged.

Resolved That the resolution of the House of Representatives, passed at the present session of Congress, by which it declared that all petitions of the people relating in any way to the subject of slavery, shall be laid on the table without being read, printed, debated, referred, or any action had thereon, is a violation of the constitution, a virtual denial of the sacred right of petition, an insult to the sovereignty of the people, at war with the fundamental principles of our government, dangerous to the union of the States, and an alarming precedent, threatening the entire subversion of republican liberty.

Resolved That the people of Deerfield, in the county of Franklin, and Commonwealth of Massachusetts, in their Municipal character, protest against this unwarrantable and dangerous assumption of authority, and earnestly invoke and demand of Congress the rescinding the aforesaid resolutions.

Sec. 2. Resolved That the Constitution of the United States has guaranteed 'to the citizens of each State all privileges, and immunities of Citizens of the Several States.'

That this professed guaranty is a falsehood and mockery so long as free citizens of those states which do not tolerate slavery, are not permitted peaceably to reside or travel in certain other states, where the mere suspicion of entertaining the principles of the American Declaration of Independence, subjects them to insult, outrage, stripes, imprisonment, and even death without the forms of law:—So long as Senators and Representatives of states where slavery exists, are permitted without rebuke, or censure, in their places in Congress, before the whole American people, to threaten with mutilation or death, free citizens who shall be found within their borders:—So long as citizens of some of the states found in other states, may under the laws of those states be arrested and imprisoned on the suspicion that they are fugitive slaves, and even after suspicion has been proved unfounded, may be sold as slaves for the payment of their prison fees,

Resolved That this state of things imperiously demands of Congress to devise means for the effectual protection of the citizens of free states while passing through or sojourning in the slave states.

Sec. 3. Resolved That Congress has a constitutional right to abolish slavery in the District of Columbia, and in the territories subject to the jurisdiction of the United States; and also to prohibit the slave trade in said District and territories, and between the states.

Resolved That Congress is required without delay to exercise this right, equally by the principles of justice, benevolence and national faith, and a wise regard for the welfare, integrity, and permanence of the union.

Resolved That Henry K. Hoyt, George Dickinson, Luther B. Lincoln, John Hawks, and Jonathan A. Saxton, be a Committee to prepare a remonstrance and memorial to Congress on the subject of the foregoing resolutions; and that the said memorial, together with a copy of these resolutions, certified by the Town Clerk, be transmitted to the Hon. John Quincy Adams, with a request that he would present them to the House of Representatives.

CHAPTER XXVII.

LIBRARIES—LITERATURE.

Libraries. The first public library of which any evidence has been found was called the "Union Library." It was probably established soon after the close of the Revolution. In 1798 David Saxton sold one share in it to Dr. Wm. S. Williams, for one pound sterling. It was not long after that this library was broken up and the books divided among the shareholders. A list of those assigned John Sheldon, is given as showing the material of the library and the mental food of the period:—

Moore's Journals & Travels [In France, Spain & Italy] 4 vols.	$ 4.67
2 vols. European magazine & Jays sermons	3.25
Steadmans American War, 2 vols.	3.50
Annual Necrology	3.00
Female Quixotism	1.12
Voltaire's Letters, 1 vol.	1.84

$17.38

Many volumes from this Union Library, identified by its book plate, have been gathered from old garrets and closets, and find a resting place in Memorial Hall.

The "Social Library" is found early in the century, a flourishing institution which long had its home in an upper room of the old corner store, on the Parson Williams home lot. Monthly meetings for drawing books were held for many years. Its beginning is unknown, but it was a prominent factor in keeping up the intellectual character of the town. This library may have been a successful rival to the "Union," taking the place it left vacant, but it did not absorb its treasures, for the book plate of the "Union" is not often met with in the "Social." A catalogue of the "Social Library" in 1835, after it had begun to break up, and an uncertain number of shares had been withdrawn, shows nine hundred and forty-seven volumes, classified as follows:—

Biography	74 vols.	Farmers department	19 vols.
Encyclopedias	18 "	Geography	12 "
Family Library	81 "	History	101 "

Law	4 vols.	Philosophy & Science	40 vols.
Magazines bound	98 "	Poetry	46 "
Miscellaneous	77 "	Political Economy	55 "
Natural History	17 "	Travels & Voyages	133 "
Novels	99 "	Theology and Ethics	73 "

This library imported books directly from England. In its later years the Social Library became, or rather continued, too conservative for efficient service. It fell behind the times, and Young America demanded progress.

The "Deerfield Reading Association" was organized in 1840, and after many migrations at last found a home for many years in Grange Hall. It began with the leading American and foreign magazines, and as it acquired means, bought the modern histories by Parkman, Palfrey, Prescott, Motley, Bancroft, &c. The members met weekly for drawing books, and for over forty years all other village meetings gave it the right of way for Thursday evening, and "Library Night" witnessed a social gathering as well as a business meeting. In its old age the Social Library found a shelter under the wing of the Reading Association, but when the "Dickinson Free Library" was founded, through the munificent gift of Mrs. Esther Dickinson, the Social was given by its shareholders to the P. V. M. Association. In 1884, the library of the Reading Association, about eleven hundred bound volumes beside magazines, was presented by its owners to the Dickinson Free Library. This latter also absorbed the considerable library of the Deerfield Academy, when that institution was united with the Dickinson high school.

"Second Social Library." I do not know the beginning or history of this organization. Its name would indicate that it was a rival of the "Social." It appears to be its contemporary. The following declaration is found, Dec. 7th, 1801 :—

The Proprietors of the Second Social Library, being desirous of forming ourselves into a society or Body Politic for the purpose of holding, increasing, preserving, and using, said Library according to Law * * * do each agree to pay the Treasurer on demand $6.00 and not less than $4.00 annually for that purpose.

Outsiders are allowed to join only on a unanimous vote by ballot and paying an amount equal to what existing members have already paid in, and signing the covenant. Members wishing to withdraw could have the value of their share in books set off to them by a committee, at an appraised value. By a provision in the covenant "No By Law or regulation shall be made which shall contravene this Covenant, or any part of it, except by a unanimous vote of the Corporation." This covenant was signed by,—

John Taylor,	Asa Stebbins,	Elijah Williams,
Hezekiah Wright Strong,	Epaphras Hoyt,	Wm. Stoddard Williams,
Solomon Williams,	Ebenezer Barnard, Jr.,	Rufus Saxton.

Members voted in:—

John Williams, 1801,	Orlando Ware, 1803,	John Wilson, 1806,
Elihu Hoyt, 1802,	Erastus Barnard, 1805,	George Arms, 1811.
John Hubbard, 1802,	Pliny Arms, 1806,
Samuel Clesson, 1802,	Thomas W. Ashley, 1806,

Men joining later:—

Stephen W. Williams,	Asa Stebbins, Jr.,	Henry K. Hoyt.
Zenas Hawks,	John G. Williams,
Eb. Hinsdale Williams,	Edwin Ware,

January 21st, 1802, the $6.00 to be paid "on demand" was demanded by "Ep. Hoyt Treasurer of the Corporation."

A catalogue of one hundred and eighty-eight volumes has been found, and it would be hard to find another of its size containing more solid meat. If gauged by its mental food, our community must have had the intellectual digestive powers of an ostrich. A few specimens follow:—

Adams' Philosophical Lectures,	Davison's Botanical Garden,
Asiatic Dessertations, 4 vols.	History of Tepoo Sultans Wars,
Batie on Truth,	Memoirs of Voltaire,
Benyowski's Travels, 7 vols.	Rushes' Moral Essays,
Burke on the Sublime,	Stewart's Philosophy of the Mind,
D'Auville's Ancient Geography,	Tomes Memoirs of Frederick the Great,
Dow's History of Hindostan, 3 vols.	Volney's Travels.

There were also standard classics by Barrous, Belknap, Bruce, Gibbon, Goldsmith, Hubbard, Hume, Hutchinson, Mavor, Minot, Park, Robertson, Smollet, Trumbull, &c. I have said I did not know the beginning of this enterprise, neither have I any knowledge of its location or fate.

In the last decade of the 18th and the first quarter of the 19th century, Deerfield seems to be well stocked with libraries. Another of this period was a "Military Library;" this was kept in connection with the Social Library; it fell into the hands of the writer with the old corner store, and it is now in the library of the P. V. M. Association. Here also may be found the remains of an "Agricultural Library" founded in 1814. About fifty years ago a second Agricultural Library was started. The following gives the only clue I have to another literary club. At a sheriff's sale at "E. Barnards tavern," Sept. 16th, 1806, Rufus Saxton advertised to sell among other personal property, "Ebenezer Barnards right in the Social Library & his right to the Encyclopedia owned by a company in town."

Juvenile Library. Taking note that the intellectual pabulum so abundant here was hardly adapted to the mentality of youth, Rev. Mr. Willard in 1827 started a project which resulted in a library especially for the boys and girls. A fund was raised by subscription from fifty-nine people in the north part of the town. The declared object was,—

To aid and encourage the young in cultivating a taste for reading & to diffuse among them in the easiest & most interesting manner, the great principles of religion & virtue which are common to all christians, which are the most important to a useful and happy life.

This proved a success, to which I can certify from personal experience. It was kept at the house of the minister and finally became the basis of the Sunday school library of the First Congregational society. Before the advent of this library the children had next to nothing to read. In my father's family there were two or three primers and as many chap books; "The cries of London" and the "Life of Daniel Lambert," are the only ones I can recall. A good library has been recently established at Bloody Brook.

Societies—The Literary Adelphi. This was organized Aug. 6th, 1804. The earliest record relating to this society is found in the postscript to the following note:—

To John Wilson, Esq.

Sir, Agreeable to a vote of the Society of the 'Literary Adelphi,' the undersigned, a Committee for the purpose, request that you would grant them a copy of an oration, delivered by you, on a former anniversary, before our Society; to be deposited in our archives, for the benefit of the Society.

Very respectfully Yours
WILLIAM H. WILLIAMS.
EDWARD HITCHCOCK.

Deerfield, 12 Jany, 1813.

JOHN C. HOYT.

P. S. The Committee beg leave to enquire what Gentlemen have delivered orations previous to the year 1809?

Capt. John Wilson was made an honorary member in 1810; Daniel Wells, afterwards Chief Justice Massachusetts Supreme Court, in 1810; Capt. Elihu Hoyt, in 1811; Oliver Cooley, in 1813.

Although it had "frequent and stated meetings," no records of this society have been found. What of its history is here given is gleaned from a few tattered papers, found here and there. By these it appears to have been a large and influential association and was "in a very flourishing condition" in 1817, and it certainly survived long after the above date, and made an abiding mark on the community.

"The Young Ladies' Literary Society" was organized early in 1813. The long preamble to its constitution is headed:—

Happiness is the great and only pursuit of man; [it continues] schemes for its attainment are every day invented, and as often found fruitless and vain. Many are allured by the charms of sensual pleasure—pleased with the flowers that are strewed along, they do not perceive the thorns that lie concealed under them—others attracted by the allurements of fortune and high life soon find but a vacuum.

[The young women think the true road lies through the intellect and so:] Perceiving that science and literature are the greatest promoters of human happiness, and that their tendency is to exalt in the highest degree the character of man * * * and knowing that the happiness rests on his moral excellence * * * that the enlargement of the mind is almost inseparably connected with the cultivation of the heart—the study of science and literature is an object supremely worthy the pursuit of rational beings—the elevated sentiments and high examples which poetry, eloquence, history, are often bringing under our view, naturally tend to nourish public spirit, contempt of external fortune, and the admiration of what is truly illustrious and great. By Science and literature the soul is taught to unfold its powers, to enlighten, expand, and embellish the mind, to cultivate and purify the heart.

[On this high plane the young ladies would build, and,—]

In order to render mutual assistance in the acquirement of these important objects, that we may walk hand in hand in the paths of learning and virtue, which are alone the paths of peace, we who have subscribed our names, have thought proper to form ourselves into a Society for these purposes. [That their walks hand in hand should be less liable to interruption it was made a secret society.]

Every person before hearing the constitution of this Society shall take the following affirmation, to wit: You promise before this Society, whether you become a member or not, that you will not directly or indirectly reveal anything concerning the laws or internal regulations thereof.

Having never affirmed as above, I feel no scruple in giving some points in the constitution. I shall not give the real "internal" name of this society, which is not the one at the head of this notice, for the reason that I do not know it. The name is left blank, and is the one "secret" of the society which all these years have kept. The constitution was an elaborate and cumbersome affair of seventeen articles. The president and vice president were chosen to serve eight weeks; the stated meetings were once in two weeks; "Philosophical or Literary questions" were to be provided for each meeting for "regular discussion or social investigation." Liberty was given every member to present "original communications on any subject of science, literature or the domestic arts; or the description of any remarkable occurrence or phenomena in nature. Those approved by the committee to be preserved in the Archives."

Members were admitted only by a unanimous vote. If no lady objected, gentlemen might be made honorary members. The records of the meetings have not been found, neither the archives, and the full results are not forthcoming. But we know that one young lady who signed the constitution was employed not long after to calculate eclipses, and assist in other astronomical observations needful for President Edward Hitchcock's famous almanac.

Subjects discussed at the meetings for four years are recorded, with the decision of the president, but as this was always "on the weight of the arguments adduced by the sides, without any regard to the true merits of the question or the real sentiments of the President," little knowledge of the sentiments of the young women of those days can be gathered. Curiously enough, however, after the flourish of trumpets at the organization, the question, "Ought ladies to endeavour to excell in the sciences?" was decided in the negative. What influences brought the strongest forces on the wrong side does not appear, but apparently the society was wrecked on that occasion, as that appears to be the last question ever debated by the association. Those who signed the constitution were:—

Elvira Wells,
Sophronia Smith,
Delia Williams,
Sophia Arms,
Lucinda E. Cooley,
Harriet J. Cooley,
Fanny Smith,
Clarissa Dickinson,
Lucy Arms,
Emila Hitchcock,
Fanny Hoyt,
Catherine Catlin,

Catherine S. Gorman,
Harriet Lyman,
Fidelia Wells,
Orra White,
Martha Arms,
Sophia Catlin,
Lucinda Nims,
Emily Trowbridge,
Louisa Wright,
Rebecca Jackson,

Miry Arms Lyman.

The "Literary Adelphi" was succeeded by other Adelphis, and the "Young Ladies Literary society" has had many worthy successors. Probably there was no time in the first half of this century when one or more similar organizations were not in active operation, and they brought upon the platform at Deerfield, not only her own citizens of note, but some of the leading thinkers of the nation; statesmen, jurists, orators and divines. Among those who have graced the platform are Benjamin R. Curtis, George Bancroft, Horace Greeley, Charles Sumner, Edward Everett, George N. Briggs, George S. Boutwell; and of Deerfield men, John Taylor, Epaphras Hoyt, Edward Hitchcock, Samuel Willard, Stephen W. Williams, John Wilson, Rodolphus Dickinson, Pliny Arms, Luther B. Lincoln, Bishop John Williams, Jonathan A. Saxton, Samuel Willard, Jr. Intellectual activity has been a marked characteristic of the community of which I write. Its center has always been at the Old Street. The poetic element has here found a quiet home. In 1799 "The Calliopean Rivulet" was meandering among her poetic fields and flowers. Bright flashes from its waters were often reflected upon the pages of the Gazette at Greenfield, but these poems were over the nom de plume of "Loridon," "Frederick" and "Aurelia," and the writers have not been identified.

At ordinations, celebrations and other public occasions, the supply of home-made hymns, odes or songs, has been equal to the large demand. Owing to the circumstances under which they were produced, these effusions have had a precarious existence, being as a rule found only on worn-out programmes or in worm-eaten scrap books; from these, most of the given specimens have been rescued. As witnesses of the intellectual atmosphere of Deerfield they should have a permanent place in this history.

Feb. 22d, 1832, the centennial anniversary of Washington's birthday was celebrated here with procession, military parade, dinner, oration, music, &c. The orator was Benjamin R. Curtis, late chief justice of the United States Supreme Court. His oration was printed. A pamphlet copy can be found in Memorial Hall. This fact is noticed because it has been widely claimed, and published, that the orator on this occasion was George Bancroft the historian. The following ode was written for the occasion by Jonathan A. Saxton:—

ODE.

Tune—MIRIAM'S SONG.

Hail to the day, which gave WASHINGTON birth!
 And joy to America, hope to the earth.
 Wreaths to the Chieftain, his Country who guided,
 And vanquished her foes in the strength of their might,
 Establish'd the peace, to his wisdom confided,
 Of's Country the father, and glory and light.
 Lift high our voices in triumph and joy,
 The freedom he gave us, time cannot destroy.

Hail to the day, which gave WASHINGTON birth!
 And joy to America, hope to the earth.
 Long shall his name live the first in our story,
 His love in the hearts of the free ne'er decay,
 His counsels still guide us to greatness and glory,
 Till time shall be lost in eternity's day.
 Lift high our voices in triumph and joy,
 The freedom he gave us, time cannot destroy.

Ever be honored our WASHINGTON's name,
 The Nations exult in the light of his fame.
 What though the fetters of tyrants have bow'd them,
 And chained the free heart down to bondage and shame,
 Through tempests and clouds which now darkly enshroud them,
 The star of their hope points to WASHINGTON's name
 Sing, for the hope of the glory to be,
 When tyrants shall perish and earth shall be free.

Yet there is gladness awaiting the slave,
 Nor heaven abandons the hopes of the brave.
 Onward the light, through the Nations advancing,
 Warms millions of hearts with the glow of its fire;
 From hill top and mountain its bright beams are glancing,
 And liberty's foes in its blaze shall expire.
 Be then our banner in triumph unfurl'd,
 Till knowledge and freedom have ransom'd the world.

May 14th, 1841, was the day of the national Fast, observed on the death of President Harrison. Services were held in the brick meetinghouse. Dr. Willard delivered the funeral oration and wrote the following for the occasion:—

STANZAS ON THE DEATH OF GEN. HARRISON.

Lo, the mightiest sons of time
 Fall beneath the shafts of heaven;
 As the oak, of height sublime,
 By the thunderbolt is riven.

So has fallen Columbia's Chief,
 Lately raised to power supreme;
 All his honors, ah! how brief!
 All our brilliant hopes a dream!

Hear the voice of God most high
 Hear, O hear, ye small and great;
 While for power, or place ye vie;
 While ye wear the robes of state.

Selfish aims be all forgot;
 Quench the flames of party strife;

Seek to improve the common lot;
Strive for justice, more than life.

Let each virtue pure and bright,
Which adorned the honor'd dead,
Emulation still excite;
Every public scene pervade.

So may God in mercy deign
Still to grant us joy and peace;
All our dearest rights maintain
Till the tide of time shall cease.

At the ordination of Daniel B. Parkhurst over the First Church, July 21st, 1841, there were two original hymns, each written "By a Member of the Society." One, I have ascertained, was written by Mr. Lincoln; the other is still anonymous.

HYMN.

BY LUTHER B. LINCOLN.

O Thou, enthroned in glory,
Mid angels of thy love!
Who makest, still, Thy Temple,
Each act Thou dost approve,
Thou, whom our fathers worshipped,
In that most trying hour,
When Sainted Williams praying,
Was nerved with holy power;

Thy love—the old traditions,
From age to age, shall tell;
Thy praise—our hearts most grateful,
In joy, to-day, shall swell.
O Father, smile benignant
On this our cherished one;
And may a work all beauteous,
This day, have been begun.

Thou Heaven, breathe on his spirit,
Thy beauty, Earth, adorn;
Thou starry Night, inspire him,
And Day, with light new-born.
Thus may he win the tempted,
The wanderer from afar,
To watch with holy rapture,
"THE BRIGHT—THE MORNING STAR."

BY A MEMBER OF THE SOCIETY.

Within this hallowed Temple, Lord,
We come to bow a reverend knee;
To own Thee as our highest good,
And consecrate ourselves to Thee.

This day let fervent praise ascend
For him whom Thou in love, hast given;
To warn us when we go astray,
And guide us to our home in heaven.

May every root of bitterness,
Of strife and sin be torn away;
While love to God and love to man,
Around our hearts, like sun-beams, play.

Beneath each dwelling's quiet shade,
An altar would we raise to Thee;
That we on earth may ever feel
The presence of the DEITY.

Hymns written for the dedication of the Town House,
March 1st, 1841:—

HYMN [Old Hundred].

Beside the Temple of Thy praise,*
Another altar we would raise,
O God of Truth! and let it be
To justice sacred and to Thee.

And when your sacrifice to Heaven,
On wings of faith and hope, is given,
May Holy Love its beams reflect,
And this our Civic Hall protect.

O, here triumphant may we see Thy Spirit, Great Humanity!
And all the kindred virtues meet
That dwell around the mercy seat,

The justice—Aristides loved;
The honest heart—that Phocion moved;
The pure—the manly—Godlike thought,
Which Jesus Christ so nobly taught.

Thus may the Angel of the Lord
No deed of darkness here record;
But may this Forum sacred be
To Honor, Truth, and Liberty.

Anonymous.

HYMN.

Oh should those times be now forgot,
The warwhoop's echo's shrill;
When 'twas our Grandsires' weary lot,
To guard their homes from ill.
When savages were peering round,
When oft the alarming cry
From hill and dale with warning sound,
Would through our valley fly.

No banquet halls, or costly domes,
Can purer hearts regale,
Than those who won for us our homes,
In this our lovely vale;
Then let us oft' a chorus raise,
Their memory to recall,
May oft' an echo to their praise
Be heard in this Town Hall.

May all that's noble, just and true.
Which our Fore-fathers taught,

* A meetinghouse had shortly before been erected upon the adjoining lot.

And truth forever springing new,
 Within these walls be brought;
 Within these walls may wisdom oft
 Her councils wise portray,
 May reason cheer us on with joy,
 Where truth shall lead the way.

And long within these walls may we
 Our Fellow Townsmen greet,
 May strife and discord ever be Discarded when we meet;
 And let us now each voice unite,
 Let every heart dilate,
 With grateful feelings here to-night
 This House to dedicate.

To Liberty and Justice too,
 To freedom in debate,
 To equal rights for each and all,
 This House we dedicate.
 This House we dedicate my Friends,
 This House we dedicate.
 To Liberty, and Equal rights,
 This House we'll dedicate.

The following ode was sung at a Washington birthday
 "Temperance Celebration at the Town Hall, Feb. 22, 1843."

ODE TO COLD WATER.

BY J. A. SAXTON.

Tune—"Sparkling and bright."

Sparkling and bright, in our bowls to-night,
 The true water of life is flowing,
 Reflecting hues of the crystal dew
 In the buds of the lily glowing.
 We drink to-night
 With sylphs of light,
 That love each gushing fountain;
 We drink with the flowers
 In their leafy bowers
 Of the Vale, or verdant Mountain.

In snow-wreathed domes, benignant gnomes
 Of the clouds are e'er distilling,
 In alembics of air, our beverage rare,
 And all earth's fountains filling.
 The glass again
 To the clouds we drain,
 In their gorgeous, changeful blending,
 As they float and gleam
 In the softened beam
 Of the evening sun descending.

In deeps of earth, has the forest birth,
 From fountains of life ever welling;
 Its strength abides in the crystal tides
 Which leap in its veins glad swelling.
 We pledge the Oak
 Of the rifted rock;
 The pine in graceful soaring;
 They drink from our bowl,

And laugh at the howl
Of the storm when wildest roaring.
On watery shroud the Eastern cloud
Its glorious arch has bended;
Divinely fair, proclaiming there,
The sky's wild tumult ended.
Celestial bow
Of promise now,
The sunbeam's radiant daughter,
We drink to thy shine,
Our cup it is thine,
Transparent, pure, cold water.

HYMN AT THE TABLE.

Creation's wine, of hue divine,
Great Nature's love confessing;
With joy and mirth it crowns the earth,
With beauty and with blessing.
We pledge the herds,
And the painted birds,
That sing on cleaving pinion.
The laughing hills
With their leaping rills
Exult in its dominion.
We fear no pain, while our cup we drain,
Its depths no curse concealing;
No demon wile lies hid in its smile;
Truth, Love and Peace revealing.
Now ere we part,
Awake each heart,
With Love and Hope before us,
And in gladness arise,
From the earth and skies,
One Universal chorus.

The oration on this occasion was by Hon. George Grennell, Jr., of Greenfield. After the oration the following hymn was sung:—

BY L. B. LINCOLN.

Tune—"National Hymn."

That noble band of pilgrims,
The honored Mayflower bore,
Had lighted up the altar
Of freedom on our shore;
Columbia's soil was christened,
In beauty and in youth
And sprinkled from the fountain
Of Liberty and Truth.

Humanity responded
And songs of joy and love
Reechoed through creation,
In earth and heaven above;
Bright genius of our country,
Most fervently we pray,
O, still attune thy harp strings
To this all hallowed lay.

And when old England's prowess
 Came thund'ring o'er the wave,
 To wrest from us those treasures
 Which Heaven in mercy gave,
 Then stood great Vernon's Chieftain,
 And with his patriot band
 Burn'd incense on the altar,
 And purified the land.

But yet there was a tyrant
 Within the human breast,
 That cursed the beauteous heritage
 Which heavenly love had blessed.
 The Eden of the spirit
 It ravaged by its fire,
 The flowers of virtue wither,
 The angel plants expire.

Again the Holy Spirit
 Bade suffering man rebel;
 Old appetite is conquered
 By virtue from the Well.
 "Salvation, O, salvation,
 The joyful notes proclaim,"
 The soul of man has risen
 In God, its Father's name.

At the dinner which concluded the celebration, when the wit and wisdom of the company was tested in toast and story, "Parson" Philo Munn made a good local hit. "The point lies in the application." On the old Arms homestead, then in other hands, stood a store in which "the ardent" was freely sold with, a back door conveniently near the well. Its customers complained that "watering the stock" had been too freely indulged in—presumably a groundless charge—but Parson Munn, accepting it, gave as his toast, "Deacon Arms's Old Well: it has done more than anything else to weaken and reduce our old Enemy."

ORDINATION OF JOHN F. MOORS OVER THE FIRST PARISH IN DEERFIELD, JAN. 28TH, 1846.

ORDINATION HYMN.

(To be sung by the Congregation.)

The sacred rite, O God! is done;
 Before thee stands the anointed one;
 Our prayers have borne his name above;
 We wait thy blessing, God of love.

'Tis thine to grant our soul's desire;
 'Tis thine to bid our hopes expire;
 And in this glad, yet solemn hour,
 Our spirits own thy sovereign power.

Kind Father, bless this sacred tie!
 O! let our prayers be heard on high!
 The oft-repeated stroke restrain,
 Nor bid our Zion mourn again!

The love that filled the sainted breast,
Of those who now have found their rest,
Their steadfast faith and dauntless zeal,
May these thy Servant's bosom fill.

So let him walk with Thee below;
So onward press through joy and woe;
And, glad with hope, or tempest-driven,
Find earth the vestibule of Heaven.

Mary Willard.

The following, by Eliza Allen Starr, was written for the same occasion:—

HYMN.

All hail! fair truth's anointed,
Who of the sinless Christ
A herald is appointed,
Fresh girded for the right,—
These hands of consecration,
Pledge his whole soul to thee,—
Be Thou his inspiration,
All-present Deity!

Lo! angels round the altar,
In radiant circles press,
To clothe thy truth's apostle
With robes of righteousness;
And blissful revelations
Before his vision sweep,
Of Him who saves the wand'ring,
And dries the eyes that weep.

And they the dear departed,
Who prophet-like have trod,
In meekest robes of priesthood
This temple of our God,
Linked in one holy union,
Kneel with him, side by side,—
The perfected through sorrow,—
His upward steps to guide.

O! hear, our Lord and Father,
The prayers thy children raise,
In earnest hope, though trembling,
This day with songs of praise—
The Lord—His loving kindness,
His mercy will not cease,
Whose love is our salvation,
Our everlasting peace!

The following ode was written for a Field meeting of the P. V. M. Association at Charlemont, Aug. 2d, 1871; on the occasion of dedicating a monument to the memory of Capt. Moses Rice and Phineas Arms, who were killed by Indians, June 11th, 1755.

ODE.

BY CAROLINE S. CATLIN.

[Air—"Scots wha hae."]

Roll swiftly back, O mist of years,
And bring once more before our view

The days of yore, the noble men
 And women brave and true.
 The peaceful fields we till with ease,
 They sowed in fear of deadly foe,
 And oft the silent arrow sped,
 And laid the yeoman low.

We owe to them our smiling vales,
 We owe our meadows broad and fair,—
 And pay we faithful tribute here
 To virtues rich and rare.
 They fled from tyranny and wrong,
 They braved, in faith, the stormy sea,
 In darkest hour they raised the song,
 And bent to God the knee.

We mourned their virtues passed away,
 The nation led in Mammon's train;
 Ah, woe the time when faith and truth
 Are lost in love of gain.
 But when through all the awe-struck land
 Rang out the clarion call "To Arms!"
 The nation spurned the coward brand
 And echoed back, "To Arms!"

No more we say that faith and truth
 Have left the stricken earth again,—
 We mourn, instead, the vanished youth
 All numbered with the slain.
 We raise to them the granite pile,
 We weave them wreaths of brightest sheen,
 Recall their deeds, with tear and smile,
 And keep their memory green.

Ode written in the centennial year of our nation by Lucretia Wilson Eels, for the bi-centennial of the battle at Turners Falls, celebrated by the Pocumtuck Valley Memorial Association, May 31st, 1876.

Faint and dim are the echoes borne
 From a century gone, before
 That signal flashed from Boston-spire
 Far out on a midnight shore,
 And onward sped, till rose the sun,
 The immortal day of Lexington.

A hundred years, ere flag unfurled
 And shot was fired by Concord flood,
 The deadlier savage barb was hurled,
 And Peskeompskut drenched in blood;
 And mid the roar of rushing wave,
 Rose dying moans of slaughtered brave.

Baptized in blood, the waters bear
 The fallen Turner's deathless name;
 Mingling for aye their ceaseless flow
 With the martyr'd hero's deeds and fame;
 Where cities rise, nor is left a trace
 Along its shores, of the vanquished race.

Oh, not alone, this glorious year,
 Let cannon boom and screaming shell
 Of that proud day of a nation freed

And its majestic triumphs tell;
But valiant deeds of those men of yore
In the fiercer strife that had gone before.

Nursed by those faithful hearts and true,
Through its early suffering years,
Struggling, the new-born nation grew
Like the Hebrew mother's child of tears;
Trusting alone in her God to save
Its frail bark rocked on the treacherous wave,

The spark of liberty that flashed
When the foot of the pilgrim prest
The flinty rock of Plymouth, burned
In every patriot breast,
From the first print on New England shore
To the blood-stained stones of Baltimore.

And like Clan-Alpine's cross of fire,
From hand to hand the brand was flung;
Down the long years from son to sire
The blazing torch of freedom sprung,
Till the sign of its banner floating free
In the breath of heaven, is liberty.

Then, not alone for one proud day
Let the mightiest anthems ring,
And kings and empires from afar
Their gorgeous offerings bring,
But for woes and toils our fathers bore,
In the stern sad century gone before.

It had been my purpose to close this chapter with a bibliographical sketch of the literature of Deerfield; but being met with so many difficulties, the plan was abandoned, and I give instead a bare list of those connected with the town by birth or residence, some of whose writings have appeared in book form and have come to my knowledge:—

CHAPTER XXVIII.

SCHOOLS—DEERFIELD ACADEMY—POCUMTUCK VALLEY MEMORIAL ASSOCIATION.

Brief annals relating to schools will be continued from Chapter X. From 1703 to 1720 there is no record of any action by the town concerning schools, but even in the straitened condition of the people it cannot be that the subject of education was ignored or totally neglected. Probably a system of private schools was adopted. No other explanation can be found for a vote passed by the town, Nov. 6th, 1707, to "sell the schoolhouse for five pounds to Joseph Alexander." This, doubtless, must have been the "Town School House" built in 1698, and so it was another building which escaped the destruction of Feb. 29th, 1704.

Nov 3, 1720 the Town then Granted y^e summ of twenty pounds in money for y^e year ensuing towards y^e encouragment of a school in Deerfield the scholars makeing up with s^d sum that a School Master may be hired for by a Committee chosen to y^e Business, which committee shall have power to hire s^d School Master for y^e whole year, half a year, or a quarter of it, or what part, and the twenty pounds in money before mentioned to be apportioned to y^e time they shall hire the School Master for.

At y^e same meeting y^e Town made choice of Sam^l Barnard Sam^l Field and John Arms to be as a Committe for y^e concerns of y^e school, to hire a School Master, to hire a School house, or whatever is proper for a School Committee to Doe

Voted affirmatively

1722. The selectmen were authorized to hire a school-house and hire a school master to teach reading, writing and cyphering for half a year, the scholars being only required to furnish firewood.

1723. Voted to "build a school house forthwith" and to have the school continued for the year ensuing.

1724. March 9th, "Voted that a School Master be hired for y^e year ensuing and y^t y^e selectmen shall take care to hire some fit person to learn youth to Read and cypher."

1725. Voted to give Moses Nash £35 for keeping school one whole year. Nash was one of the selectmen that year.

1728. This year women came again to the front. Bridget Barnard was voted ten shillings a week for keeping school to Oct. 15th. Liberty was given "to all farmers to procure School Dames to teach their children, to be paid three pence a week for each scholar until Oct 15."

I suppose this vote refers to the Green River people living at the "Farms," which was then and long after the center of population in that district. It was voted at the same meeting,—

To hire a gramer School Master from y^e 15th of Oct^r to y^e first of Ap^l ensuing [1732, Voted] to pay a school dame for keeping a school at Green River this summer.

[1733] four pence a week per scholar allowed to farmers for there schooling the summer past

[1735] 4d a week allowed per scholar for all scholars for there schooling this summer.

1736. There was a master in town and a dame at Green River, at four pence a week per scholar. Prices were raised the next year.

1737. The "Farmers" were allowed "5d per week per scholar."

[1739] Voted that there shall be a school house built in the spring. That it be built at or near y^e old place, the lower floor one foot below y^e surface of y^e ground, y^e upper floor to be made with clay, the dimensions of the House to be 16 feet y^e one way, 25 feet y^e other, three windows on y^e south side, one at each end, two small chimneys on y^e north side with iron mantle peaces

[1740] Voted not to build a school house at Green River nor to hire a school master, y^e Selectmen to determine where and how long y^e school shall be kept at Green River & so at Town

1741. Voted to petition the General Court for leave to sell lands given for school purposes by Mrs. Hannah Beaman. Leave was granted and Rev. Jona. Ashley became the purchaser.

1742. A schoolmaster was allowed at Green River, to be provided by the selectmen, who were also empowered to "get some one to preach" there this winter.

1744. Nov. 23d, voted to Greenfield £60 for 1743-4, for schooling and preaching, to be divided and expended at their will.

1748. The wages of the school dame at Green River to be 30s, O. T., per week.

1750. A master all the year round allowed Green River school.

1756. "Voted there shall be $2\frac{1}{2}$ d per scholar per week allowed for y^e children that were schooled at Wapping, and the Bars, y^e year passed."

1758. The wages of Ruth Hawks for the season were £2, 5s, 2d.

[1759] $2\frac{1}{2}$ pence a week allowed for scholars at Wapping & Muddy Brook

[1760, Oct. 20] Voted to build a new school house of y^e Dimensions of 22 feet square 7 foot stud to be doubly boarded on the outside, y^e wall filled in & light ceiled & double floored below * * * to be erected at or near y^e front of y^e lane between Ebenezer Wells & Jeremiah Nims.

This was the heater piece at the entrance of Memorial Lane.

Oct. 28th, the location was changed to be "on y^e south side of y^e present school house and as near it as may." This was on the northwest corner of the old "Smead lot" of 1671. The old schoolhouse was converted into a ferry house at the north end of Pine Hill.

1761. The pay for "reading scholars" was $2\frac{1}{2}$ d, and for "writing scholars" $1\frac{1}{2}$ d per week.

1763. Voted "that those people who live at the Farms, & have no benefit of y^e schools in the Town Plat," shall have their proportion of money to school their own children.

1767. Six pounds allowed Bloody Brook towards building a schoolhouse.

1770. Bloody Brook allowed £2, 16s to hire a master to teach reading and writing.

1771. It was provided that each scholar should furnish one load of wood, and in default thereof to be turned out of school.

December, $2\frac{1}{2}$ d was allowed Widow Sarah Shattuck and Lucy Wright for each child in their schools at Bloody Brook.

There is very little record of schoolmasters during the Revolution. Doubtless schools were kept up.

1779. Voted to hire a schoolmaster constantly in the town, and Wapping was granted £72 (Continental) towards building a schoolhouse.

1782. March 4th, voted "to hire a Grammar Schoolmaster in this town & two schoolmasters from the middle of October to the middle of April next."

1787. At the April meeting a new leaf was turned over. "Col. Joseph Stebbins, Col. T. W. Dickinson, Samuel Childs, Lieut. John Bardwell & Samuel Harding," were chosen a committee to examine into the subject, and report whether or not it were best to adopt a new method of schooling the children. They reported an acceptable plan, under which the town was divided into six districts, "for the ensuing year." The districts are named below, with the amount of money assigned to each. This must be a pretty close guide to the population in the different parts of the town at this date:—

Town Street and Cheapside,	£40	14,
Wapping and Bars,	9	10,
Great River,	5	12,
Muddy Brook,	10	15,
Mill River,	8	4,
West Side of Deerfield River,	5	8.

In the town street two schools were kept, but a need was felt for better accommodations and a higher grade of instruction. To meet this lack, fifteen citizens of the village, viz.: Maj. Salah Barnard, Maj. Seth Catlin, Dea. Jona. Arms, Ens. Joseph Barnard, Simeon Harvey, Samuel Field, Esq., Col. Joseph Stebbins, Eliphalet Dickinson, Col. Thomas W. Dickinson, Aaron Arms, Dr. Elihu Ashley, Capt. John Locke, John Williams, Esq., and Zur Hawks, met Oct. 8th, 1787, and formed themselves into a sort of a corporation, under the title of "Proprietors of the New School." The corporation was officered by John Williams, clerk; Salah Barnard, treasurer; Salah Barnard, Jona. Arms and John Williams, assessors.

Westwood C. Wright was employed, and before the first of January, 1788, he built a schoolhouse on the spot where Philo Munn's shop now stands. Each share represented two scholarships, and the school could not exceed thirty pupils. The shares were transferable to such parties only as the corporation approved. At a meeting, Jan. 21st, 1788, it was agreed to pay 6s a week for the schoolmaster's board; to keep the school from 8.30 to 12 A. M., and 1.30 to 5 P. M. A committee was raised to appraise firewood, making the standard, oak, at 6s per cord; and another committee to prepare a code of rules and orders. The cost of the building and expenses for the first quarter was £150. Freegrace Reynolds was the first teacher. Mr. Reynolds was born in Somers, Ct., 1767, was graduated at Yale in 1787, and licensed to preach in 1790; of this license he availed himself so far as to preach to one parish in Connecticut, nine in Vermont and seven in Massachusetts, his last settlement being at Leverett, Dec. 5th, 1832. He left there in 1837 to spend his last days in Wilmington, Mass., it is to be hoped, in peace. The school proved a success, and I notice it as the germ from which the Deerfield Academy sprung ten years later.

Deerfield Academy. The act establishing this institution was approved by Samuel Adams, governor, March 21st, 1797. The men of the old corporation named in this act were John Williams, Seth Catlin, Joseph Stebbins and Joseph Barnard. The papers of the Academy corporation were destroyed when the house of the secretary, Dexter Childs, was burned, and no connected account can be found of the preliminaries for organizing this new enterprise. It appears that an application was made to the town for aid, but by a vote July 4th, 1796, it was refused, and that the money for putting up a school building was raised by a general contribution among the men of Deerfield in sums of from twenty to one hundred dollars, amounting to about thirteen hundred dollars, and notes for payment were given March 30th, 1797. At the same date about fourteen hundred dollars was raised by subscription as a permanent fund. This was in sums ranging from twenty to one hundred and fifty dollars secured by bonds at six per cent. interest. Sample bonds are still extant; at least six of these were running so late as 1830. This was the nucleus of the fund lately transferred to the trustees of the Dickinson Academy.

The first meeting of the trustees was held April 18th, 1797, at the tavern of Erastus Barnard, the present "Frary House." Rev. Roger Newton of Greenfield, was chosen president; Rev. John Taylor, vice-president; Deacon Jona. Arms, treasurer; and Dr. Wm. S. Williams, secretary; a committee was chosen to buy an acre of land of Seth Nims, on the south part of his home lot. This is the land on which Memorial Hall now stands; it cost $333.34. A committee was also chosen to report a plan of a building. June 18th, this committee reported in favor of a brick structure 60 x 26 feet, two stories, with a piazza at one end, and a cupola on the roof; this report was accepted, and Esq. John Williams, Joseph Barnard and Maj. David Dickinson chosen a building committee. At a later meeting the piazza was cut off, and the width made 28 feet. In this form it was built the same year; the bricks were made on the Nims lot, a few rods to the east, where a brick yard was continued some thirty or forty years. In 1797 the fund of the Academy was increased by a grant from the Massachusetts Legislature of one-half of a township of land in Maine. No account of the disposition of this land has been found.

At a meeting of the trustees, Dec. 31st, 1798, — thus reads the record,—

A number of gentlemen and donors to the Academy, considering the present occasion, and wishing to be instrumental in promoting the convenience and gratifying the curiosity of a respectable concourse of spectators, pray that leave may be granted them to illuminate the Academy building to-morrow evening; and from the best information, we presume a great number of strangers will attend which cannot be provided for in the manner in which our inclination suggests; we therefore beg permission for once, the occupancy of the hall for the evening.

What the “inclinations” of the petitioners might “suggest” did not appear to the guardians of the property, and the request was promptly refused. After a personal interview, however, and grave deliberation, a guarded assent was given.

January 1st, 1799, was a gala day in Old Deerfield, and an important era in her history. On this day the Academy was formally opened, and dedicated by a sermon in the meeting-house by Rev. Joseph Lyman of Hatfield, one of the trustees. The meeting being adjourned to the Academy, Roger Newton, president of the board, formally inducted Enos Bronson into the office of Preceptor of the Deerfield Academy, and delivered him the keys of the building. Of the illumination and occupancy of the hall in the evening no report has been received.

The first quarter closed March 25th, 1799, with forty-nine pupils. The average for the year was sixty-seven to the term, a total of two hundred and sixty-nine; of these, sixty-eight only were from Deerfield. Northampton sent nineteen; Greenfield, eighteen; Conway, seventeen; Northfield, thirteen; Hadley, eleven; Brattleboro and Suffield, each ten;

Shelburne, eight; Amherst, Hatfield, Springfield, Vt., and Wilmington, Vt., each six; Ashfield, five; Colrain, four; Albany, Dalton, Ashby, Guilford, Greenwich, Hawley, three; Hardwick, Longmeadow, Royalston, Springfield and Whately, two; and one each from Brookfield, Buckland, Easthampton, Great Barrington, Heath, Lebanon, N. Y., Montague, New Salem, Putney, Vt., Southampton, Stockbridge, Warwick, Westhampton, Westfield and Worthington. The quarter bills paid by the pupils for the year, amounted to $690.88.

Generous donations were made to furnish the philosophical apparatus and endow the library, notably by David Wells of Greenfield; Abigail Norton, Jona. Arms and Col. Asa Stebbins of Deerfield. In 1806, Col. Stebbins presented a "Planetarium" and "Lunarium," and his name was ordered to be engraved thereon. Many similar votes to benefactors were recorded by the secretary.

In 1803, the trustees had leave of the town to build pews in the back parts of the north and south galleries in the meetinghouse.

For ten years the school had been prosperous, and proved by its usefulness, the wisdom of its founders, its right to be, and its good management. Larger accommodations were now required, and, in 1809, the trustees voted to enlarge the building by the addition of another story, and a wing thirty feet square on the northwest side. Hitherto the preceptors had short terms of service. Mr. Bronson, the first, but one term; he was a graduate of Yale, 1798, and died in 1823; John Williams, Jr., was usher. His successor, Claudius Herrick, was of Yale, in the same class with Mr. Bronson; he entered the ministry in 1801, and died in 1831. Mr. Herrick delivered an oration at Deerfield, at the obsequies of Washington, before noted, and another July 4th, 1800, which was printed. His son, Edward Claudius Herrick, born in New Haven, 1811, was the learned librarian of Yale College, from 1842 to 1858, and contributed to the American Journal of Science valuable papers on etymology, meteorology and astronomy. Elijah Alvord of Greenfield was usher. Samuel Fisher, who had also been usher under Mr. Herrick, was promoted to the head of the Academy, to be followed in one year by Henry Lord of Killingworth, Ct., a graduate of Yale in 1801. He became a minister and died in 1834. John Hubbard, who succeeded Mr. Lord, was born in Townsend in 1769, a graduate of Dartmouth in 1785. He was a man of considerable note; Judge of Probate for Cheshire County, N. H., from 1798 to 1802, when he came to Deerfield. He left his office here to become Professor of Mathematics and Natural Philosophy at Dartmouth, was author of Rudiments of Geography, American Reader, and other publications, and died at Hanover in 1810. His successor, Allen Greeley, a graduate of Dartmouth in 1804, was here but three terms, he became a minister, and was tutor at Middlebury College and lived till 1866. His classmate, Avery Williams of Leverett, a graduate of Deerfield Academy, who followed him for two terms, was also a minister, and died in 1816. The next preceptor was John Chester of Wethersfield, Ct., a graduate of Yale in 1804, a classmate of John C. Calhoun; he began to preach at Hartford in 1807, became a D. D., and died in 1829. He was succeeded in 1806 by Hosea Hildreth, a graduate of Harvard in 1805; he became a minister and died in 1835. His son, Richard Hildreth, the celebrated journalist and historian, was born here, in the Dr. Willard house, June 28th, 1807. Mr. Hildreth's assistant was Israel Wells of Shelburne. A new departure was made this year, under the pressure of the times. A military professorship was added to the curriculum, under Maj. Epaphras Hoyt, who taught the "Theoretical and practical art of war," with instructions in the field, in geometry, the elements of fortification and the construction of small works.

The first preceptress was Miss Eunice Woodbridge, engaged for the summer term of 1802; her career in this field came to an untimely end by marriage to John Williams, one of the trustees. At the annual meeting of the corporation Mr. Williams had been chosen on a committee "to manage the interests of the trustees." As far as the interest of one trustee was concerned he appears to have been eminently successful in his management. He had been a generous benefactor to the Academy, and might have looked upon the whole transaction in the light of an Indian gift. It was, however, as we shall see, a dangerous precedent. Undismayed by the fate of her predecessor, Sally Williams, a graduate of Deerfield Academy, which she entered at the age of twenty-one, next accepted the office; she was a relative of Esq. John and probably furnished by him as a substitute for the late Miss Woodbridge; she remained two years, when she received another call similar to that of her predecessor. She died March 28th, 1845. Miss Jerusha Williams, a descendant of our first minister, was preceptress from 1806 to 1811.

At the period we are considering, this institution stood in the front rank of the Academies in the land. With an established reputation, and enlarged facilities for usefulness, the trustees hoped by pursuing the same policy to place it, at the end of a second decennial, on a still higher plane.

In 1810, the enlargement of the building was completed, much as we see it to-day in Memorial Hall. Twelve rooms were fitted up for boarders, a bell bought to call them to time, and Asahel Wright engaged for a steward. At the opening of the Academy under the new establishment "the preceptors and ushers, besides teaching the arts and sciences, were directed to instill into the minds of the pupils moral and Christian principles, and form in them habits of virtue and the love of piety." The standard of admission was raised, the study of natural history, natural philosophy and logic encouraged, and "no person was suffered to attend to painting, embroidery, or any other of the ornamental branches to the neglect of the essential and fundamental parts of education." It was under this rule, perhaps, that for many years there was no chattering of foreign tongues, and no jargon of the dead languages heard within these walls. Addisonian and Johnsonian mother-tongue were good enough for Yankees in those days. For the regulation of affairs at the school, a brief code of by-laws, of only thirty-six articles, was provided. A few extracts will be made for the benefit of the boys and girls who may think the regulations of to-day rather "strict." Pupils of different sexes were not allowed to meet upon the grounds or within the walls of the Academy except at meals and prayers, nor walk or ride or visit together, under a penalty of one dollar. None were allowed to be absent from meeting, Sunday, Fast or Thanksgiving day, under a penalty of one dollar, and a fine of one dollar was sure if they didn't behave well when there. For walking in the streets and fields, or visiting, Saturday night or Sunday, there was a fine of one dollar. No playing cards, backgammon or checkers in the building, without a loss of the inevitable dollar, if detected. It is to be hoped that the pupils were well supplied with pocket money, otherwise there must have been a great commotion amongst the "dollars of the fathers" about which so much is said now-a-days. Perhaps it was at the suggestion of these said fathers that a close board fence was built from the south side of the Academy across the yard to the road, to keep the boys and girls apart. Of course, separate entrances to the building and separate schoolrooms were provided.

Playing ball or similar games near the Academy was prohibited under a penalty of six cents, and a fine of six cents for any found out of their rooms during study hours. The morning prayers were at five o'clock, or as soon as it was light enough to read, with a fine of four cents for absence and two cents for being tardy; study hours commenced an hour later. Fines were imposed for damage to library books or books belonging to each other, at the rate of six cents for a blot, six cents for each drop of tallow; for every leaf torn six cents an inch, for every letter written on it, inside or out, two cents, for every mark or scratch two cents. After numerous other offenses were provided with suitable penalties, the preceptor seems to have had a general commission to impose a fine of fifty cents whenever he had the toothache, or the wind happened to be in the east.

The first preceptor I have found under the new establishment was Rev. Edward Tucker from Heath. He occupied the building and boarded scholars at $1.50 a week, and charged for rooms from 75 cts. to $1.50 per week.

Aaron Arms, a Deerfield boy, a graduate of the Academy in 1809, and of Yale in 1813, came fresh from the latter institution to preside over the former. This he did with credit and success for two years, when he left to read law. He was admitted to the Franklin County Bar in 1817. He died in 1849.

Edward Hitchcock, another Deerfield boy, born in 1793, whose entire school education was obtained at six winter terms of this institution, while working as a farm laborer the rest of the year, was the next preceptor, and although for many years the moving spirit and president of Amherst College, and the recipient of high honors from Harvard and Yale, he was never a graduate of any other institution than this.

While a pupil three months, and farm laborer nine months in the year, he had developed an ardent love for studying the science of nature that marked the coming man. His favorite study was astronomy, and this he pursued with an ardor which nothing but physical disability could subdue. When the astronomical apparatus in the Academy failed to meet his wants, his ingenuity was equal to devising and manufacturing instruments to supply his requirements.

In 1817, Mr. Hitchcock asks the co-operation of the public in collecting specimens of the minerals and compound rocks of the county, to be deposited in the Academy. Thus was made an important addition to the museum.

It was while Mr. Hitchcock was at the head of this Academy that he boldly entered the lists in a contest with the astronomers of Europe, and came off victor, after a sharp and prolonged contest, astonishing the magnates there by his skill and power. It is risking but little to say, that, but for a partial failure in his eyesight, Dr. Hitchcock would have made a place for himself by the side of the leading men of the world, in this, his first chosen field.

While holding the office of preceptor he found time to make the necessary astronomical observations for the almanacs which he published in 1813, 14, 15, 16 and 17. That he did not meanwhile neglect his duties as a teacher, is proved by the fact that one of his pupils, Rebecca Jackson of Newton, in addition to the required "essential and fundamental parts of education," found time to learn the paths of the planets, and to calculate eclipses of the sun and moon. I question whether another person in town, not a pupil of Mr. Hitchcock, save Gen. Epaphras Hoyt, can, or ever could, trace the trackless spheres through space and mark the moment and manner of their meeting.

During all the years he labored here as preceptor, Mr. Hitchcock had an able assistant in Miss Orra White. She, too, could calculate eclipses, and she calculated to, and did, eclipse from her unsophisticated superior all the shining lights of his native town. When leaving this institution in 1819,—having before him the example of the trustee who enticed away the first preceptress,—Mr. Hitchcock made no scruple of engaging Miss Orra to go with him as his assistant for life.

The income from tuition bills for 1812 was $555, in 1813 it was $385, with no essential change until the last year of Mr. Hitchcock, when it fell off to $289. The last two terms of 1819 were exclusively a girl's school, the income from which was only $89, which proves conclusively—something,—but I don't know what. And so the second decade of the life of Deerfield Academy closed.

Leaving a rich field for future research, I give only a bare and imperfect list of the preceptresses and preceptors after 1819 to its union with the High School in 1876:—

Mary Bancroft [sister of the historian],	Mrs. C. M. Crittenden,	Joseph Anderson,
Sarah B. Goodhue,	Ellen Gage,	Charles G. Corse,
Jane Pidgeon,	Mary Cruttenden,	Winthrop Bailey,
Martha Harding,	Sarah B. Willard,	Luther B. Lincoln,
Emily Draper,	Susan M. Lane,	Samuel Willard, Jr.,
Charlotte Catlin,	C. Alice Baker,	Cotton M. Crittenden,
Hannah Ripley,	Mary E. Young,	John M. Thompson,
Harriet R. Stone,	Emily Poor,	Henry K. Warriner,
Mary Willard,	Mrs. V. M. Howard,	J. C. Brown,
Mrs. Susan B. Lincoln,	Jona. A. Saxton,	R. D. Smith,
Lucretia Wilson,	Henry P. Kendell,	Benj. S. Lyman,
Eliza A. Starr,	Joseph Field,	Horatio Alger,
Martha Carter,	Frederick H. Allen,	George W. Bartlett,
	Zenas Clapp,	Virgil M. Howard.

In 1819 there was a strong movement for relocating Williams College, and Deerfield put in a claim to have it brought here. May 15th, 1819, while the matter was under consideration in the legislature, a committee of that body gave a hearing on the question to the Deerfield people. Northampton people argued for that place as more central, and promised $50,000 for the benefit of the college, and the legislative committee favored that town. Williamstown opposed any change and in 1820 the committee reported in favor of leaving the college undisturbed.

Dickinson Academy and Deerfield High School is a free institution founded, in 1876, under the will of Esther Harding Dickinson. Soon after, the funds of the Deerfield Academy were transferred to the trustees of the Dickinson school; a new building was erected on the home lot of Mrs. Dickinson for the use of the school, and also for a free library and reading room. Here boys and girls are fitted for college. At Bloody Brook there is a high school in a building put up by the town, and a good library has been established there.

Pocumtuck Valley Memorial Association. The first public utterance, which was to test the feelings of the people concerning associated action in perpetuating the memory of our ancestors, was an appeal through the county newspaper in September, 1869. The response to this was such that the Pocumtuck Valley Memorial Association was formed; this was chartered by the Massachusetts legislature, May, 1870. The avowed purpose of the association was:—

Collecting and preserving such memorials, books, records, papers and curiosities, as may tend to illustrate and perpetuate the history of the early settlers of this region, and of the race which vanished before them, and the erection of a Memorial Hall in which such collections can be securely deposited.

The association was organized, May 26th, 1870, and a constitution adopted. The following officers were elected: President, Geo. Sheldon of Deerfield; vice-presidents, Josiah D. Canning of Gill, James M. Crafts of Whately; recording secretary, Nathaniel Hitchcock of Deerfield; corresponding secretary, Rev. Dr. Robert Crawford of Deerfield; treasurer, Nathaniel Hitchcock; councilors, Rev. P. Voorhees Finch of Greenfield, D. Orlando Fisk of Shelburne, Jonathan Johnson of Montague, Moses Stebbins of Deerfield, Roswell Field of Gill, Rev. Edgar Buckingham of Deerfield, L. W. Rice of Greenfield. At a meeting of the councilors the same day, George Sheldon, Rev. Dr. Crawford and Rev. Mr. Buckingham were appointed a finance committee, and Geo. Sheldon and Rev. Mr. Finch were appointed a committee to solicit members to the association.

In 1878, the Deerfield Academy, a three-story brick building built in 1798, came into the hands of the Association. Some needful changes were made for convenience and security from fire, and in 1880 the Association began a collection of memorials which has increased from year to year until it has in this country no rival in its chosen field. A catalogue was printed in 1886.

In addition to making this unique collection, the Association has held annual meetings, where original papers, giving the results of extensive research, have been read, and thus a large amount of historical matter has been discovered and laid before the public. It has also held annual Field Meetings, where similar papers have been read.

Permanent results have followed these meetings. Vol. I of its Proceedings has been published, and Vol. II is now ready for the press. In the track of the Field Meetings may be seen ruinous graveyards restored, everlasting monuments marking historic places or the site of tragic events, town histories written, and in one case a new Memorial building; and not the least of all, a generation growing up with positive knowledge of, and interest in, local colonial history. The library of the Association now contains in books and pamphlets about eleven thousand titles. It is thus characterized by the one who made the catalogue:—

A peculiar and distinctive feature of this Library is that these volumes carry an atmosphere of personality with them; nearly all have been read and pondered over by some one of the thinking men and women whose names are found on the fly leaves. They represent, literally, the culture and literary life of the valley for two centuries. They were gathered, to a large degree, from the garrets and closets of old houses in this valley.

Among other books may be found Dobson's "Encyclopædia or Dictionary of Arts, Sciences, and Miscellaneous Literature." This is the first American edition, with "five hundred and forty-two Copperplates;" eighteen volumes thick, quarto: Philadelphia, 1798. This is doubtless the work owned by the "Encyclopedia Company," spoken of elsewhere.

CHAPTER XXIX.

CIVIL LIST FOR TWO HUNDRED YEARS, 1686-1885.

Obliged to refrain from consulting original records in later years, many dates in the lists following were taken from printed Annual Registers. Several errors were discovered while copying, so that accuracy cannot in all cases be warranted. The date following the names is the year of appointment; the time of service is not always ascertained.

CHAPTER XXX.

THE GREAT REBELLION—SOLDIERS MONUMENT.

Rebellion—Town Action. 1861. May 2d, a committee was chosen to raise a company of volunteers to serve in the Massachusetts Volunteer Militia "according to the terms of a Circular presented to this Meeting." Sixteen hundred dollars was raised to uniform and clothe a company, or twenty dollars for each man who shall enlist. Twelve hundred dollars was raised for the support of the families of volunteers, from which to pay a bounty of ten dollars a month for each man in actual service; one dollar a day for each man while drilling. Members of the band who enlisted to have the same pay as soldiers.

1861. Nov. 1st, the selectmen are authorized to pay all persons entitled to relief under the Act of May last.

1862. July 23d, voted to pay one hundred dollars bounty to each volunteer who shall go towards making up our quota of thirty-four men under an order of the Governor of July 14th, 1862. Sept. 6th, six thousand dollars was voted to be paid in bounties to those who enlist under the call of the President of Aug. 4th, 1862, for three hundred thousand men, one hundred dollars to be paid each volunteer, not to exceed sixty. Nov. 4th, the selectmen were directed to petition the General Court to confirm the doings of the town in raising money to pay bounties.

1863. Jan. 22d, voted to raise one hundred dollars for each of the eleven drafted men or the substitutes they procure. Voted to instruct our senator and representative in the General Court to favor a law under which the state should reimburse the towns and cities, the money paid for bounties not to exceed one hundred dollars each.

Apr. 6, 1863 The War Committee reported that since Apr. 1, 1862 there has been paid,

To families of volunteers
To three years men

$3,957 96
3,625 00

Nine months men	$4,600 00
Sept. 26, 1863 Reported expense of Recruiting	795 73
Refunded by the United States	415 00
Paid families of volunteers	5,057 54
Reimbursed by the State	3,508 31
For bounties paid volunteers	8,125 00

The selectmen were authorized to raise the quota of troops assigned Deerfield and to pay one hundred and twenty-five dollars bounty.

1864. May 24th, voted to pay three hundred dollars to each person drafted "under the call of March 14, 1864 calling for 200,000 more troops."

THE SOLDIERS MONUMENT.

It was while listening to an address by Rev. John F. Moors over the body of Col. George D. Wells, who was killed at Cedar Creek, Va., Oct. 13th, 1864, and thinking of the thousands of soldiers whose last resting place could never be known, and of others sleeping on each great battle field, that the idea of a soldiers monument came to one of the audience. Then and there a resolution was formed that at the close of the war one should be raised in honor of those soldiers who had died for Deerfield. At the earliest practical moment, after consultation with but a single individual, Samuel Willard, a resolution was introduced in town meeting, looking towards the accomplishment of that object. The project met with general approval; the result was our soldiers monument, one of the earliest and finest of its class.

This cenotaph is an obelisk of Portland sandstone with a base eight feet square, surmounted by a figure of a soldier in fatigue dress standing at rest. The proportions are perfect and its ornamentation elegant. The statue is a work of art. It stands upon the common of the Old Street, the Training Field of the first settlers, which was enclosed in the palisaded fort of 1690; its site was covered by the meetinghouse of 1729-1824. On the four sides near the base are the inscriptions given below; on small panels above these are the names of the battle fields on which our men were engaged.

On the front, facing the east, is inscribed:—

In grateful appreciation of the Patriotism and self sacrifice of Her lamented sons and soldiers, who for their Country and for Freedom laid down their lives in the war of the Great Rebellion

Deerfield

Erects this Monument

A. D. 1867.

Their precious dust is scattered on many battle fields, or was hastily buried near some loathsome prison-pen; but their names are here perpetuated, and the memory of their brave deeds and willing sacrifice shall be cherished in our heart of hearts sacredly and forever.

built A. D. 1689, and which remained until 1758,* and was one of the chief defenses of the early settlers against the attacks of the savage Indians.

With pious affection and gratitude their descendants would hereby associate the sacrifices and sufferings of the fathers of the town in establishing our institutions with those of their children in defending them.

Aye, call it holy ground
 The spot where first they trod ;
 They have left unstained what here they found—
 Freedom to worship God.

This monument was dedicated with interesting ceremonies Sept. 4th, 1867, under the direction of Josiah Fogg, Charles Arms, George Sheldon and Nathaniel Hitchcock, the committee of arrangements. James K. Hosmer was president of the day, and George W. Jones, chief marshal. Nathaniel Hitchcock, in behalf of the committee under whose direction the monument was raised, made a detailed report of their doings, and committed the monument to the care of the town.

An eloquent oration was delivered by Senator Henry L. Dawes of Pittsfield, and an original poem by E. W. B. Canning of Stockbridge. The following odes, by natives of Deerfield, were written for the occasion:—

BY ELIZA ALLEN STARR.

Tune—"America."

Through all the valley's length

* The fort was built in 1690, and it was demolished many years before 1758.

A voice of joyful strength
 Breaks forth in song;
 Blood of the patriot dead,
 Blood for one's country shed,
 Blood unto justice wed,
 Makes nations strong.

Bend, elms, your lotty crests,
 Where'er a soldier rests
 Embalmed in tears!
 Winds, pipe a requiem strain,
 Where upon hill or plain,
 Blood of a hero slain
 The soil endears!

The prisoner's wretched pen,
 The picket guard's lone fen,
 Have earned and won
 Fame, that shall never die
 While our starred colors fly,
 Brave as our eagle's eye,
 Against the sun.

Rise, storied shaft! and bear
 Their names, whose deeds make fair
 The glorious page;
 Where writ in words like gold,
 Columbia's struggle bold,
 Truth against Wrong, is told
 To latest age.

O native vale, most dear!
 Shout forth glad Freedom's cheer
 From hill to hill.
 Shades of our fathers! ye
 Bled but to make us free:
 Trust us; the land shall be True Freedom's still!

BY LUCRETIA WILSON EELS.

Tune—"John Brown's Body."

We consecrate this sculptural pile to valiant men of yore,
 Whose names and fame are linked with yours, bright hills, forevermore,
 And dear ones that but just have passed our darkened thresholds o'er;
 Their fame is marching on!

CHORUS. Glory! glory to these martyrs!
 Their fame is marching on!

On this enduring monument their deathless names we stamp,—
 The heroes of the battlefield, the prison and the camp,
 Whose brave hearts bore them onward thro' the weary, weary tramp;
 The Right was marching on!

CHORUS. Glory! glory to these martyrs! &c.

Mid burning homes and slaughtered babes, and war-whoop yells of fear,
 With blood and strife and agony were won these fields of deer—
 These peaceful vales, in beauty now, like Heaven reposing here;
 Their God was marching on!

CHORUS. Glory! glory to these martyrs! &c.

And once again to crush the Wrong the nation rose in might;
 And from the guns of Lexington to Yorktown's dawn of light,

Like Rizpah with her murdered sons, was watching thro' the night.
The Day was marching on!

CHORUS. Glory! glory to these martyrs! &c.

And when from Sumter's sullen walls, the blast defiant rung,
For Union and her shattered flag our loyal sons have sprung,
And to the dear old stripes and stars with dying grasp have clung;
The Right was marching on!

CHORUS. Glory! glory to these martyrs! &c.

In our country's hour of peril it was theirs to do and dare;
'Tis ours to guard their sacred fame with reverence and with care;
And the heritage of freedom to our children we will bear,
For God is marching on!

CHORUS. Glory! glory to these martyrs! &c.

BY MARY WILLARD.

"Tune—Old Hundred."

Brave spirits of the olden time,
Through lone and pathless wilds ye trod:
The peaceful homes that smile to-day,
Are your bequest through toil and blood.

No longer round the cabin door,
The dusky warrior prowls by night;
But hark! the trumpet call—"To arms!"
The battle cry is Truth and Right.

They come! they come! the martyr band,
To break the bondman's heavy chain,
That nobly great and grandly free,
Our native land may smile again.

O Patriot sons! O Pilgrim sires!
In time remote,—in valor one!
Through circling years your deeds shall live
In loving hearts and sculptured stone.

BY MARIA B. W. BARNES.

We've come to-day from near and far,
To this dear native vale,
And heard the story of the Past,—
That well-remembered tale.

CHORUS. The days of auld lang syne we sing,
And Freedom's struggle new!
And thank God for our noble sires,
And our brave boys in blue!

What stalwart arms! what dauntless hearts!
What deeds of high renown,
Were sanctified by precious blood
To plant this ancient town!

CHORUS. The days of auld lang syne we sing, &c.

Nor need we turn to bygone years
To find heroic deed;
Our own dead soldiers left a fame
That he who runs may read.

CHORUS. The days of auld lang syne we sing, &c.

Names that to us were household words,
Are now a nation's pride;
And we have learned that once we walked
With heroes by our side!

CHORUS. The days of auld lang syne we sing, &c.

Old Deerfield's sons are scattered wide
Throughout our favored land;
God grant they all may meet above,
An undivided band!

CHORUS. The days of auld lang syne we sing, &c.

THE FRANKLIN CADETS.

This crack independent company of militia was organized in 1823. Its originator and moving spirit was Elijah Williams, 2d. After drilling once a week for six months, the company paraded for the first time July 4th, 1824, in all the glory of a new uniform and new guns. Their guns were made to order at Springfield, and were of exactly the same pattern. They arrived via the Connecticut river and Sunderland, the morning of the parade. During the day a beautiful silk standard was presented to the company by the women of Deerfield. The presentation speech was made from the portico of Dr. William S. Williams's house, by "Little Mary" Hawks. She delivered the colors to Ensign Samuel Barnard Williams, who returned the thanks of the company in a fitting and feeling response. The day ended with a banquet given the cadets at the house of Ebenezer Hinsdale Williams, father of Elijah.

The writer, then six years old, was an eye witness to the exciting events of this day, but as he did not take notes he can give only the above meagre report from memory.

The Cadets appeared under arms quite often after that, and training days were great occasions for the boys and other camp followers, who watched the wonderful evolutions with mingled feelings of admiration and awe. The drill was almost machine like, and in company firing the captain was never satisfied if more than one report could be detected. They had regular army tents, and often camped out under strict military discipline. They were always prominent on "Muster days," and were in great demand and had a leading share in the many public celebrations in the town.

Their uniform was showy and picturesque; blue dress coats decked with a profusion of gilt buttons, white duck trousers, high, bell crowned sole leather helmets, surmounted by tall, black waving plumes, those of the officers being tipped with white or red. Its last parade was in 1854.

The following list of officers was furnished by Capt. Elisha Wells. The first officers were: captain, Elijah Williams; lieutenant, Seth Nims; ensign, Samuel B. Williams.

CAPTAINS.

The Old Deerfield Cannon. The old iron six-pounder, known to several generations as the "Old Cannon," once had a mate. The why or when of their separation is uncertain, as is also the time of their advent in Deerfield. It is a pretty safe conjecture, however, to suppose the pair were brought here by Gov. Belcher at the time he held a treaty with several Indian tribes at Deerfield in August, 1735. There is a constant tradition that Gov. Belcher presented them to the town,—what more fitting time than this? They would add much to the eclat of the occasion, and be expressive adjuncts to the show of power by the English. In 1737, there was another meeting with the tribes at Fort Dummer. Probably the mate of our old gun was taken up there at this time. At any rate, soon after this, there was a "Great Gun" at the fort, not otherwise accounted for. During the "Old French War" and the "Last French War," this "Great Gun" was fired to give warning to the settlers, whenever Indians, or signs of them, were discovered by the scouts, and also to call for help in case of an attack. On the conquest of Canada and the consequent dismantlement of Fort Dummer, this gun was probably taken by Col. Israel Williams, the military commander of the frontier, to his home in Hatfield. However it got there, it is certainly next found at Hatfield, as we shall see by record history to follow, and its fate we know as described by eye witnesses.

Returning to its mate in Deerfield, an interesting episode in its history is found in the subjoined petition:—

To the Honorable, the Council and Representatives of the State of Massachusetts Bay

The petition of Jonathan Hobby most Humbly sheweth That your petitioner in April last Employed Major James Gray of Stockbridge to purchase Cannon for a privateer belonging to your Petitioner, among those purchased by the said Major Gray was one purchased of Coll William Williams of Pittsfield, and that the said Major Gray came to Deerfield where the Cannon lay; in removing of it out of Town was interrupted by the Committee of said Town of Deerfield and the Cannon Conveyed Back, to the loss and damage of your petitioner

Therefore your petitioner humbly prays your Hon^{rs} would send orders to said Committee to deliver said Cannon to your petitioner, and your petitioner as in Duty Bound shall ever Pray.

Watertown 24 Sept. 1777.

JON. HOBBY.

This petition recently found among the Mass. Archives gives a new chapter in the adventures of the old cannon. Since that date, parties have often been "interrupted" while attempting the "removing of it out of Town," but this is the earliest instance on record. Of later attempts, many traditions and many living men do testify. By the same authority it has often been "Conveyed Back" from the hands of the spoiler, with many a hap and mishap.

"The Committee," of whom Hobby complained, were the leading Whigs. Those familiar with the history of Deerfield during the Revolution and the character of these men, may easily picture the excitement here when the operations of Maj. Gray were discovered, and also the manner of their "interruption" when he was overhauled by the committee, as well as the triumph with which it was "conveyed back" to the town. Col. Williams had been commissary during the French war with headquarters at Deerfield, the old gun may have been under his care. He may have thought he had a right to sell it; let us hope so, although his private character gives no warrant that this hope can be very confidently cherished. As a warm Tory he may have thought that while putting a pretty penny in his pocket he was serving the king by removing one obstacle from the path of Burgoyne, who was planning a little summer trip over the Green Mountains to the Connecticut Valley, and he had like-minded kin in Deerfield whom he felt he could trust to aid and abet him. It was probably in consequence of Hobby's petition that, three weeks later, the General Court passed a vote to look up and secure any stray arms that might be found belonging to the state. Very likely it was in response to some action under this vote that at the March meeting, 1777, the town "voted that the Town will not dispose of the two pieces of cannon." At the opening of the War of Impressment the guns again appear on record:—

July 12, 1812 voted that the Selectmen of this Town be directed to make application to the Selectmen of Hatfield, for the cannon in their custody belonging to this Town

Voted that the Selectmen be a committee to make enquiry respecting the expense of mounting the cannon and that they secure both cannon. [At an adjourned meeting,] July 20, Voted that the Committee Appointed to make enquirey respecting the expense of mounting the Cannon be authorized to mount one or both of them, if they think proper, at the expense of the Town.

But they must "first catch the rabbit." Hatfield would not give up the gun. Perhaps she claimed it by right of possession, but there is nothing touching the matter on Hatfield town records.

March 6, 1815, Art. 18. To see if the Town will adopt any measures to get the Cannon now at Hatfield * * * Voted that Epaphras Hoyt, Elihu Hoyt, and Pliny Arms, Esquires, be a committee to take such measures as they think proper to recover the cannon belonging to this Town, now at Hatfield.

No sequel to this action has been found. The cannon loaned to Hatfield never came back. In the course of time, for some unknown reason,—or none at all,—Hadley put in a claim for ownership. Many a sharp trial of skill and craft, and sometimes of force, was had for its possession on festive occasions, and many a trip across the river from town to town it has taken by stealth and in darkness. The towns quarreled like thieves over the prize, like the savage captors over the unfortunate Miss Jane McCrea, and its fate was identical with hers. The strife ended in the destruction of both. About 1840, after firing it in an insulting manner from "High Banks," towards Hatfield, the vandals of Hadley loaded the piece to the muzzle and it was burst into fragments. Dr. Bonney of Hadley, from whom I learned its fate, and Almon C. Williams, who was on the ground and saw the fragments soon after the catastrophe, both familiar with this gun, unite in describing it as being in every respect the very counterpart of our old cannon in Memorial Hall.

In my boyhood days the fact of this loan to Hatfield seems to have been lost sight of, but there was a general belief that our old cannon once had a mate, and various stories existed to account for its disappearance, a favorite one being that it had been sunk in Broughton's pond.

It was probably under the vote of the town that our divorced piece was mounted on a regular gun-carriage. From my earliest recollection it was in this condition, and was "stored" on the common. Year in and year out, summer and winter, it was an attractive center of our play-ground. On some morning, about the last of June of each year, the old cannon would be missing. By the hands of either friends or foes it had been taken into retirement, in anticipation of the "glorious fourth." Few knew of its whereabouts until it woke the echoes on that eventful morning. If, as it sometimes happened, it announced itself in the hands of the enemy,—usually the Greenfield boys,—there was mustering in hot haste for its rescue, and gathering for resistance on the other side; cool heads became hot, and hot heads were broken. Usually victory perched on our banner, but sometimes, alas, on that of the enemy. On one occasion, somewhere about 1854, we learned it was buried in a newly dug cellar in Greenfield street. The fall of that night found a sturdy crowd armed with bludgeons, headed by one of the selectmen, marching silently northward. At Cheapside, a returned scout reported the place of sepulchre empty. Thus balked, we marched back again. It became known years after that the old cannon had been taken the night before up into Greenfield Meadows four miles, and buried in a four-acre lot, which was all plowed over before morning. It lay there for years, until the captors found the fun of keeping the secret growing stale, and so revealed the place of hiding. I note this as one of the innumerable adventures of the old cannon. I will speak of one other at a much earlier date, perhaps about 1808. It had been spirited away by Conway men. On discovering its whereabouts, a battalion of young and old started on horseback for its rescue, under the lead of Col. Joseph Stebbins and Rufus Saxton. On news of their intention, the Conway people placed the gun in sanctuary. But this was soon to be violated. The meetinghouse was surrounded by a superior force. The old cannon was demanded, but refused. But, sanctuary, or no sanctuary, the men were after it. With uplifted axe Col. Stebbins stood before the door, and five minutes were allowed in which to give it up. At the fourth minute a parley was called, and the terms of surrender were soon arranged. Seeing powder among the Deerfield men, to prevent their adding insult to humiliation, one stipulation was that the gun should not be fired by the victors until they reached Deerfield; this was agreed to. But the moment they crossed the town line on the high lands at Hoosac, the troop halted, and the astonished denizens of Pumpkin Hollow soon heard their houses rattling about their ears, and their late captive exulting in thunder tones over its freedom. We really believed the old cannon had a personality. How else could its voice always be in harmony with the occasion, as it certainly was, unless our imaginations deceived us.

The old cannon was often fired on the common, and woe betide the windows of the surrounding houses, if the lower sash was not raised before the first boom; even then, some damage was apt to follow. The householders tired of this after a while, and the gun was now and then found spiked over night. This must have been at one time uncommonly well done, that the town should be called upon to take a hand in the matter.

At a town meeting, April 9th, 1828, Art. 9 of the warrant was: "To see if the town will take means to unspike the old cannon, or take any measures to recover damages of the person or persons who spiked the same. Voted in the negative." The spikers had been on the alert, and Art. 10 in the warrant was: "To see if the Town will authorize the Selectmen to sell or otherwise dispose of the old cannon belonging to the Town." This was an offset to Art. 9, put in by the spikers, who had force enough to back it, and it was,— Voted that the Selectmen be directed to deposit the cannon in some safe and convenient place, and not to suffer it to be used on any occasion without special permission, and only at such places as they shall direct, and upon no occasion within the limits of the Town Street Village.

I do not think the provisions of this vote were very strictly enforced; it depended a good deal upon who the selectmen were. The old men sometimes forgot they were ever young and through their means, the old cannon would now and then mysteriously disappear. It would be buried, perhaps, for years at a time, until some one "peeped," or it was discovered by accident. It was usually heard from on these occasions. Every fibre of the old gun must be of the very best material. It has been abused in every possible way with never a bit of paint or drop of oil, or the slightest care; it has long been corroded by rust inside and outside, and by all scientific standards it should have gone to fragments long years ago with the lightest charge; but it has never gone back on its trusting friends of its own will. By gross carelessness, however, the last time it was loaded a premature discharge occurred, by which three men were mangled and maimed for life.

In 1858 the mayor of Cambridge made application for the old cannon, to place it in Fort Washington, the old earthworks in that town on the bank of Charles river. Of course this was labor lost.

In 1880, as it seemed almost like inviting murder to allow its use any longer, it was given a safe resting place under the wings of the P. V. M. Association and placed in Memorial Hall.

Fire Engines. In March, 1830, a movement was made to procure some apparatus for extinguishing fires. A subscription paper was started and forty-six men gave enough to buy a pretty good "tub" for those days. A volunteer company was organized under the statutes, which did fairly good service when called into the field of its action, and also at its annual suppers which became a feature of the times. The machine was a square box worked by horizontal levers. It was housed in a building put up for it by the town on the southwest corner of Col. Asa Stebbins's home lot where the old schoolhouse of a century ago stood, and where Philo Munn's shop now stands. Modern "extinguishers" succeeded it.

Town House. After the meetinghouse was torn down in 1824, town meetings were usually held in the hall of the brick schoolhouse on the common. In 1839, the question of building a Town House was agitated, and at the March meeting a committee of six was chosen to take the matter into consideration. The result of this movement was an article in the April meeting to "see if the town would build two Town Houses." Bloody Brook people never failed to claim for themselves the duplicate of anything proposed for the Old Street. In this case the whole matter fell through. In March, 1841, the matter again came up in the same form and came to the same end. The main project, however, was not killed or even scotched. April 5th, 1841, the town voted to "build a Town House, and erect the same on land east of Mr. Beldings meetinghouse on land purchased of the Trustees of Deerfield Academy, by the subscription of individuals in Deerfield Street." The interest of the "Surplus Revenue Fund," and the one hundred and fifty dollars for which the "Poor house" at Wapping sold, were appropriated towards the expense. Pliny Arms, Charles Williams and Timothy Billings were made a building committee, with discretionary power as to material and size of the house. March, 1842, they reported the work done at a cost of $1730. The structure was of wood, one story high.

The "Franklin Agricultural Society." Dec. 1st, 1813, at a meeting of the citizens of Deerfield, after due discussion, it was,—

Resolved that it is Expedient to form an Agricultural Society in this Town * * * that Rev. Samuel Willard, Ephraim Williams, Esq. Maj. Ep. Hoyt, Capt. Elihu Hoyt and M^r Augustus Lyman be a Committee to form a Constitution.

Dec. 13th, the committee reported a long preamble and a constitution with nineteen minute and prolix articles. This was signed by seventy-two men, all but sixteen from the "Street" and Wapping. The object of the association was declared to be "improvement in the whole management and economy of the farm with all its appurtenances." Quarterly meetings were to be held in Deerfield on the first Wednesday of March, June, September and December. An annual oration was provided for the September meeting. It established a library; one catalogue, of forty-six leading agricultural publications of the time, has come to light. George Arms was secretary in 1814-15. In 1816 was the "cold summer," a diary before me notes a frost Aug. 22d, another Aug. 29th, and one Sept. 26th. The crop of Indian corn was almost utterly ruined. The annual meeting, Sept. 4th, was doubtless anything but a festive occasion. In 1819, Washington's birthday was celebrated by the association at a meeting in Augustus Lyman's tavern hall. John Wilson was then secretary. In 1817 a list shows seventy members. No book of records has been found. The society had a short life, but another society with the same ends sprang up in its place, under the same hands.

The "Farmers Association" was incorporated under an act of the General Court, Feb. 13th, 1821. A constitution with the inevitable nineteen articles, similar to that of its predecessor, was adopted. The members of that society were admitted free members of this, provided they turn over their library, which was done. The declared object of this body was,—

The improvement in the management and economy of a farm: promotion of domestic manufactures, and researches into the natural history of our county, in the vegetable, animal, and mineral kingdoms, so far as they are connected with agriculture.

No records of this association are found and what came out of it, or what became of it, I have no knowledge. Its place of meeting was over Orlando Ware's store.

Burying Yards. The Indians seem to have uniformly buried their dead in places peculiarly situated. Their graves have been rarely, if ever, found in any other. They selected a point or promontory running out from some plain and overlooking a stream of water, and the meadows towards which its sides fell off abruptly. Many such have been identified: The northwest corner of my own home lot,—five or six rods of which have been dug away,—with Great Pasture Brook below it: Broughton's Hill, east of Broughton's Pond; this has been lowered several feet: Bars plateau, where a point jutted out between Boggy Meadows on one side, and Stebbins Meadow on the other, a little south of Gifford's bridge; this has been obliterated by the road up the hill, digging gravel, etc.: points on the bluffs at Wisdom overlooking the meadows and the river. Graves might be confidently looked for on the northwest corner of Josiah A. Allen's home lot; on land of Eliza D. Williams in South Meadows, where Second Division brook sweeps round into Log Meadow; as also on the southeast corner of Petty's Plain, and the northwest corner of the home lot of Mrs. Lurane B. Wells, if the rivers at their feet have not washed too much away. There seems to have been no common burial place as with us; apparently each family or clan had its own, these were probably near their wigwams, since in their vicinity Indian relics are always more or less abundant.

The spot selected by the first white settlers and set apart for their "God's Acre," was one of the points already so occupied by the natives; it was the southwest corner of the central plateau of the village, at the foot of Hitchcock Lane, and is our "old Burying Ground." There rest the fathers and mothers of the settlement. In one awful grave, undistinguished save by a faint tradition, were laid the ghastly slain of Feb. 29th, 1704. There the murdered Mrs. Williams lies beside her husband, our first minister. Few of the earlier graves are marked by monuments; that to Joseph Barnard, killed by Indians, 1694, bears the oldest date to be found. There rest many other victims of the Indian wars,—John Allen, slain at the Bars, May 11th, 1704; his gallant nephew, Samuel Allen, who fell defending his children, 1746; Eleazer Hawks, Adonijah Gillett, Oliver and Simeon Amsden, who fell at the same time; Ebenezer Sheldon, killed in 1746. Many unmarked graves contain the ashes of the Broughtons, Wellses, Belldings, and other victims of inhuman war. Here repose at least nine soldiers who followed Turner through the turmoil and din of the battle which cost him his life and named the scene of the conflict,—William Arms, Eleazer Hawks, Philip Mattoon, Godfrey Nims, Robert Price, William Smead, Benjamin Wait, Jonathan Wells, the young hero of the occasion, and his brother, Thomas Wells.

The place is beautiful for situation: a southerly view overlooking the Pocumtuck river and a far-reaching spread of the quiet meadows through which it winds. Pocumtuck Rock stands a grim sentinel ever guarding it on the east, while the blue of the hills is seen touching the blue of the skies in every direction around it. This was the last resting place for the village dead until 1802. To this place the following votes refer.

1703. March 5th, in voting regulations about working on the highway, the town also included "clearing the Burying place."

1721. The town directed the selectmen to enclose the burying place with a fence. This was done and the place was thereafter called the "Burying Yard."

1721, Dec. 7, another method of "clearing" the ground was adopted; the town granted,—

To Edward Fogg the use of the burying yard for feeding, six years, and the land lying between the rear of the town lot, Mr. Williams, Thomas Wells, his lot, & the river, running North to the top of Little Meadow hill, he to keep the burying yard free from brush, and fence it, the town finding the material, provided he does not infringe on the highway.

1735. Thomas Wells 2d, was allowed the privilege of feeding his horses "in the Burying yard this year, provided that he pay all damages that shall occur thereby."

1745. March 4th, voted to lease out the burying yard to be taxed to pay for it without a corresponding benefit to themselves. April 4th, 1803, the town voted to "buy the burying yard at Muddy Brook. Mr. Graves, the original Proprietor being free from making any fence. Capt. Arms, Capt. Cooley, Col. Stebbins, Capt. Tryon, and Eli Cooley," were chosen a committee to buy the land and fence. May 2d, Zebediah Graves deeded to the town " $\frac{3}{4}$ of an acre Lying in the Long Hill Division bounded North & West on his own land, South on Eber Allis, and East on the road to Sunderland."

1804. Voted not to take a deed of the burying ground on Mr. John Robbins's land at North Wisdom.

1806. May 5th, the selectmen were authorized to buy the burying yard near Jonathan Cobb's. Price ten dollars. The same vote passed two years later.

The South Wisdom ground was used for burial purposes about a hundred years ago. This does not appear to have been town property. It lies in a pasture, and has long been unused, even the gravestones are in a ruinous condition.

1807. Voted to fence a burying ground near Ebenezer Hoyt's to accommodate the North and South Wisdom school districts, "provided they will get a deed of the same, free."

1810. April 2d, the selectmen were directed to take a deed of land for a burying yard in Wisdom and fence the same at town charge. The result of this action was that Ebenezer H. Williams sold the town for five dollars a lot of eight by ten rods, one rod and fourteen links north of the Baptist meetinghouse. It was on "No. 31, in the First Division of Inner Commons." The town now called a halt and at the same meeting voted not to buy a burying yard in Pine Nook.

1811. April 1st, voted not to buy a piece of land at Mill River for a burying yard. In a pasture at Pine Nook, on the old Brigham farm, lies a deserted graveyard of unknown origin, unused for fifty or sixty years. A new one was opened in that district about 1812. In 1816 the town voted twenty-five dollars to fence it, on condition the owner give a deed to the town. No deed has been found.

1819. The town voted to raise money for fencing the burying yard at Pine Nook and Jonathan Loveland was made an agent to secure the money. At Mill River a burial yard was established about —. In 1826 the town voted to fence this ground, provided Mr. Hawks will give a deed of the land.

In 1859 the lot was enlarged by land bought of Messrs. Timothy and Charles Phelps. There are also several private burial places, Stebbins's at Sugar Loaf; DeWolf and Hawks's, in South Wisdom, and two belonging to the Catholics, in North Wisdom, near the Greenfield line; and a part of the new "Greenfield Cemetery," lies within our territory.

Funerals. In the earlier days of our fathers, funeral rites, except in case of high officials, were simple and unvarnished tributes to the King of Terrors. No heavy financial burden was laid upon the survivors by costly and fanciful exhibitions of floral art. No pride-fostering show cases, called caskets. A receptacle for the dead made in advance would have been considered presumptuous if not impious. Each coffin was made on the emergency from actual measurement and made to fit. They were of pine, stained black, with a small pane of glass let into the lid over the face, below this the initials of the name, and the age were outlined with brass headed tacks. The handles, unless of leather straps or cords of flax, were made by the village blacksmith. Was it an incongruity when in 1751 the town voted "to purchase a Pall for the use of the Town not to exceed the price of £5, 8s, 8d, Lawful Money * * * but if any Person or Persons will ad to sd sum so as to purchase a velvet Pall the committee may procure that." In the earliest days there was no religious rite at the house of the dead. There was no hearse garnished with plate glass and nodding plume of sable seen in the funeral procession. The body was laid upon a bier, and four "carriers" bore it to the grave, or if the burden or distance required it, a relief of four more was provided; on each side of the bier walked two "pall bearers" each holding a corner of the pall which was spread over the coffin. The "mourners" followed on foot shrouded in garments of the deepest black, made or borrowed for the occasion, and niggardly indeed would be considered any who refused to lend their best on occasions like this. There was no ceremony at the grave, save that the chief mourners, or the persons of highest dignity present, supported the head of the corpse as it was being lowered to its last resting place. There was no official and officious sexton. The representative of the bereaved publicly thanked the friends who had assembled to bury their dead, and the procession returned to the funeral feasts at which strong liquors were an essential part. Gloves were furnished the "carriers" and the "bearers," and in families of wealth, scarfs and mourning rings were liberally distributed to friends of the deceased, and sometimes suits of black clothes to dependents. This being sometimes, in large towns, carried to an extent which "involved a great & unnecessary expense," the General Court in 1741 enacted, "That no scarves gloves (except six pair to the bearers, and one pair to each minister of the church or congregation where any deceased person belongs) wine, rum, or rings be allowed and given at any funeral." During the sad ceremony, unrestrained by etiquette, but encouraged by custom, the stricken heart gave full swing to the tragedy of grief and received and welcomed openly the tender sympathy of all. And who shall say that this natural outburst of an afflicted soul does not better serve to lighten the burden of sorrow, than the self-contained suffering of secluded grief! After all, however, the essential features of this event which comes to every family and to every member of it, remain the same. The funeral trappings and conventional show of sorrow, change from generation to generation, but there is no change in the desolation of death; no change in the bitter grief at the last parting; no change in those sounds so utterly full of woe, the falling clod and the bursting sob. Then, as now, the sad significance of the vacant chair, and the bereaved hearts yearning for the hand that was warm, and the voice that was dear. At no age or generation does the popular faith triumph over death. The consolations of religion do not console: the pealing anthem or wailing miserere do not fill the aching void; the hope of what is to be has not yet subdued the sad refrain, O, for what was and might have been!

The general use of the bier continued well into the present century, and gave way but slowly to the hearse, and this was at first, as near as it could well be, to a bier on wheels, the pall being still the covering for the coffin. Our bier was stored in the south porch of the old meetinghouse, a visible reminder that "man was made to mourn," and a powerful adjunct to the solemn warnings from the pulpit within, that "the last day draweth nigh and will soon be here."

At the March meeting in 1816, a committee was chosen to make inquiries concerning the substitution of a hearse for a bier. They reported in April in favor of the innovation, and the town voted to buy a hearse. At the same meeting the selectmen were made a committee to appoint a sexton, and agree with him on the price of his services. Until now probably the offices of a sexton had been performed by the hands of neighbors. To their honor be it recorded, that this custom is still continued by the people of Wapping.

In 1818, there was a movement to build a hearse house, which came to nothing; but in 1821, the town voted to build a hearse house "in the burying ground outside the fence." It was located, I think, at the foot of the hill a few rods northwest of the stone arch of the Boston & Maine railroad within the limits of the present highway. Until 1848 the road to Great River ran up the hill north of the burying ground.

In 1827, the town voted to buy a pall for the use of the people at Bloody Brook and in 1848, the town bought for them of Zebediah Graves, four acres on the Whately road for a village cemetery. This is now used as their principal burying place.

CHAPTER XXXII.

BELLS—CHARITIES—NEGRO SLAVERY—CHEAPSIDE.

The "Bell of St. Regis," having been relegated by the historical student to the realm of myths, the first meetinghouse bell was purchased by the town with money loaned by individuals, in 1729. Succeeding bells down to 1820 have been owned and controlled by the town, and the pay of the sexton has been a town charge. The Bell spread the fearful alarm when a lurking enemy was discovered. It was rung not only Sundays but also for Town and Proprietors meetings, lectures, celebrations, etc., at noon and at 9 o'clock, p. m.

The Passing Bell. It was the custom in my younger days to toll the Passing Bell on the death of any person in the community; nine strokes of the bell at half-minute intervals announced the death of a man, six that of a woman, and three that of a child; after a short pause, a succession of quick strokes gave the age in years of the departed. As every dangerous sickness was known to the whole community, all activities ceased at the first peal, and in the silence everybody waited with bated breath to the last, to know what family among them was now bereaved, and where kindly help was needed and always welcome. How long this custom had existed I do not know, but it was discontinued about forty or fifty years ago. At funerals the people were called together by the tolling bell, and by its sad and solemn tones it seemed certain that the bell was conscious of its office. Minute strokes were given as the procession moved to the grave and continued until the closing words were spoken and the body was laid down in its last resting place, when, at a given signal, the service was concluded by rapid strokes giving the age of the departed.

The Nine o'clock Bell. From early times the nine o'clock bell was a regular institution. It was universally understood to be the signal for bed-time, and it was an unwritten law that everybody should give heed to it. Custom and courtesy alike demanded that all visitors who had dropped in to make a call or spend the evening should make a move to do up the knitting work, or look for the hat, at the first stroke of the bell. To any polite request for a longer tarry the sufficient answer was, "Oh, no, the bell is ringing." It was an old and common saying on such occasions, "It is nine o'clock, time for honest men to go home and rogues about their business." This was doubtless the Curfew Bell of Old England, established by William the Conqueror, and brought over by our fathers. The name, "Curfew," however, was never heard this side the water, being considered by the Puritan, I suppose, analogous to dancing round the Maypole, Christmas festivity, ecclesiasticism and other national abominations, upon which the emigrant had shaken off the dust from his feet. As there were few clocks and fewer watches, the nine o'clock bell was a great convenience and it became intimately incorporated into the life of the town. Of course, in cases of balls, evening parties, or when young couples were "sitting up," the participants did not feel obliged to be "tied to the bell-rope." To supply the lack of almanacs, as well as time-pieces, it was the custom to wind up the nine o'clock bell with light, quick taps, indicating the day of the month.

The Fire Bell. The fearful tones of the fire bell jangling the still night air with its startling clang, too often calling the people to battle with the Fire Fiend, was the same here as everywhere.

The Noon Bell. The bell was also rung in summer at twelve o'clock, M. This was largely for the benefit of those working on the Meadows, generally the larger part of the male population, and the sound thereof filled the waiting ear of tired man and beast with joyful music. It was not a summons to home and a hot dinner, but to a welcome hour of rest after six or seven hours of laborious toil. If in planting time, the team, usually two pair of oxen—though often three or four pair—with a horse for a leader, a man for holder and a boy for driver, had been slowly but steadily turning the foot deep furrows, one hundred to one hundred and sixty rods to the bout; men trying their muscle in "holing out," others "dunging out," from the large dunghill provided over winter, or planting, or harrowing, the rows growing longer as the forenoon grew older. The team was first cared for. After being watered at the most convenient pond or stream, the oxen were chained to the wheels on either side of the dung cart, and made happy with a bountiful supply of fragrant hay from the big bundle; the horse, tied on one side of the neap, took his rations over the fore-board of the cart. These provided for, the hungry men and boys seated themselves on the ground under the spreading branches of the dinner tree, to discuss the contents of the ample dinner box; the beef, pork, turnips and potatoes, the bread and butter, the gingerbread and nutcakes, disappeared like magic, while the jug of cider passed from hand to hand or mouth to mouth. If there was ever a bounteous banquet board where the choice viands were eaten with as keen a relish as the cold pot luck under the dinner tree, the writer never had the good fortune to be present. The Dinner Bell is held in affectionate remembrance.

COLLECTIONS FOR CHARITABLE OBJECTS IN CHURCH OR CONGREGATION 1739-50.

1739, Aug. 19. NEGRO SLAVERY.

To those who have been in the habit of thinking of negro slavery as an exclusively Southern institution, this title may have in it an element of surprise, if not of offence. I know of no reason, however, why we should not face the facts relating to it, found in church and town records, and old family manuscripts. There can be no dispute that for more than a hundred years before the foot of a slave was allowed to pollute the soil of Georgia, men, women and children were bought and sold, and held, and worked, by the leading dignitaries of the Puritanic Colony of Massachusetts Bay; and on the death of their owners were inventoried in their estates as property, together with horses, hogs, cows and other animals.

With the apologists for the man stealer, so long as there were any, the stock argument was, that the bringing of heathen to Christian families was really a more successful way of saving souls, than that of sending missionaries to the heathen, and that those in bondage were really better off than they could be in the state whereto they were born.

Rev. Peter Thatcher of Milton should have had knowledge on these points. Besides owning one Indian, body and soul, he was also a missionary, who preached the gospel to a neighboring tribe. Of his methods, and the result of his dealings with the latter, he is silent, but his method of dealing with the heathen in his own household is shown in his own words:

Aug. 18, 1679, came home and found my Indian girl had liked to have knocked my Theodora on head by letting her fall; whereupon I took a good walnut stick and beat the Indian to purpose, till she promised to do so no more.

It would be instructive to learn the outcome of Thatcher's home missionary work, but all search has been in vain. This child of nature disappears in the mist from which she emerged.

Peter Thatcher was a prominent man in his day and generation. He attended the commencement exercises when John Williams was graduated, and the young student was probably personally acquainted with him, as he must also have been with many other men of note who bought and held negroes as slaves. He doubtless attended with all the country side the entertainment on Boston Common, September 22, 1681, which opened with the hanging of a white man and closed with the burning of two negroes.

Educated amid such surroundings, John Williams brought to Deerfield the habit, the conduct, the conscience of the metropolis as his guide; and we shall find him acting in accordance therewith.

If such facts be humiliating to our pride, their consideration may help us to a correct estimate of the life, times and character of our ancestors.

The earliest evidence of negro slavery in Deerfield, is the following entry on the town records. It is in the column of deaths on the page devoted to the family register of Rev. John Williams:—

Robbert Tigo, Negro Serv^t to Mr Jn^o Williams died y^e 11th day of May 1695.

Except this one great fact, we know nothing of Robert Tigo. Whether he was born into slavery in the chill Christian land of New England, or whether he was dandled upon the knee of a fond mother in freedom, on the hot sands of Africa, we may never know. Of his death there is honorable record; and doubtless his master and pastor gave him Christian burial.

A few years later Mr. Williams was in a condition to have a closer sympathy with the countrymen of poor Tigo. He himself was a prisoner in the hands of a dark-skinned heathen master, and doubtless the servants of Mr. Williams had in after years the benefit of this practical knowledge of human slavery.

Our next glimpse of slavery here is this record on the town book:—

Frank and Parthena, M^r Jn^o Williams his negroes were joyned in Marriage by y^e Reverend M^r Jn^o Williams, June 4: 170—

The year of the century is gone. It was in the sunny month of June and probably 1703. It could not have been later. This record is not on the page where marriages were regularly entered, but stands by itself on the fly leaf of the volume. If I am right in fixing the date of this marriage, the very next one recorded is on the page devoted to marriages, and reads thus:—

Andrew Stevens and Elizabeth Price were joyned in marriage by y^e Reverend M^r Jn^o Williams December 6: 1703:

Andrew Stevens was an Indian, but he was allowed a place of honor on the book denied to Frank and Parthena.

Deacon Thomas French, painstaking town clerk of Deerfield,—could you have foreseen the events of the next three months—could you have seen the faithful Parthena giving her life in defence of the nurslings committed to her charge, and her young husband, tormented and butchered in mere wanton sport by a cruel, copper-colored crew—could you have seen your own baby murdered in cold blood—have heard the crackling flames as they climbed the roof tree and devoured the homes and household gods of yourself and kinsfolk—would you, when considering the problem of social distinction in Deerfield, still have given the Indian precedence over the African?

We cannot say, but with his interpretation of the Bible the good man probably would! We do know that in after years, while Thomas French was town clerk no marriage or death of a negro was officially recorded by him. We do know that Frank and Parthena find no place on the page where the death of Tigo is recorded with those of the wife and children of Parson Williams. Nor is their fate recorded elsewhere, save in the narrative of their master, to whom some credit must be given. Mr. Williams was not, however, so far in advance of his age as to see the cruel wickedness of human slavery. He probably thought it a blessed providence which brought the negroes from a heathen to a Christian land; that their spiritual gain far out-weighed their material loss; that their unrecompensed toil here was to be offset by a recompense of endless rest in glory. We have, however, no hint of the social status usually assigned to negroes in the land of the blessed.

The slaves we next meet with are Mesheck and Kedar, also owned by Parson Williams, and inventoried in 1729, along with a "one eyed horse," a "weak backed cow," and other stock, as part of his estate. Mesheck was a mulatto; each was appraised at £80. Kedar is not again heard of, but Mesheck appears next in the hands of Col. and Rev. Ebenezer Hinsdale, who married Abigail, daughter of Mr. Williams, soon after her father's death. Mesheck was doubtless part of her inheritance.

Mr. Hinsdale was ordained Dec. 11, 1732, as missionary to the Indians, and stationed at Fort Dummer. Here Mesheck was for eight years in the Colonial pay as servant to Mr. Hinsdale. Jan. 21, 1747, he was baptized by Rev. Jonathan Ashley and received into church fellowship at Deerfield. Perhaps Mesheck was converted by Missionary Hinsdale. If so, he is the only known fruit of his missionary work, for Hinsdale was not a success in that line. Mesheck was an important member of his master's family. The Colonel did a large mercantile business at Hinsdale, N. H., which town was founded and named by him, and also in Deerfield. His store here was in the house opposite my own. Mesheck seems to have conducted the business at one place while his master was at the other. In 1752 Mesheck had a personal account at the store of Maj. Elijah Williams, which the book shows was squarely settled.

All that is known of the operations of my own ancestors in the slave market is shown in the following paper:—

Whare as wee Abiah Wolcot adminstratricks, and Mathew Allyn, adminstrator on the estate of Mr. Henry Wolcot, Esq. late of Winsor in the County of Hertford and Collony of Connectycut in New England, have recieved of Capt. Timothy Thrall as agent for Mr. John Sheldon of Dearefield in the County of Hamsheier forty five pounds in Province bills.

Doee thare fore sell unto him the said John Sheldin a negro lad called Lundun of about fourteen years of age by the best account we can come at, which s^d negro rode behind s^d John Sheldin towards Dearefield on the last day in March in the year 1710 which negro did belonge to s^d Mr. Henry Wolcot and was parte of his estate. We thare fore the above named adminstratricks and adminstrator doe here by sell and confirme to the said John Sheldin his heaires and assignes, our whole right and titill to said negro lad, and also the right that any other person shall Legally make out, from, by, or under s^d Mr. Henry Wolcott, as witness ouer hands & sealls hereunto set this fifth day of Apriell 1710.

Henry Wolcot, owner of Lundun, was born Jan. 6, 1643, and died Feb. 16, 1710. Probably Lundun was sold on a verbal contract, and the purchase money left with Captain Thrall to hand over when a legal title to the property could be obtained from authorized agents. Whether Capiain Sheldon bought Lundun on speculation or for home consumption does not appear. The chattel is not again heard from. The parties and witnesses to this transaction were of the most respectable. Wolcot was ancestor of many distinguished men, as was Samuel Gibbs, and the celebrated Gibbs Wolcot was of this combined blood. Grant was a collateral ancestor of General Grant. Allyn was cousin to the first wife of Parson Williams, and brother to the second wife. At his death in 1732, Capt. John Sheldon left as part of his estate seven slaves appraised as follows:—

Coffee his wife and child	£130
Boy George	80
Boy Coffee	80
Boy Robbin	70
Girl Sue	60

There is a spark of humanity in putting Coffee, his wife and child in one lot. By that it would appear they were not to be parted. Whether the other boys and girl were of the same coffee plant we have no grounds for settling. None of these are again heard from.

It appears from the following deed that females of this kind of stock sold higher than males. While Lundun at fourteen brought £45, Kate, as we shall see, who was much younger, sold for nearly double that sum. She was brought from Connecticut to the Hatfield market and may have been of a rare breed:—

May 22, 1734 then I Samuel Kent of Suffield Innholder, for the consideration £89 in cash in hand paid to me, have sold, set over and Delivered to Capt. Israel Williams of Hatfield a Certain Negro Girl named Kate, aged about 8 or 9 years, which I hereby engage for me my hiers, executors and adminstrators to warrant to him, his hiers executors and administrators against the Lawful Claim, Challenge or Demand of any person or persons whatever, as witness my hand and Seal y^e day aboves^d

Israel Williams, the buyer, was the well-known Col. Williams noted as commander of our frontiers in the French and Indian wars, and later as Hatfield's leading Tory.

The year 1735 was that of the "Great Awakening" at Northampton under the preaching of Jonathan Edwards. The revival extended to the surrounding towns, and was not confined to the dominant race. Here five adult slaves were baptized and three admitted to the church in full communion. The church records showing that these chattels were recognized as brothers and sisters in the Lord, read as follows:

June 15, 1735 Adam servant to Justice Thomas Wells confessed y^e sin of lewdness and Peter, his servant confessed the sin of lewdness and drunkenness and stealing and they were received into charity with people.

June 15, 1735 Pompey, servant to Justice Jona. Wells. Adam & Peter servants to Justice Thomas Wells assented to the Articles of y^e xtain faith, entered into covenant & were baptised & Lucy sevent to Ebenezer Wells was baptised upon his account.

Of this Lucy we shall hear more anon. In a list of those taken into full communion we read:—

Aug. 29 1736 Pompey Negro & Rebecca his wife

Feb. 27, 1736—7 Cesar, servant to Ebenezer Wells

Nothing more is heard of the Christian chattels Adam and Peter, except what is found in the following extracts from the church records:—

Oct. 2 1738, Peter, Negro confessed the sin of Lewdness, of excessive drinking & stealing & was restored to charity.

July 19, 1741 Adam Negro, confessed the sin of Lying & was restored to Xtian watch.

There were other Pompeys besides the one taken into the church in 1735. On the list of baptisms we read:—

Aug 16, 1741 Pompey sevent of Ebenezer Sheldon.

In 1750, Pompey, servant to Capt. Thomas Wells, had a personal account with Elijah Williams at the old corner store.

This last item and others like it show us something of the status of the slaves in the community. In many account books of the period there are running accounts kept with this semi-independent property. The negroes are generally charged with jackknives and brass shoe buckles, sometimes with powder. They either settled their accounts by cash or with "foxes." I do not recall one that is not balanced and square.

Cesar was also a common name among this class. Mary, widow of Ensign Jona. Wells, owned a Cesar, of whom we read:—

June 14, 1741 baptized Cesar servant to Wid. Mary Wells, he covenanting himself.

April 25, 1745, Cesar servant to the widow Mary Wells was admitted to the communion.

It would be interesting to know if the personal relations of the two parties were changed by their religious fellowship. Did the black man sit at his mistress' table after they communed together at the table of the Lord? Did they, in fact, sit together then?

Widow Mary Wells died Nov. 25, 1750. Her daughter Mary had married Timothy Childs, and "Aunt Sylvia" Munn told me they were considered the richest couple ever married in Deerfield. But their riches melted rapidly away, and Ensign Childs removed to Turners Falls, settling on the farm now owned by Timothy M. Stoughton. Probably Cesar followed the fortunes of Mary when she married Timothy Childs, for "Cesar servant of Timothy Childs" is recorded several times as a soldier in the French and Indian wars. What became of this faithful servant of two generations and soldier who fought in two wars? Mrs. Munn says that friends from Deerfield visiting the Childses at the Falls found a negro slave whom they had taken with them from Deerfield sick unto death, and lying in a cold shed, on a rickety bedstead, with scanty covering, and not even a bed of straw under him, with nothing between his body and the bed-cords but an empty bed-tick. So passed away the Christian soldier. How rarely will a full sense of responsibility keep pace with irresponsible power!

July 26, 1741 baptized Cesar servant to Lieut. Jona. Hoyt.

He also served as a soldier in the last French war, and in 1755 had an account at Capt. Williams's store. Still another Cesar, servant to Samuel Childs, served in the same war, and Col. Hinsdale furnished another for the same service. A Cesar who may or may not have been one of the above appears below:—

To Thomas Williams one of his Majesties Justices of the Peace for the County of Hampshire, John Williams of s^d County, Gentleman, against Cesar a laborer, a servant of Nathaniel Dickinson of Deerfield aforesaid that on the last day of November A. D. 1771, he s^d Cesar did at Deerfield aforesaid, feloniously take steal and carry away one gallon of West India Rum, of the value of four shillings Lawful money, the property of y^r complainant and other enormities there and then did against the peace & contrary to law. Wherefore y^r complainant prays that a warrant may issue against s^d Cesar, that he may be apprehended and dealt with according to law & as in duty bound.

JOHN WILLIAMS.

Forthwith the imposing machinery of the law moves: —

Hampshire S.S. To the Sheriff of the County of Hampshire, his under sheriff, or Deputy, or either of the Constables of the Town of Deerfield Greeting

In his Majesty's Name you are commanded forthwith to apprehend the above named Cesar & him convene before me or some other Justice of the Peace for s^d County, to answer to the above complaint & that he may be dealt with according to Law.

Given under my hand & Seal at Deerfield the second day of December A. D. 1771, & in the twelfth year of his Majesty's Reign.

Thomas Williams Justo Pace.

On this document is endorsed:—

Hampshire S.S. Dec. 3, 1771 In obedience to this writ I arrested the body of the within-named Cesar and have him before this Honorable Court for Trial.

THOMAS WILLIAMS Justo Pace.

So the majesty of the law was vindicated. The Thanksgiving lark was duly punished. But who paid the scot? The man or his chattel?

From the church record we read:—

Jany 16, 1778, married Cesar and Hager servants to Samuel Dickinson.

June 22, 1787. Fortune, servant to Samuel Dickinson was baptized upon his mistress's account:

As Samuel Dickinson never married, this "Mistress" was probably a woman to whom Fortune had been leased.

Titus was another favorite name for slaves. Besides the Titus who was probably entertained by Mr. Dickinson's Cesar on the Thanksgiving-day spree and was the witness at his trial, we find:—

June 22, 1737 Titus servant to John Wells, was baptized on his master's account.

In 1746, one Titus belonged to Samuel Barnard,

In 1754-7 "Titus, servant to Rev. Mr. Ashley" was serving as a soldier in the last French war. We do not find this man in connection with the church, save in the following entry, where the church seems to be called upon to aid in the government of the disobedient slave of its minister:—

May 21, 1767. Titus, Negro, confessed the sin of Lying, Stealing & Disobedience to his Master.

Dec. 5, 1762. Baptized Titus, servant to Daniel Arms.

This sacred service did not prevent his being a valuable commodity, for in 1771 Daniel sold Titus to Jonathan Taylor, of Charlemont.

Jinny Cole, or simply Jin, as she was called, was a native of Guinea. By the tale she always told, she was daughter of a king in Congo, and when about twelve years old, she was one day playing with other children about a well, when they were pounced upon by a gang of white villains, and the whole party were seized and hurried on board a slave ship; "and" said Jin, "we nebber see our mudders any more." With a cargo made up by such exploits as this, these barbarians sailed for the wharves of Boston, where these children of nature from the sunny sands of the tropics were sold as slaves for life to such Christian men and women as wanted this kind of stock and could pay the price; and it is not improbable that a "note was put up" by the owner in the next Sunday's service, giving thanks for the return of his vessel in safety from a prosperous voyage.

Three or four years after being kidnapped, Jin was bought at Boston, by Parson Ashley, and brought to Deerfield with a baby in her arms. Mrs. Ashley, her new mistress, only ten years older, was a daughter of William Williams, first minister of Hatfield. She had just lost her first born, a baby of nine months, and doubtless she took kindly to the forlorn waif thus cast upon her care; and it appears that both mother and child were treated kindly, and well cared for in old age.

In return Jin served her mistress faithfully and well, in household work, and in the care of her steadily increasing family. On the death of Mr. Ashley in 1780, Jin continued with the widow and her son, Dr. Elihu Ashley, and assisted in bringing up his family of children. But Jin was not contented. She could not forget her early life, its sunny days, her royal blood, and her cruel wrongs. And she fully expected at death, or before, to be transported back to Guinea; and all her long life she was gathering, as treasures to take back to her motherland, all kinds of odds and ends, colored rags, bits of finery, peculiar shaped stones, shells, buttons, beads, anything she could string. Nothing came amiss to her store. Jin does not appear on the church record either in baptism or church fellowship, but it is too much to suppose that she escaped the catechising of pious Parson Ashley. Sept. 1, 1808, at about the age of eighty-five, Jin fell down the cellar stairs at the house of the nearest neighbor, Thomas W. Dickinson, and broke her neck, "which," said Cato, "killed her as dead as a hammer." Thus ended a service to her mistress of seventy years. Madam Ashley survived Jin but three weeks, dying Sept. 20, at the age of ninety-five. It is an interesting incident that a few days before the tragic death of Jin, a neighbor found these two old crones and cronies sitting together busily engaged in sewing, and chatting merrily over their work like children making dresses for their dolls. The work they had in hand proved to be a shroud for Jin.

Jin's baby had been baptized Aug. 13, 1739, by the name of Cato. Cato was the one Deerfield slave of whom I have a personal recollection, although he died when I was six years old. I recall seeing him when "dunging out," use his hands instead of a shovel. It was probably the oddity of it that made this lasting impression, or it may have been his feeble, tottering footsteps. I remember seeing him often sitting on a bench in an outhouse, where he would spend hours singing in a gruff voice the famous ballad of Captain Kidd, drumming an accompaniment with both hands on the board at either side; his finger nails were long and thick and each one gave a blow which sounded like the stroke of a tack hammer.

Solomon, son of Parson Ashley, was a fine dancer, and Cato a fervent admirer of his skill, tried to imitate his steps. His practice was usually on the barn floor, and sometimes he was seen with a switch whipping his legs, "to make um go like Massa Solomon's."

Cato was very fond of horses, and was a furious rider when he could indulge his passion unobserved. If caught, he would protest that the horse ran away with him. "Couldn't stop um nohow, Massa."

Another favorite seat of Cato's was in the kitchen chimney corner, where he could get the full benefit of the blazing fire, which he would enjoy like a salamander. Col. T. W. Ashley, his latest "Massa," was one of the earliest to substitute a cooking stove for the fireplace. Cato was disgusted with this change and was always cold after it. The big, black pile of iron yielded no warmth or comfort to him. He would hug the stove and sweat and shiver, and shiver and sweat, till he could stand it no longer; then he would go into the room of Madam Ashley, widow of the doctor, to warm himself at her blazing fire. Seeing was believing with him. He also, like Jin, gathered trinkets to provide for his translation, his most valued possessions being brass or copper buttons. The term "Cato's money," as applied to them, is still part of the "North End" vocabulary. Cato served at least one campaign in the Last French war. He died Nov. 19, 1825, when between eighty-six and ninety years of age.

Lucy Terry who, as we have seen, was baptized June 15, 1735, "on account of her mistress," is said to have been, like Jinny, stolen from Africa when a child. She was brought to Deerfield from Rhode Island by Mr. Ebenezer Wells when five years old. We read of her in the church record:—

Aug. 13, 1744 Lucy Servt to Ebenezer Wells was admitted to the fellowship of the church.

Abijah Prince and Lucy Terry servant to Ens. Ebenezer Wells were married May y^e 17, 1756, by Elijah Williams Justo Pace.

Prince was born about 1706, and was probably carried from Wallingford, Ct., to Northfield, by Rev. Benjamin Doolittle when he went there as minister in 1717. Mr. Doolittle died in 1749. He probably gave Abijah his freedom and some real estate rights, for in 1751 the ex-slave drew shares in three divisions of the undivided land in Northfield. He held this land for thirty years, selling out in 1782. I do not find that he lived in Northfield after 1752.

Abijah, a free man, marrying Lucy, a slave, was a combination by which Ensign Wells may have hoped to profit, the fruit of such marriages following the condition of the mother; in this instance, however, the children are found free, nor do we meet Lucy again as a slave. Perhaps after she became bone of his bone and flesh of his flesh, Abijah was allowed to buy out the ensign's rights in the concern. Abijah and Lucy had six children. The first was baptized in infancy by Parson Ashley as "Cesar son of Abijah Negro and Lusey his wife." The others were Durexa, Drucella, Festus, Tatnai and Abijah. Their house stood near where Philo Munn lived, and the brook there was hence called "Bijah's brook." Lucy went by the name of "Luce Bijah." She was a great story teller, and her house was a place of resort for the young people of the "Old Street." Perhaps an "Author's Reading" was occasionally part of the entertainment, for Luce Bijah comes down to us as a poet. The account of the "Bars Fight," which she gives in verse, is the fullest contemporary account of that bloody tragedy which has been preserved. It appears that upon two occasions her muse took up the same theme. Of the first effort, if the story is not finished in the two following lines preserved in the teeming brain of Miss Harriet Hitchcock, the rest is lost:—

" 'Twas nigh unto Sam Dickinson's mill,
The Indians there five men did kill."

In the second attempt the same ground facts are given, with graphic details and added circumstance. [See ante, p. 545.]

Deacon Samuel Field was one of the grantees of Guilford, Vt., and he promised Bijah a hundred acre lot there. The deacon died in 1762, but his son David conveyed the land by deed to Bijah, who removed there in 1764. With all his landed estate Bijah became ambitious for more, and he was one of the original petitioners and grantees of the town of Sunderland, Vt., and is named in the charter. He drew an equal share with the others in all the six divisions. Cesar, his oldest son, settled on one of his lots, where he died in 1836 at the age of eighty. Cesar served in the War of Independence, and was not unlikely one of Ethan Allen's Green Mountain Boys. He received in old age a government pension of the generous sum of $2.66 per month.

Festus, the second son, was inclined to festivity. His father swapped a piece of land for an old horse, saddle and bridle, and a fiddle, with which goods he endowed this son. Festus married a white woman, and settled on another of his father's lots in Sunderland, from which he removed to New York in 1815, and later to Danbury, Vt., where he died in 1819.

Drucella became disabled about 1838, and was supported by the town of Sunderland, where she died Nov. 21, 1854, aged ninety-four years.

Tatnai probably spent a long life in the service of the Hunt family at Northfield. Abijah and Lucy established themselves on the Batten Kill not far from the house of Col. Ethan Allen, who had located on the opposite side of the creek. Their nearest neighbor was Col. Eli Bronson, who set up a claim to part of Abijah's farm. Several lawsuits followed, and finally the case reached the Supreme Court of the United States, where, we may suppose, Col. Bronson met a Waterloo defeat, and Luce Bijah gained a national reputation. The Court was presided over by Hon. Samuel Chase of Maryland. Bronson employed two leading lawyers of Vermont, Stephen R. Bradley, and Royall Tyler, the wit and poet, and afterwards chief justice of the state. Isaac Ticknor, later governor of Vermont, managed the case for Abijah and Lucy. He drew the pleadings, and our Lucy argued the case at length before the court. Justice Chase said that Lucy made a better argument than he had heard from any lawyer at the Vermont bar.

Once more this remarkable woman appears as an advocate; as before, it was on a question of a line—a line more difficult to settle than a boundary on the face of the earth, the color line. Lucy was anxious that one of her sons should obtain a liberal education, and made application to the authorities for his admission to Williams College. He was rejected on account of his race. The indignant mother pressed her claim before the board of trustees in an earnest and eloquent speech of three hours, quoting an abundance of law and Gospel, chapter and verse, in support of it, but all in vain. The name of no son of Lucy Prince graces the catalogue of Williams College.

Abijah and Lucy came back to the hundred acre farm at Guilford. Here Abijah spent his last years and died Jan. 19, 1794, at the age of eighty-eight; here he was buried and his grave is well cared for by the present owner of the farm. About 1803 Lucy went back to Sunderland, and in her extreme old age was in the habit of taking horse-back trips to and from Bennington, eighteen miles away, and so long as she lived made annual pilgrimages over the Green Mountains to visit the grave of her husband. She died in Sunderland in 1821, at the age of ninety-one.

In the checkered lives of Abijah Prince and Lucy Terry is found a realistic romance going beyond the wildest flights of fiction.

Parson Ashley on Slavery. Jan. 23, 1749, Parson Ashley preached an evening lecture to the negroes of Deerfield from this text:—

God hath no regard of persons in the affair of our salvation; who-soever will is invited to come and take of the waters of life freely. [He tells them] There are none of the human race too low and despicable for God to bestow salvation upon. Yea, it is the mean and base things of this world which God is pleased to elect to eternal life, while the rich are sent empty away, and y^e great and honorable are left to perish in their sins.

He explains that those in high places are too often satisfied with the good things of this world, and think themselves above the duties of Christianity, while—

On the other hand there are some who are ready to think God will not have mercy on them because they are such poor miserable creatures. It may be they are poor & despised, & will God think on them the world will take no notice of? Or it may be they are ignorant & cant know & understand like other men * * * or it may be they think y^y are servants & y^y han't time or advantages, & they are such poor creatures that it is not likely they shall ever obtain mercy. But let us take notice of the riches of grace to the children of men. The poor may be rich in faith & hiers of Glory. The ignorant may understand and know God in Christ, whilst the wise perish in their own understanding. Servants who are at the dispose & command of others, who it may be are despised in the world, may be the Lord's freemen & hiers of Glory.

After much more counsel equally pertinent and encouraging to his dusky congregation, showing them how much better were their chances in the future life than those of their masters, he goes on to give them the heads of his sermon still in reserve:—

1st, I will show that Christianity allows the relation of master and servant.

2^d I will show that such as are by divine providence placed in the State of Servants, are not excluded from Salvation, but may become the Lord's freemen.

3 I will show what a privilege & advantage it is to be a freeman in the Lord.

4th I will give some Directions to such as are Servants to become the Lords freemen.

5th Will show what motives there are for such to be the Lords freemen.

Under the first head he uses the stock arguments from the Bible—tells all about the believing servants and unbelieving master, about Paul, Philemon, Onesimus, etc., concluding:—

What a temptation of the Devil it is therefore to lead servants into sin, and provoke God; to insinuate into them they ought not to abide in y^e place of servant—and so either forsake their master, or are uneasy, unfaithful, slothful servants, to the damage of masters & the dishonor of religion, the reproach of Christianity.

And so for the glory of God and the profit of their master they must toil on in slavery in a contented and thankful frame of mind. John Brown would have fared hardly at the hands of this preacher. He concludes his second head:—

Men may serve their master and yet be free from the law of sin and death, and be free to serve X.

3^dly, as Christ's freemen they become the children of God and are adopted into his family and so have great privileges in his Kingdom, even as freemen have great privileges in cities or in the Commonwealths.

They are delivered from the covenant of works, they are not under the law but under grace. [They have] the holy angels to guard them and minister to them in the world, [and] when they come to die, enter into everlasting rest and glory. They go to be with the Lord.

4thly [he gives directions how to accomplish this desirable end, concluding] You must be contented with your state & condition in the world, and not murmur and complain of what God orders for you. You must be faithful in the places God puts you & not be eye servants—in vain to think to be Xts freemen & be slothful servants.

5thly, If you are Xts freemen, you may contentedly be servants in the world. If you are not Xts freemen, you will be slaves of the Devil.

This last argument must have been a settler to those who had hard masters here. It may be that this judicious sermon of Mr. Ashley's had the effect to enhance the value of slave property and induce his brother-in-law to make investments in the market as follows:—

For and in consideration of the sum of two hundred and twenty-five pounds Old Tenor to me Epraim Williams Jr., well & truly paid, by Israel Williams Esq., of Hatfield, I do hereby assign, sell & convey to him a certain negro boy named Prince, aged about 9 years a servant for life, to hold to him, his hiers, ag^t y^e claims of any person whatsoever, as witness my hand this 25th day of September Anno Domi 1750

This was a respectable transaction and had respectable witnesses. Partridge was grandson to Parson William Williams and nephew to Parson Ashley. Williams was the noted Colonel of that name, a principal in the following bargain:

I John Charles Jr. of Brimfield in the Co. of Hampshire in consideration of the sum of fifty-three pounds six shillings & eight pence to me in hand paid by Maj. Ephraim Williams of Hatfield in the county aforesaid, the rec't whereof I do hereby acknowledge & myself fully satisfied and paid Do hereby sell, assign, set over, and convey to the s^d Ephraim Williams his hiers & assigns my Negro Boy Named J Romanoo aged about sixteen years to be the sole Property of s^d Ephraim his hiers and assigns to his and their use, Benifit and Behoof, as his & their Slave, during the natural life of the s^d Jromanoo, and I do hereby covenant, Promise and agree, that before the ensealing hereof, I am the Rightful and Lawful owner of the s^d slave, and have good and Lawful Right to sell and Dispose of him in manner as aforesaid, and that I will by these presents, for myself & my hiers Exec^{rs} & Adm^{rs} shall always be held to warrant and secure the s^d Negro from this Day, During his Natural Life as aforesaid as the sole property of the s^d Ephraim, his hiers & assigns, to his and their use & Behoof, against the claim and chalance of any

JOHN CHARLES JR.

In this document there is no disguise. A spade is called a spade, and the doctrine that all acted upon here stands writ in black and white, that the Negro can make no just claim to owning his own body "by any Law or Right whatever."

What became of Romanoo we know not, but probably his value went to swell the funds for founding that college which refused admission to the son of Abijah and Lucy Prince. At the time Maj. Williams bought this man, who was warranted to have no legal or moral right to his own flesh, blood or brain, he himself was preparing to offer his own body and brain for the services of his country. Seven months later he fell at the head of his regiment in the Bloody Morning Scout, leaving his estate to found Williams College.

No information can be added to that given in the following, extracted from the Docket Book of Judge Williams, save that Hartford got off with such credit that he had a running account with John Russell, at his store, in 1762. In this case it appears that the master is held responsible for the act of the slave, whatever that act may have been:—

Hampshire S.S. At a Court held in Deerfield Nov. 20, 1761 Before me Thomas Williams Esq. Elijah Williams Esq. Plaintiff & Hartford a Negro man slave to Thomas Dickinson of Deerfield aforesaid Yeoman, Defend^t.

Upon considering y^e proof made out against s^d Negro recognize his s^d master for his appearance at Court Att. Thomas Williams.

In the church record we read:—

Dec. 15, 1782 baptised Patience, Negro Servant to Mrs. Silliman by Mr. Parsons of Amherst.

Aug. 27, 1786 Baptised by Mr. Parsons, Lemuel, servant to Mrs. Silliman.

Married Oct. 23, 1794 Chloe Silliman and Noble Spencer.

This Chloe was for a long time a faithful and trusted servant to Mrs. Silliman, who was twelfth child of Parson John Williams. By will, at her death in 1783, Mrs. Silliman gave Chloe her freedom; and to set her up in housekeeping gave her "a Bible, a cow, a feather bed, a brass kettle, a pot, 2 tramels, chests, hand irons, chairs, and pewter things." To Jockton, a mulatto of Col. Hinsdale,—her first husband, then twenty years dead,—she gave the avails of one hundred acres of land in New Hampshire.

"Boston" and "Town," of whom I hear nothing else, had store accounts in 1761. Slavery in the Connecticut Valley was indeed a peculiar institution. It was in the mildest form in which one man can own the body of another. The slaves became in a measure members of the family holding them. They worked with the father and boys in field and forest, and in the kitchen and spinning room with the mother and daughters. Labor was respected. It was a disgrace to be idle. But while uniting in labor, there was no social equality; while the whole family made the kitchen the centre of home life, the slave had his own table and his own corner. Separate seats were provided for negroes in the meetinghouse. I hear of no dissatisfaction with this arrangement. It seems to have been accepted on both sides as a natural one. Even Lucy Prince, when visiting Deerfield in her old age, being invited to take a seat at table with the family, refused, saying, "No, Missy, no, I know my place."

As slavery came into this colony and was accepted under English common law without legislation, so it was abolished by force of public opinion without any statute law. In the Constitution of Massachusetts, adopted in 1780, there is not one word referring directly to retaining or abolishing negro slavery. Article First of the Bill of Rights, however, declares: "All men are born free and equal, and have certain natural, essential and inalienable rights, among which may be reckoned the right of enjoying and defending their lives and liberties."

This is the same in substance that appears in the Declaration of Independence, where Rufus Choate called it a "glittering and sounding generality"—as it was. In this case, however, it proved on judicial trial to be an actual, sound practicality. It appears that in September, 1781, one Quaco, bought as a slave, and held as such by Nathaniel Jennison, of Barre, began a suit before the court at Worcester, which ended in a verdict that Quaco was a freeman, owning his own body. This decision sounded the death knell of human slavery in the good old Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Cheapside Landing. The careless traveler of to-day will not see a single vestige of the wharves and warehouses which once lined the banks of the old Pocumtuck river at "Cheapside Landing," and the most careful searcher will find only faint traces of their ruins. The history of canal building, boating on the Connecticut and Deerfield rivers, and that of the trade and bridge building at Cheapside, must be written in the same chapter, being interchangeably connected. Cheapside became a sort of seaport for the towns at the north and west. Heavy goods from Boston and the West Indies, flour from Albany and cotton from the South were delivered here with but one transshipment. Freight was shipped from here to Boston and Middletown for a foreign market. Teams from Colrain, Charlemont, Whitingham, etc., brought down their shingles, broom handles, shaving boxes, combs, etc., their lime and farm produce, and loaded for home with salt, rum, molasses and other household supplies. A market was found here for their cattle, hogs and "smooth horses" for the West Indies.

Canals and Boating. In the revival of business which followed the close of the Revolutionary war, there arose in this community a demand for better methods of transportation from the seaboard for the heavy necessities of life, salt, molasses, rum, iron, steel, etc. In the river traffic there was a large item of expense in transshipping and carting by the falls at South Hadley. To meet this trouble the "Connecticut River Transportation Company" was organized in 1791. The leading spirits in this enterprise were John Williams of Deerfield and William Moore of Greenfield. They had able seconding in Jona. Hoyt and David Saxton, and efficient agents in Elisha Mack, Jonas and John Locke, all of Deerfield. John Williams was physically weak, but with an iron will. To him Cheapside owed more in its days of prosperity than to any other. He interested the capitalists of the valley and of Boston in the canal projects. He became, with Stephen Higginson of Boston, the agent of several firms in Holland, then the financial centre of Europe, who largely invested in the enterprise. William Coleman, lawyer and farsighted man of affairs, early felt the new pulsation in the great artery of the Connecticut valley, and after taking counsel with Mr. Williams made his bow to the public in "The Impartial Intelligencer," the first newspaper in Northern Hampshire, eight days before the act cited below was passed.

1792. February 22, an act was passed in the Legislature chartering "the Proprietors of the Locks and Canals on Connecticut river." To satisfy the Dutch capitalists an additional act was passed Feb. 25, 1793, making the stock in the company personal instead of real property, aliens not being allowed to hold real estate here at that date. May 29, John Williams took the field to look out routes for canals at South Hadley and Montague Falls. Christopher Colley of New York was chief surveyor; he had as assistants Benjamin Prescott of Northampton, Jonas Locke, Elisha Mack and Epaphras Hoyt of Deerfield. The month of June was spent at South Hadley. July 3, they began a survey at Montague. Several routes were looked over. Engineer Colley reported, July 22, 1792, "that amazing perpendicular rocks and high ground keeps so close to the river that it appears necessary to make a more particular investigation of the ground before any feasible design can be proposed." This undoubtedly refers to a route on the west side of the Connecticut through Behind Noon. Another route was examined from the mouth of Milers river across the plain to Lake Pleasant and thence to "Bardwells Hole" on the Connecticut. Mr. Roberdeau, a Frenchman, "who," wrote Gov. Strong, "knows more about canals than any man in the country," came on from Philadelphia to look over the ground. Another expert, Mr. Du Fareau, was also here. Mr. John Hill of New York, who was at the same time surveying for a canal from Boston to the Deerfield river at Cheapside, was also invited. Dec. 26, Jona. Dwight, Springfield, Benjamin Prescott, Northampton, and John Williams, a committee to build the canal at South Hadley, advertised for 75,000 feet of lumber and seventy-five laborers.

1793. The canal was built under the superintendence of Benjamin Prescott. Capt. Mack makes a contract to build the dam at Montague.

1794. The dam was built. The canal waited the result of operations at South Hadley. Canal building in America was an experiment at this time. Feb. 27, the canal corporation was divided, and the "Proprietors of the Upper Locks and Canal" took charge of the Montague works. The stock holders were largely the same in both corporations. There were 504 shares in each. John Williams and William Moore owned more than half of the stock in the Upper company.

February 10, 1806, the Proprietors of the Upper Locks and Canal want to contract for a "dam 400 feet long, 100 rods below the mouth of Millers river, directly below the eddy in the bend of the Connecticut river," also "Locks sufficient to pass boats and rafts when the river is passible in other places." This dam, which was for slack water navigation by the French King, is mentioned in the Boston and Deerfield river canal report in 1826.

The freight boats on the Connecticut were of a class of shipping now extinct. They were in general terms called "Fall boats." They were of two classes, "Oak boats" and "Pine boats." The latter, of about twenty-five tons burden, were built high up the valley about Wells river or White river. These took the potash, shingles, etc., of those regions through to Hartford, where they were often sold and replaced by new ones, built during the winter. These boats had no floor before the mast and no cabin, the crews boarding along shore. The oak boats, on the other hand, were provided with a cabin, and the crew, consisting of a captain, cook and three bowmen, lived on board. These boats were about seventy-five feet long, fourteen or fifteen wide at the mast, twelve or thirteen at the bow, eight or ten at the stern, with a capacity of from thirty-five to forty tons. They were rigged with a mast about twenty-five feet high, which stood about twenty-five feet from the bow, with shifting shroud and forestays, a topmast to be run up at pleasure, square main-sail thirty by eighteen feet, and top-sail twenty-four by twelve. They had no keel, and the pine boats neither keel nor rudder. They were built of two-inch white oak plank spiked to stout white oak knees and ribs. From the mast the bottom rose gradually to the bow; from mast to cabin it was level, with a rise to the stern. In the pine boats and sometimes in the oak boats, the space before the mast was open, and the centre used for heavy freight not injured by the weather. The sides were reserved for the operations of the bowman in rowing and poling. There were two pair of row-locks. Oars were used to aid the current in getting the craft down, but were of small use in coming back. Unless the south wind blew, nothing availed but the "white ash breeze," i. e., the setting poles, with which the crew pushed the boat up by main force. The poles were of white ash, some fifteen or twenty feet long, with socket and spike at the end. A man at the bow dropped his pole until it struck bottom, then with the upper end against his shoulder and his face turned aft he walked as far as the mast, his feet bracing against the bare ribs, or in the oak boats against cleats fastened to the floor, as step by step he forced the boat up-stream. Another followed him, and the same thing was being done on the other side, so in this sort of a tread-mill the men tugged with all their might and the boat went slowly on its way. On the rapids or swift water an extra force was taken on, or as it became necessary in some places, an ox team on the shore was harnessed into the work by means of a long rope. At other places the same result was accomplished by "tracking," that is, several men took the place of oxen. Aft the mast the sides of the boat were raised as high as the mast board, making a room as wide as the boat, about thirty-three feet long and seven feet high. This was called the tent and being covered by an awning was snug and dry. Here the freight was securely stowed. At the rear end of this was the cabin with its four bunks which turned up on hinges, and cook stove. Five feet of the stern were reserved for the steersman and his tiller. The cabin was lighted by two small square windows and bore on one side the name of the boat. It may be Dispatch, Flying Fish, Clinton, Vermont, Downer, Franklin, Free Trade, Cheapside, or, this poser for the boys along shore, VOYGERMCINDOOSFALLSNEWHAMPSHIRE. The boats were about three feet deep and when loaded, the wale was near the water's edge. So loaded the crew pushed it up-stream a mile and a half an hour, but with a spanking breeze the boat would sometimes make a good five miles with a bone in its mouth. Then the heart of the bowman rejoiced within him, and the river bank echoed his songs of cheer, while the tired husbandman stood still and listened as the boat and the voice passed by. At night the anchor was thrown out and the crew slept securely, while the boat swayed lazily in the stream, the stout cable holding fast the ground their persistent toil had won.

As early as 1795 Justin and Elias Lyman were running a line of boats from Hartford to Cheapside.

Transporting freight up and down the Connecticut was profitable, and in time there grew up a rivalry between the capitalists of New Haven and Hartford into whose lap the golden stream should fall. Hartford was a natural head of sloop navigation and terminus of the down-river traffic. About 1824 New Haven projected a canal which was to divert this trade to her warehouses. The Farmington canal was chartered by Connecticut to run from New Haven to the state line, at Southwick, and in 1825, by Massachusetts on through Westfield to Northampton, under the name of the Hampden and Hampshire canal. In 1827 a continuation to the Vermont line was obtained, and a charter from Vermont carried the New Haven party up to Wells river. Northampton people were full of enthusiasm. Apr. 3, 1826, Gen. Thomas Shepard makes a rose-colored report and says it can be continued on a single level from Northampton to the Deerfield river at Cheapside, where it would intersect the proposed canal from Boston to Troy. The route followed substantially the route of the present Canal railroad. From Greenfield to Brattleboro was to be another level. At Guilford, Vt., Shepard said the feeder would be Deerfield river. He did not tell how the water was to be got over Hoosac mountain. Agents were busy, conventions were held and gilded promises were abundant. This was an era of canals. The great Erie canal was opened Nov. 4, 1825. The success of the New Haven project meant death to Hartford, and none knew it better than her business men. They had not been napping meanwhile; a counter move had been duly made. The "Connecticut River Navigation Company" had been formed, and charters obtained from the four states on the river. This company proposed to improve the navigation of the Connecticut river by making canals at impassable places, to build dams at swift water points for slack water navigation, to cut down the bars where necessary and so reach Barnet at the mouth of the Passumpsic, two hundred and twenty miles above Hartford. Feb. 16, 1825, a convention of two hundred delegates from interested towns met at Windsor, Vt., for a two days' session. A petition was sent to Congress asking aid in the improvement of navigation on the Connecticut, and an engineer from the war department was sent to Barnet to survey the river towards Canada and Lake Memphremagog, and down the Connecticut.

He could not do it all, but during the summer a careful survey of the river from Hartford to Barnet was made by Holmes Hutchinson, who had been employed on the Erie canal. Dec. 20, he made a detailed report with plan and estimates.

Early in 1826 Alfred Smith of Hartford, president of the River company, came up to Greenfield to interest the citizens in the project. One result was a convention where Smith, Judge Leavitt and Daniel Wells made addresses in favor of it and Gen. Shepard, leader of the canal party, in opposition. The Canal party held a convention at Greenfield, May 10. A Greenfield wit, perhaps William Wilson, reports the Greenfield convention in the "Chronicles of New England, chap. 999." The canal finally reached Westfield. The "Gen. Sheldon," the first boat on its basin, was launched there November, 1829. The canal was finally finished from New Haven to Northampton, but no farther.

Steamboats. The war between the river men and the canalites was warm and neither went into winter quarters. Each party felt sure it could best serve the public interests. May 17, 1827, Gov. Clinton of New York, the great mogul in canal matters, was in Greenfield with Judge Hillhouse, and went on an exploring expedition up the Connecticut in the interest of the canal party. The age of steam had just begun and both sides proposed to use this new power in towing freight boats. In 1826 the river men built a steamboat at New York. It was named the Barnet, from the town at the upper end of their operations. It was seventy-five feet long, fourteen and a half wide, with wall sides and flat bottom, and in working condition drew twenty-two inches of water. It was a red-letter day at Cheapside, Dec. 2, 1826, when the Barnet appeared on her waters with flying colors and booming cannon. The old Pocumtuck gun from the south shore welcomed the newcomer with fifteen thunderous salutes, and the crowd on the bridge and banks rent the air with cheers. The Barnet had a barge in tow loaded with passengers who sent back cheer for cheer, while the Barnet responded with twenty-six guns as she steamed slowly up and under the bridge to her moorings at the old landing. It was a glad day for the river party. A rumor had reached here that the Barnet could not stem the current, and a Deerfield poet celebrated this triumph in sixty-three stanzas. All but sixty are here given:—

"I heard a fellow say, quoth Dick,
 This steamboat couldn't get up;
 The Hartford folks were all afraid
 Canal boats would be set up.

So off they went and built this thing,
 To make Northampton quiver;
 They say Tom Sh-p-d's fired mad
 Because we help the River.

A few months since they came up here
 On purpose for to balk us,
 And fee'd the Judge and D-n-l W-lls,
 To spout at Greenfield caucus."

The rhymster was probably Capt. Elijah Williams of Deerfield. That town had all along "helped the river," while quite a minority in Greenfield were for the canal. The Barnet was a stern wheeler. She made a winter berth in Montague canal. In the spring she worked her way up to Barnet, and came back safely to Hartford. Nov. 2, 1827, her boiler burst while off Milford on a trip from New York to Hartford, and I hear nothing more of this plucky pioneer. The next steamboat which reached the Deerfield river was the Vermont. Aug. 3, 1829, she looked into its mouth, but turned back and went up the canal. The next day she reached Brattleboro, and Aug. 5, Bellows Falls, and came back to Brattleboro the 6th.

While the rivals were actively campaigning in the Connecticut valley, measures were being taken to construct a canal from Boston to Troy. Feb. 25, 1825, the Massachusetts Legislature appointed Nathan Willis, Elihu Hoyt and H. A. S. Dearborn commissioners to ascertain the practicability of this measure. They employed Loami Baldwin, who reported Jan. 9, 1826, a survey with plans and estimates from Boston to the Connecticut, at the mouth of Millers river. Another survey carried the route down through the Montague canal across the river to Sheldons rocks, thence on the south side of Deerfield river through Cheapside, up Plain swamp brook, east of the Old Street, across South meadows to Stillwater. From here it followed the river up to the present Hoosac tunnel. There the mountain was to be cut through at a cost of $920,832, and Troy reached via the Hoosick river. The survey of this part was made by Epaphras Hoyt. He makes his report with plan Sept. 20, 1825. Jan., 1826, the canal commissioners report to the Legislature that a canal is practicable, and recommend its being built at public expense, and a canal fund be raised from "taxes on banks, duties on auction sales, proceeds of the sales of public lands, a State lottery, canal tolls," and the interest of a claim on the national government for military service.

The steamboat once introduced on the river, old-fashioned boating disappeared, but the old boats were retained. They were towed by the steamboats in fleets of from three to six and the time much shortened. Twenty-four round trips from Cheapside to Hartford was the rule for the season of about eight months. The Ariel Cooley was early upon the river and was the only steamboat towing boats above the Hadley Falls. She was on duty in 1847, when she was taken to Southern waters. The statements concerning her fate, on page 91 of the History of Connecticut Valley, are erroneous. Capt. L. L. Luey, Charles Henry and Caleb White of Greenfield, all old rivermen, whose statements must be considered entirely reliable, agree that the boat which was blown up near Mt. Tom, killing the captain, engineer, and Machinist Long, who built the engine, was not the Ariel Cooley, but the Greenfield, on its trial trip with a new-fangled boiler, and that she was the only boat blown up in these waters.

The Abercrombies came to Cheapside about 1830, where they did a large mercantile business. They bought in 1831 the tavern and the Houghton store. Aug. 25, 1834, they bought for $140 a boat called "Voyger," and changed her name to "Free Trade." Repairs, mast, rigging, etc., brought the cost to $184. Capt. Stebbins, with a crew of three men, left for Hartford, Oct. 11. The cost of first round trip was $92.06. The principal items of expense were wages of crew, $30.69; towing, $9; tolls through canals at Hadley and Enfield, $26.05. Three trips were made that season with a profit of $128.90. Up freight was $4.50 to $5 a ton; down, about half as much. They brought up English and West India goods, flour from Albany, N. E. rum from Boston, cotton from the South. The down freight was rough and manufactured lumber, farmers' produce, potash and miscellanies. Thompson of Colrain sent ash plank to Boston and New York. Richard Dickinson sends Deerfield brooms, 14,120 in one lot; Ware of Deerfield, Sheldon of Leyden, Wilson of Colrain, ship cider brandy; Pierce of Greenfield, fire frames; King & Co., chairs; others, boxes of hats; Fuller of Deerfield sends cranberries; Philo Temple, poles, whether hoop, hop or setting does not appear; A. & L. C. Rice send scythe snaths, 4,450 in one invoice. We find beech wood and axes for Philadelphia, broom handles from Halifax, rakestales for Providence, one shipment being 5,063 from Perkins, who also sends to the same market forkstales, scythe sticks, spokes, felloes, shafts; from Whitingham came leather and lime. Quite an item was the empty casks and boxes sent for a market. Large quantities of firewood were shipped to Hartford, where it was delivered to the steamboats for their own consumption.

Aug. 1, 1839, the Abercrombies bought another boat, the "Donner," for $225. Repairs, rigging, etc., brought the cost up to $309. The Donner made four trips this season, netting the owners $297.89.

Allen & Root of Greenfield built a store near the Abercrombie tavern, about 1835. This firm owned the Greenfield, and ran a line of boats on the river, as did also Stockbridge & Wells, and Stockbridge, Culver & Co. In 1837 these companies all united under the title of Stockbridge, Allen, Root & Co., which continued the business until the advent of the Connecticut Railroad Co., to which the whole concern was sold out. "Boating on the Pocumtuck river" was then over, and the glory of Cheapside departed forever.

Bridges and Turnpikes. The road from Deerfield to Greenfield ran across North Meadows to a ferry at the north end of Pine Hill and so north through Cheapside, by Fort Hill, the Sequestered Land and the east bank of Green river. This route was often obstructed by floods, and various plans were early suggested for a better one.

1722. The town chose a committee to consult with Joseph Parsons about building a bridge. No report on the matter is found, but in 1727, the town voted to build a bridge at the first turn of the river below the crossing.

1751. The town chose a committee to inquire whether a bridge can be built and to get estimates of cost. Nothing more is heard of this movement.

1758. Deerfield was ordered by authority to keep a ferry at the old crossing.

1785. A committee was chosen by the town to petition the Legislature for the grant of a lottery to raise money to build a bridge. The petitioners have leave to withdraw.

1786. Jonathan Hoyt and others were granted leave to build a bridge "at a place called Rocky Mountain," just at the gorge below the present bridge.

1787. This year a road was laid out on the east side of North Meadows from the Old Street to Cheapside, and a ferry established just above where the bridge now stands. Moses Chandler, who had been ferryman at the old place, came along with the ferry and he remained to be toll-gatherer when the bridge was built. A road was also laid out on both sides of the river, thirty-two rods down the banks from the ferry to a ford way. These roads and the approach to the ferry were on land of John Williams, who offered to give the same in consideration of being allowed a perpetual privilege of running the ferry. Jonathan Hoyt was representative this year and he was instructed by the town to oppose the petition of Mr. Williams.

1791. An attempt was made by a Deerfield party to interest that and the adjoining towns to unite in a petition for a lottery to build a bridge at Cheapside. No action is found in this direction.

1792. A bill passed the House granting a lottery to Deerfield for the purpose of raising £600 to build a bridge at Cheapside. David Smead and David Saxton were made managers. I doubt if it became a law. I have the original bill, but the endorsement of the Senate action thereon is illegible.

1796. In March a line of stages from Hartford to Hanover, N. H., was established on the west side of the river passing the ferry at Cheapside. A bridge had been built shortly before at the mouth of Millers river, on the route of the east side line. This year Jonathan Hoyt and David Smead petitioned the General Court for a charter to build a bridge at the Cheapside ferry. May 9th the town chose a committee to oppose the petition. The same session John Williams and others put in a petition for a charter to build a bridge at Rocky mountain. The Senate appointed, June 15, 1796, Jonathan Hunt of Hinsdale, Vt., (now Vernon) Daniel Bigelow of Petersham and John Black of Barre, a committee to hear both parties and report at the next session "which place was the most eligible for a bridge and for the accommodation of travel." Elaborate plans of bridges at each location are extant. At the ferry the distance between the abutments was 256 feet and total length 507 feet; necessary mason work, 94,500 feet. At Rocky mountain; between abutments was 157 feet; total length, 230 feet; masonry 47,450 feet. Neither plan shows any piers in the water. Wooden trestles were doubtless to be used by both plans. Hunt reports to the next session, "That the place called Rocky Mountain is the most sure and eligible for erecting a bridge and for the accommodation of travelers." But in Cheapside affairs, Legislative reports do not always carry. It was so in this case. June 22, 1797, the Hoyt party got a charter to build a bridge at the ferry place, the present location.

1797. John Sinclair of Deerfield opened a ferry "at the mouth of Deerfield river, where the contemplated turnpike will probably be established." In 1792 a charter was granted to build a bridge across the Connecticut at this point, and a second in 1795. Both failed, but the time was nearly ripe for such an enterprise. A great tide of emigration was surging up the valley of the Connecticut. There was a demand for better facilities for travel and transportation. Canals and turnpikes were under way, and Cheapside was becoming a prominent center of business. The second Massachusetts turnpike was chartered March 8, 1797, to run from Charle-mont over Hoosac mountain. This was to attract Western trade down the valley of the Deerfield river to Cheapside. The fourth turnpike, connecting with the second, was organized March 1, 1799.

1798. Hoyt and others built a bridge at Cheapside on the site of the present bridge at a cost of $5000. It was supported by timber trestles, with possibly a pier, where the south pier now stands, and in 1805 was in a tumble-down condition and the contractors, Messrs. Fellows & Atherton, were obliged to pay the proprietors $1364 damages. After considerable expense in repairs the bridge was given up and a new one with masonry superstructure was built in 1806 at a cost of $8000.

1799. The fifth Massachusetts turnpike from Boston was laid out, and in 1801 was in operation westward through Cheapside.

1800. July 6, a county road was laid from Cheapside to the proposed Montague bridge. Dec. 27 a bridge was raised over Green river, I suppose on the site of the present lower bridge, and a road laid out across Petty's Plain.

1802. Montague bridge opened Nov. 26, at 11 o'clock A. M. A turnpike was chartered this year from Greenfield to Charlemont, being a connecting link between the second and fourth on one hand and the fifth on the other.

1804. In December a bridge across the Connecticut at Brattleboro was opened. A lottery was granted this year for a bridge at Hatfield.

1812. Oct. 13, Sunderland bridge "opened for carriages." It was 1000 feet long, twenty-nine wide and forty-five high from low water to top of sill. It was supported by eight double trestles and four single ones near the shores. This was destroyed by a flood, Feb. 12, 1824.

1823. February 5, William Russell and others advertised for proposals to build a bridge at the point of Rocky mountain, and a second time, Feb. 14. The subscribers to the new bridge held a meeting at Nims's tavern, in Deerfield, Apr. 24. February 14, a meeting of the proprietors of the old bridge was called for the 24th "to take into consideration the expediency of suspending the building of said bridge." Nothing is found to indicate the cause or end of the trouble; the old bridge was continued and the new one not built.

Tolls: Stages on wheels, 20 cents; on runners, 12; four horse wagons, 17; teams (cart and oxen) 17; curricule, 20; hack, 20; chaise, 8; horse and wagon, 6; cutter, 6; footmen and oxen, 2; sheep, 1; man horseback, 4.

The charter to the Cheapside Bridge Corporation ran for seventy years. At its expiration a good, substantial bridge was to be left free to the town. People had become tired of paying toll, and looked forward to the time when this annoying tax on travel should be removed. The question was, when did the seventy years expire? But who knew when the bridge was opened? The proprietors had no desire to give up a good thing sooner than obliged, and would give no sign. The town took the matter up, and Nov. 5, 1867, Charles Williams, Elisha Wells and George Sheldon were made a committee "to obtain Legislative action," or "take such action in the matter as in their judgment the best interests of the town require." The Antiquary was put on the hunt for evidence as to when toll was first taken. After long search a file of the Greenfield Gazette, covering that period, was found, but in this not a single word was said respecting the building or opening of the first toll bridge of all this section of country. There was news of the wars and political movements in Europe, and of debates in Congress, but not a hint of this new enterprise.

Persistent mousing, however, brought to light a Day Book of Dr. William S. Williams, in which were minute and specific charges for professional services, visits, pills, plasters, phlebotomy, &c., each had a separate charge, and in case of a patient at Cheapside ferriage was added. Three days later this item was changed to toll, and toll it continued. This Day Book was taken by the Antiquary before the Legislative committee of Boston and on its evidence alone, the day was determined on which the bridge became free.

A strange thing happened while this committee was in session, which came near to taking the question beyond legislative supervision. The channel of the river below the bridge became the bed of a furious torrent running up-stream, carrying against the bridge huge masses of ice, logs, etc., which shattered the covering boards, broke off posts, and threatened instant destruction to the structure. An ice gorge had dammed up the Connecticut, and its waters, rising about thirty feet, rushed up the Deerfield until the basin of the North Meadows was filled.

Business. Cheapside being the head of river navigation, became an active center of business.

September 6, 1795, Joseph Swan appears as the pioneer trader, advertising three hundred bushels of salt to sell or "exchange for flax seed on terms pleasing to the farmers." Sept. 15, William Wait, cooper, has removed to Cheapside, and in company with Cephas Hoyt, also has salt for sale.

1796. September 27, a new store appears at Deerfield, where Job and Asa Whitney will sell salt, etc., and Nov. 29, another by Calvin Burt & Co., who are in special want of a hundred bushels of clover seed. A building boom had set in and William Russell—"Uncle Bill"—wants "two joiners" and Asher Benjamin of Greenfield, the architect, wants "seven or eight journeymen carpenters" at once.

1797. Jan. 2, William Wait pays £65 for three acres on the west side of Rocky mountain at the river. Was he after hoop poles or building stone?

1798. Calvin Burt & Co. have removed to "Cheapside Landing" and have a large and good stock of goods of all kinds.

1799. John Williams, Jr., opens a store "a few rods below the bridge," where he will sell, wholesale or retail, West India goods, tobacco, etc.; wants "staves, headings and hoop poles;" will exchange barrels for cedar and salt for flax seed. William Wait wants ten or twelve hundred feet of white oak staves and headings.

Jonathan Hoyt hangs out his sign, a black horse on white ground, and opens the "Black Horse Inn."

1800. John Williams, running boats on the river and perhaps building them, wants "10,000 feet 2-inch white oak plank 18 feet long," also corn, hay and potatoes. He set up this year an establishment for packing beef and pork on the meadow above the bridge. Jan. 15, Jonathan Hoyt sold John Williams, Jr., and Robert Bardwell each a lot of an acre and a half "in our new city (alias) Behind Noon," for $200 an acre. A few weeks later Rev. John Taylor and others are found seeking investments in the same locality, which appears to be about the Philo Temple farm. Jan. 17, a road was laid out "from the bridge up by the Packing house to the Meadows." Jan. 29, Jonathan Hoyt, as agent, sold the David Wells "Meadow land" to Daniel Wells, gent, Benjamin Swan, yeoman, and William Wait, gent, "for 1000 pounds." This lot of forty-four acres was bounded south on Deerfield river and west on Green river. Oct. 2, we find James Mayo here with five hundred bushels of salt to exchange for flax seed. Oct. 8, Samuel Saxton offers to exchange six hundred bushels of the same commodity for cash or white beans; will pay cash for Indian corn or rye. Oct. 13, "Cattle killing began at the slaughter house." "Oct. 29. This day the first boats went up the canal at Montague." The locks were built by Hophni King of Northfield. These were narrower than those at South Hadley, consequently the oak boats could not pass; their trips ended at Cheapside. The pine boats could pass, and the boxes of rafts were adapted to their dimensions. Dec. 27, a bridge over Green river was raised.

1801. John Williams, Jr., offers "a few hhds. of rum at a reduced price," will exchange for barrel beef, pork or Indian corn. He also has "10 tons ground plaster by the ton, tierce, or single bushel." From this time on "plaster" is one of the staples sold at Cheapside. About this time there was a call for ginseng as an article of export and doubtless quantities were shipped from Cheapside. The greatest care was required in gathering this plant "not to break the roots or skin in pulling. Not a ray of sunshine must strike them, not a drop of water touch them."

1804. Dec. 1, we find Robert Bardwell here in a new store with a new stock of goods.

1805. February 7, Capt. John Wells moved up to Willard's tavern in Greenfield. Later he moved to Boston. Feb. 14, Mr. Chandler left the toll bridge and moved to Greenfield. Cruden Alexander became toll gatherer. Capt. Thomas Bardwell moved into the house lately vacated by Samuel Merrill. Both were shoemakers. Apr. 5, a cooper's shop was built in connection with the bridge.

1806. Robert Bardwell offers some fifteen hundred bushels of salt this season and other merchants were offering large lots. July 7, Daniel Forbes advertises a full assortment of goods, including "fancy crockery and glassware." He wants "a few good smooth shipping horses." In November he wants "beef and pork for barreling at Cheapside." He wants "3000 hhds. hoop poles 10 to 12 feet long." Mar. 3, he offers for sale 100 hhds. No. 1 beef, 2000 lbs. tried tallow and thirteen bush. shag bark walnuts, also his store and land on Greenfield street.

1807. Caleb and Pliny Alvord are here with "wet goods" and groceries. Are running boats for freight. Want flaxseed, beans, butter, cheese, hoop poles, etc.

1808. May 10 the firm dissolve. Caleb goes to Montague; Pliny remains at the old stand. June 3, Samuel E. and Geo. P. Field, having left their shop at Hoosac, are here making both cut and wrought nails. Oct. 31, Alvord has nine hundred bushels salt to exchange for one thousand bushels flaxseed. Same date Bardwell says his "sloop Flying Fish has this day arrived with a cargo of salt and plaster."

1809. Orrin Dole has a shop here for making all kinds of cooperware. July 31, Alvord has a ton of codfish and fifteen hundred bushels salt, and Sept. 29, Bardwell has a boat load of salt. Both want cider and flaxseed. Nov. 14, Alvord "this day received 305 bush. salt with "more on the way." This record might be thus seasoned with salt items to saturation.

1810. January, Caleb Alvord, Jr., leaves his store in Greenfield to go into company with Pliny at Cheapside. Will barrel pork and sell lumber. March, Moses Munson wants to hire four or five millwrights or carpenters six or seven months at Cheapside. Apr. 27, Munson & Swan's sawmill on Green river raised. August 21, Edward Houghton from Northfield raises a large store "at the bridge." Dec. 24, "Edward Houghton & Sons have erected and will occupy a large and convenient store at Cheapside." This was the store occupied by the Abercrombies, which was moved up the hill north when the Vermont and Massachusetts railroad was built. May 9, Jehiel Jones has a blacksmith shop near the bridge. This was probably occupied later by Pardon H. Merrill.

1812. Apr. 12, Edward Houghton retires and the business is continued by Edward, Jr., and Clark, his sons.

1813. Clark Houghton, now alone, is boating and has for sale, "a few bushels hemp seed and Plymouth Beach lottery tickets."

1814. He wants one thousand bushels flaxseed. Oct. 3, William Emmons, fine work cabinet maker, moved his business here from Deerfield Street. Densmore Dole had a hatter's shop here about this time.

1815. May 29, Samuel E. and G. P. Field began the baking business at Houghton's store. Nov. 17, Maj. Erastus Smith from Hadley is in company with Houghton.

1816. June 3, Bardwell is selling patent cast iron stoves and is making nails.

1817. Stockbridge & Wells of Whately go into the boating business on the river from Hartford to Cheapside. Houghton is selling iron and steel. Wants two hundred bushels chestnuts. In 1818 he wants "a few smooth shipping horses" and one hundred thousand feet of boards delivered at Cobb's Landing. Offers forty or fifty bushels flaxseed for sowing. Samuel Kentfield moves from Hartford to Cheapside. In 1819 Bardwell gives up his store to Elijah A. Gould, but continues the boating. R. E. Field sets up a carriage shop about this time.

1821. Henry Johnson wants five thousand gray squirrel skins. May 11, Robert R. Field appears here with the inevitable salt to sell. Loring Thayer has a large cabinet making business.

1823. Clark Houghton, being nearly or quite blind, offers to sell his store, "one of the best stands in the country, * * * where immense quantities of goods are landed in the boating season, which supplies a vast country west and north." Joseph H. Wheeler and Charles Howard are selling shad by the barrel at the Houghton store. A tavern was kept by Nathan Henry from Halifax, 1832-38, which was continued for many years after by Asiel Abercrombie. There had been for some years a gradual decline in local trade and business, although stores were kept agoing until the end—the advent of the railroad.

County Seat. Franklin county was incorporated June 24, 1811. For a year or so there was a spirited contest between Cheapside and Greenfield for the location of the county buildings. I do not know as Deerfield in its corporate capacity took a hand in it. Greenfield did, and raised $500, and doubtless private subscriptions were added to it. In Deerfield $1900 was raised for Cheapside. For this sum John Williams offered to build a court house as good as that at Northampton, to put up a fire proof building for the clerk of courts and another for the register of deeds, the latter to be on the south side of the river; to give land for the jail on Taylor's brook, which could be founded on solid rock. John Williams and Jonathan Hoyt were the land barons of Cheapside, but they did not harmonize; they had been rivals in the bridge building and both could not win; a lawsuit had fortified the breach. The best site for county buildings was owned by Hoyt, and to all solicitations to give or exchange land, he said not a foot of his land should be used by the Williams party for that purpose, and intimated that it was a Tory operation; the Greenfield people took up this cry and made the most of it. For a full and graphic account of the contest see Hon. Whiting Griswold's address at the opening of the new Court house, Mar. 18, 1873. The decision to locate the shire at Greenfield, was a wise one. At Cheapside, on the north side of the river, there was scanty room for a single street between the hills and high water mark. On the other side the opportunity for building was still less.

The 8000-Acre Line. Cheapside has become well known in the annals of the state legislature from the many schemes for bridges, canals and annexations centering there. A volume would be required to record the inns and outs of them all. A bare schedule only of the latter can be given.

In 1742, Greenfield, then Green River district, moved to be set off from Deerfield as a town or district by the name of Cheapside, the south bounds to be Deerfield river and Sheldon's brook. The movement continued with varying intensity until 1753, when Greenfield district was set off, its south line being the north line of the Dedham grant. This, established Oct. 11, 1672, has been known ever since as the 8000 Acre Line. For one hundred and fifty years this has been the line of battle between Deerfield and her daughter. Following, and in consequence of the setting off of Greenfield, serious disturbances arose about the disposition of the "Sequestered Lands" lying in Cheapside. Pitchforks, rakes and cartstakes were freely used as arguments in the discussion as to whom the hay grown thereon belonged. The courts finally decided in favor of Deerfield. The land in question had been, in 1686, "Sequestered for the use of the ministry in Deerfield forever" by the "Proprietors of Pocumtuck."

In 1836 "Philo Temple and others" petitioned the General Court that Cheapside might be set off to Greenfield. A Legislative committee was instructed to have a view and hearing on the premises, and report to the next Legislature. A hearing was had at Greenfield in June, 1836, and on the 7th of January, 1837, they made a report in favor of the scheme. Rufus Saxton, the Deerfield representative, wrote the next day that this report "will govern the Legislature. It is beyond the power of man to change it." And on the 13th he writes, "It is nearly a hopeless case." But his constituents did not hesitate and a hot fight ensued. The House gave Deerfield the victory by a majority of forty-three.

In 1850 the scheme was renewed under a petition of "David R. Wait & others." The committee on towns, to whom the petition was referred, made a report in favor of a committee for a view and hearing, to report at the next Legislature. Deerfield opposed this and the report was recommitted with instructions to hear the case and report at that session. This was a death blow to the scheme and the petition was withdrawn. The Deerfield committee having the case in charge were Jonathan A. Saxton, Pliny Arms and Charles Williams.

In 1861 another attempt was made under a new petition of "David R. Wait and others," the line of division to be the Deerfield river, thus including Wisdom. In the other cases it had been Deerfield river and Sheldon's brook. A hearing was held before a Legislative committee of seven. Five of these signed a report in favor of setting off Cheapside. A minority of Messrs. Parsons and Banfield reported that "the petitioners have leave to withdraw." George T. Davis from Greenfield was pitted against Ira Abercrombie from Deerfield in the House. Each had been elected with reference to this case. Henry King Hoyt was agent for Deerfield. After a hot contest for weeks the House adopted the minority report by a majority of thirty-eight.

In 1887, "Joel DeWolf and others" again started the ball. The petition was referred to the committee on towns, which, after a view and hearing, reported in favor of the petitioners, making Deerfield river the line of division. But Deerfield people had no fear of adverse reports, so they went into the contest the best they knew how, and on the 12th of April, 1888, the House decided in their favor by a majority of fifty-two. In the House, Freeman C. Griswold of Greenfield championed the report and Henry C. Haskell of Deerfield, opposed it. The 8000 Acre Line still remains the north bound of Deerfield.

PART II.

FAMILY

GENEALOGIES

OF FAMILIES WHICH CAME BEFORE THE CLOSE OF THE REVOLUTIONARY WAR.

For information concerning the families who laid the foundations of our town, the compiler has searched the most obscure nooks and corners. Original documents have been consulted in all possible cases. Many controverted points have been put to rest by the evidence found. Some family traditions have been established and others dissipated to the four winds.

No work of this kind was ever printed without mistakes, and it is too much to hope that this will be an exception. But not all its variations from the records of town, church and family, or gravestone inscriptions, are mistakes. In each of these, errors, perpetuated for generations, have been discovered, proved such and corrected.

Records of families marked with a † are doubtful, or incomplete.

The dates following the names of children are those of birth, unless otherwise designated. The figures in parenthesis following these dates refer to the marginal number, where the child appears as the head of a family, and no son is again noticed without this reference, and no daughter under her maiden name.

Between January 1st and March 25th double dates are given when found. In their absence an element of doubt as to the year must always exist prior to 1752, as the recorders followed no fixed rule.

All dates are Old Style before Sept. 3d, 1752, and New Style after that.

Where persons are said to have been killed or captured "in 1704," they were victims at the destruction of the town, Feb. 29th, 1703-4.

Part II. of the History of Deerfield, as originally published, contained a notice of every family and every man known to have settled here before the close of the Revolutionary war. Their ancestry in America, so far as it could be discovered, was given, and all their descendants remaining here, for a hundred years later. In many cases branches were traced for generations after leaving the mother town.

In the present edition, this scheme has been enlarged to some extent, and many later coming families included. As stated in the preface, this added matter has been mainly the result of contributions from interested parties instead of original research by the author. Hence it follows that of this class, families the most fully represented are those whose members showed the most interest in this undertaking by furnishing material.

ALEXANDER, WILLIAM, came here from Londonderry in 1765, with s. John and daus. Gin and Lydia. They were "warned out of town" and nothing more is heard from them.

1. ALLEN, EDWARD, weaver, of Ipswich, 1658; in 1662 he was occupying a farm owned by Rev. John Norton of Boston; in 1670 his barn was burned by lightning, with 60 loads of barley; in 1678 he received a grant of 60 acres of land at Suff. and rem. about that time, from Ipswich to Suff. where he d. Nov. 21, 1696. In his will, made one week before his death, he provides for his five younger sons, at Suff., and his two younger daus. Elizabeth and Sarah. The older daus. are not mentioned and were prob. both dead. He provided that Samuel should live with Benjamin, and Caleb with David, until they were 21; the older brothers to teach the younger the "art or trade of a weaver," and when they came of age to build each a house and give each a cow. The inventory of his estate is given below.

In regard to the orthography of this name, the weight of evidence is in favor of Allyn; in the body of the will of Edward and in the signature it is Allyn, but as Edward made his mark, both were by the same hand. The Judge of Probate, John Pynchon, wrote it Allyn in the attestation and in the filing Alline; in the inventory taken by three of his neighbors, it was Alen; Samuel Patridge, Register, wrote it Alline; in 1704, Edward and John, the elder sons, wrote it Allyn; Edward, town clerk of Dfd., 1704-12, wrote Allyn at first, then indifferently Allin, Allen, Alline. His successors did the same for several years, when it finally settled into Allen.

9. ETHAN, s. of Joseph (8), b. 1738; Brig. Gen. Vermont Militia; Lieut. Col. Continental Army; Delegate to Cont. Congress. A volume would not contain the eventful history of this grandson of Deerfield: a few points only will be noted; he was the head of the Green Mountain Boys in opposing the attempts of New York to take possession of the Hampshire Grants, and he often sent home her officers bearing the marks of the "Twigs of the wilderness," known as the "Birch Seal." On one occasion when the inhabitants of Guilford had been overawed by the Yorkers and were supposed to favor that side, Allen appeared there at the head of a party of Vermonters and made this characteristic proclamation: "I Ethan Allen do declare that I will give no quarter to the man woman or child who shall oppose me, and unless the inhabitants of Guilford peacefully submit to the authority of Vermont I swear that I will lay it as desolate as Sodom and Gomorrah by God!" This was effectual to do the business in hand. The best known event of his life, as bearing the widest results, was the capture of Ticonderoga, May 10, 1775, "In the name of the Great Jehovah and the Continental Congress." Less fortunate in a rash attempt on Montreal he was himself taken prisoner and sent to England under conditions of great cruelty; while in England it is said an attempt was made to seduce him to the royal cause, and that in an interview with the king he was offered large grants of land in Vermont as a reward for his loyalty; his characteristic reply was to relate the parable of Christ's temptation when the devil offered him all the kingdoms of the earth, &c., adding, "and all the while the damned rascal didn't own a foot of it." He was exchanged in 1778 and was a leading spirit in the political and military affairs of Vermont; he wrote and published many papers; his "Allen's Theology or the Oracles of Reason," is perhaps the most widely known; he was a large landholder in Western Vermont and lived in several towns; he died at Burlington, Feb. 12, 1789, where a monument was erected to his memory by the State of Vermont. He m. June 23, 1763, Mary, dau. Richard Bronson, of what is now Roxbury, Ct.; she d. at Sunderland, Vt., 1783; was buried at Arlington; (2), Feb. 16, 1784, Mrs. Frances Montuzan, wid. of Capt. Buchanen, step-dau. to Crean Bush, b. Apr. 4, 1760; (for a graphic account of this characteristic wedding see Hall's Eastern Vermont, p. 631.); she m. (3), Oct. 28, 1793, Hon. Jabez Penniman of Westminster, Vt.

12. LEVI, s. of Joseph (8), b. 1745, in Cornwall, Ct.; like his brothers, prominent in western Vermont as a speculator and politician; was a Tory and rem. to Conn., where being detected in supplying provision to the British army on Long Island, he was imprisoned for six months in the jail at New London, and all his large estates in Vermont were confiscated; on his release he joined the British army in South Carolina, and served through the war; he was in Canada, 1789-93; in England, 1793-6, when he came back to Vermont; he died in Burlington, in 1801. He m. July 29, 1779, wid. Anne Allen of New Milford, Conn.

13. IRA, s. of Joseph (8), b. 1751; Maj. Gen. of Vermont militia; was chief manager of the 300,000 acres on the Lake shore owned by himself and brothers; most of this eventually fell into his hands; he was active making improvements to attract settlers, by building new roads, mills, &c.; he projected the University of Vermont and gave £4,000 for an endowment. He was one of the foremost in the political advancement of Vermont, and particularly in the skillful negotiations with the British power in Canada, which induced the belief that Vermont would unite her fortunes to Canada, and which saved the infant nation from invasion; he was finally captured by an English ship while bringing home a vessel with 24,000 muskets and 24 brass cannon, which he had bought in France on a private speculation. The vessel and cargo were condemned as a prize because he had sailed from the port of an enemy; after eight years' litigation the decision was reversed, but the cost of the suit was his ruin; he died poor, an exile from his chosen state, for which he had done so much; he published many papers, the chief of which was his History of Vermont, issued at London, 1798; he d. at Philadelphia, Jan. 7, 1814. He m. Jerusha, dau. Maj. Gen. Roger Enos; she d. May 16, 1838, a. 74.

(2) Jan. 27, 1726-7, Azariah Wright of Nfd.; it is said of her in the Hist. of Nfd. that "she was the first teacher in town of whom a record exists; in 1721 she taught a class of young ch. at her own house, for 22 weeks of the warm season, and charged four pence each per week; she educated her own ch. well; her oldest dau., Joanna, was the noted schoolma'am of the next generation. Mrs. Field was a woman of great energy and versatility; we get but two glimpses of her life, the first when she is keeping school, making shirts for the Indians at 8 pence each, making breeches for Ensign Field, her husband's brother, at one shilling, sixpence per pr., besides managing her household with four young ch.; we next see her, ten years later, as Mrs. Azariah Wright, with 8 children, the youngest but a year old, and leisure to work at tailoring, as formerly; leisure to spin and weave tow cloth, to be exchanged with the traders for crockery and a few luxuries; to spin and weave a web of 26 yds. of linen sheeting for Sam'l Smith, for which she receives 24 shillings. Taking these as samples of other years, her life was a useful, productive and beneficent one; she had in all 14 ch., the youngest twins." She d. Oct. 1, 1772. In the annals of our town little can be learned of our foremothers, and Elizabeth Arms must stand as one of their best representatives; the above sketch of her industrial life was gleaned fr. old acc. books, now in Memorial Hall; one of her sons, Azariah Wright, was "the Ethan Allen of Westminster," Vt., during the Hampshire Grant troubles. (See Hall's Eastern Vermont.)

7. SAMUEL, s. of Joseph (2), b. 1684; in the Meadow fight, 1704, Captain in Father Rasle's war; Justice of the Peace, 1723; after the death of his wife and ch. he rem. to Salem, where he amassed a fortune in trade; d. Nov. 21, 1762; by his will, made June 20, 1755, he gave to the poor of Dfd. and Salem, £100, for the benefit of "such as do not receive aid from the towns;" to the chh. in Salem £60, in Dfd. £100, in Gfd. £40, these sums to be "in plate, which is not to be divided with any that may in after times go off from either of them." He gave to other parties, in cash, £386, and life annuities to the amount of £85; gave 400 acres of land towards an academy, "which is proposed to be set up in Hadley or some other town;" 1935 acres more are divided among his nephews. But the bulk of his real estate in the Ct. Valley, which included the "Willard homestead," he gave to his nephew Joseph, s. of Ebenezer, "to be to him during his life, and after his decease to his son Samuel, and to the heirs male of his body, lawfully begotten forever." All his "lands, buildings and wharfs in Salem and Danvers," he gave to the same Joseph, "during his life, and after his decease to his son Ebenezer, and to his heirs;" in default of heirs this goes to "Samuel, his brother, and to his heirs and assigns forever;" provision was made in case of the failure of the proposed scheme for an academy, and the failure of legal heirs of Samuel, that a large amount be used for the "conversion of the heathen, particularly those called the Six Nations." To prepare the boys thus selected to found a grand hereditary landed gentry they were at once sent to H. C., where they were graduated in 1766—Ebenezer, 21, studied medicine; Samuel, 19, studied law; what became of the large Essex Co. estate does not appear, but Dr. Ebenezer died insolvent, 1791; the broad meadows and great tracts of wild land left "Lawyer Sam," had nearly or quite melted away at his removal to Vermont, in 1795; the idea of earning or saving was prob. no part of their education, and this financial result followed as a matter of course; Samuel m. at Roxbury, May 22, 1718, Sarah Williams; she d. at Dfd., Aug. 4, 1720; (2) May 29,

1. CARTER, SAMUEL, supposed by Savage and Judd to have been a son of Joshua (2); a recent discovery of old letters among his descendants, seems to prove that he was born in London abt. 1665, whence he was enticed by the captain of a ship, abt. 1677, and landed in Boston; he was one of those who came here on the permanent sett., and was prominent in the affairs of the town; his family was broken up in 1704 and the next year he rem. to Norwalk, Ct.; in a petition to the Gen. Court of Ct., May 8, 1707, Samuel Carter recites that: "The French and Indians rifled his house, destroyed his cattle, killed his wife and three of his children carrying four of them into captivity, whereof one was redeemed by paying £24 borrowed money. The Court judged his case called for charity of the good people of the towns of New Haven and Milford and also in the several towns in the County of Fairfield, and a brief was ordered him;" he d. CARVER, EBENEZER; d. July 8, 1831, a. 91.

CARVER, JONATHAN; soldier, traveler, author; accounts of this man's origin are indefinite and contradictory. Judge Daniel W. Bond gives me the following as his probable ancestry.

1. WILLIAM JOSEPH CARVER, of Wigan, Lancashire Eng.; a capt. in the army of William III., later appointed to an office in Ct.; had son David (2).

2. David; sett. in Canterbury, Ct., aft. 1714; Ens. 1720; Dep. to Gen. Court 1721-2; d. Sept. 14, 1727. He m. abt. 1702, Hannah Dyer of Weymouth; she was sis. of Col. John of Canterbury, and Col. Thomas of Windham, both prominent in the affairs of Ct.

Ch.: David.

Samuel, who had wife Esther in 1727.

Jonathan, b. abt. 1712 (3).

Sarah.

Hannah.

Benjamin, b. abt. 1722.

I print this with misgivings on several points; am quite sure Jona. was born later, prob. abt. 1729; nor do I feel at all sure that the Eng. capt. was grandfather to Jonathan. Dr. Lettsom, whom Bond followed, was very loose in his statements, and all abroad in matters relating to America.

3. JONATHAN, [s. of David (2), b. abt. 1712 ?] rem. to Mont. abt. 1749; was at Nfd. making shoes for Moses Field 1754; lived later at Dfd.; was on the roll of Capt. Elijah Williams 1755; was cap. at the fall of Fort William Henry in 1757, where in the barbarous massacre which followed he was wounded, stripped, and only escaped with his life by a mere accident; was 2d lieut. under Capt. John Hawks in 1758; lieut. under Capt. Salah Barnard 1759; capt. under Col. John Whitcomb and Col. Saltonstall and served through the war. In June, 1766, he set out on an exploring expedition to the far West; he visited twelve Indian tribes abt. Lake Superior and the headwaters of the Mississippi river, and was everywhere hospitably received; was five months with the Nadowissies, who named him Shebaygo and made him a chief. He arrived in Boston on his return, Oct. 1768; the next year he sailed for England, where he laid his papers before the government with a petition for a reward for his service; he rec'd little encouragement, but was given leave to publish his journal and charts. He "disposed of these to a bookseller," but soon after he was ordered to deposit in the Plantation office all his charts and papers relating to his discoveries, and was reimbursed the amount of his expenses. He prudently retained copies of them all, and in 1778 he published in London a fine illustrated 8vo vol. of 543 pages, and a second edition in 1779. The work was well received. Carver says in the introduction to a third edition, Nov. 1779, "two large editions having been run off in a few months," There was call for another, although one had been issued in Dublin the same year. This third London edition was somewhat enlarged by the author; it was published in 1781, with a memoir of Carver by Dr. John C. Lettsom. Before the close of the century eight editions had been published in Europe and at least eight in America; there have been many editions here since. Carver reaped so little of the fruit of his toil that he actually died through want in London, Jan. 31, 1780. Dr. Lettsom, who was a distinguished London physician, printed in his memoir of Carver a deed, which he believed authentic, from two chiefs of the Nadowessie tribe, dated May 1, 1767, conveying to Jona. Carver some 12,000 square miles on the Mississippi, east of Lake Popen and the falls of St. Anthony. In an affidavit, sworn to in 1806, and again in 1824, Rev. Sam'l Peters, LL. D., says he was present when Carver laid this deed before the King and Council in Feb. 1775, with a petition that the land be confirmed to him and that his expenses be paid by the government; he says that Carver and his friends were ordered to retire to another room, whence after a time they were called in, and the Minister said to Capt. Carver, "His Majesty has graciously granted your petition and has ordered a gratuity of £1373, 6s, 8d, to be paid you, and that you prepare to sail from New Orleans next June and take possession of your territory with one hundred and fifty men, of whom you will be the commander; and his majesty will provide ships, men and necessities to convey you there." Peters says the money was paid, and all arrangements were being made, when the news from Bunker Hill was rec'd and all was dropped. Peters was rector of chhs. in Hart. and Hebron, Ct.; being a violent Tory he was forced to leave the country; he claimed to have been intimate with Carver both in Ct. and in London to the day of his death; he is the only authority for the above statements; he may have told the truth, but as he is considered by all historical students a "notorious liar," his unsupported testimony goes for little. Capt. Carver, in an appendix to his book, says that he "and others" interested Richard Whitworth, M. P., in a project of building a fort at Lake Pepin as a basis of operations for discovering a northwest passage to India; that the government favored the plan and that the grant and other requisites were nearly ready, when the Revolution broke out and put a stop to the matter; Whitworth had engaged Capt. Carver and Maj. Robert Rogers as assistants, with fifty or sixty mechanics and mariners to build the fort and necessary vessels; Carter maps out several desirable sites for settlements in the region where he traveled, but in all his writings, from first to last, there is not a syllable referring to the Indian deed, although he describes a meeting of the tribe on that same May 1, and gives the speech he made on that occasion with the reply by one of the chiefs. The Reverend Peters also says that abt. 1798 a company was formed in London to prosecute a claim for the "Carver tract." They procured fr. Martha Carver, supposed to be sole heir of her father, such title as she could give, and spent some £6000 in fruitless attempts; he is the only authority for this transaction. May 9, 1794, the children of Carver in America made over their claims under the deed to Edward Houghton of Vermont for £50,000; in 1822 Houghton deeded the claim to the "Mississippi Land Co." of N. Y. In the archives of the P. V. M. Association are two deeds fr. Phineas Munn to Consider Dickinson; one, dated July 31, 1797, conveys "Sixteen Thousand acres of that Tract of Land lying on the East bank of the Mississippi River, which was granted in the year 1767, by the Nandowise Tribe of Indians to Capt. Jonathan Carver, Late of London, Dec'd, which said sixteen thousand acres I hold by deed from the widow Sarah Church, one of the Heirs at Law to said Carver."

The other deed is dated Sept. 11, 1797, and conveys 160,000 acres of the same tract, which Munn held "by Deed from Rufus Carver, son of said Jonathan." It seems to have been the habit of Carver's children to deed land right and left regardless, to any sanguine enough to snap at the bait, and still keep the field themselves as claimants; in 1804 the Carver heirs appear before Congress by their agent, petitioning for a confirmation of the Indian deed to Carver. In 1806 the veracious Peters makes oath before a Congressional committee that the title to the Carver Tract is vested solely in him; he gained nothing by his claim and petition, but the matter was not dropped until final action in Jan., 1825, when a report was adopted by Congress that the petition of Peters ought not to be granted; this seems to have been the end of the Carver deed, but "Carver" county, "Carver" town, and "Carver" river, still testify to the "travels" and mark the scene of our hero's adventures. 2. AARON, s. of James (1), b. 1704; on the ret. of peace, when Aaron was abt. 10 yrs. old, a party of Indians brought him to visit Dfd.; when the savages were ready to ret. the boy was missing; aft. considerable delay and vain search they were obliged to go off without him; a mutual liking which had sprung up between the lad and his Grandfather Stebbins, explains the mysterious disappearance. Aaron was brought up by Stebbins and inherited the greater part of his estate. He learned the trade of shoemaker, but was for many yrs. a noted tavern keeper in Gfd., on the lot now occupied by the Odd Fellows' block; he served under Capt. Sam'l Barnard, in Father Rasle's war; was a corp. at Fort Mass., 1748; ensign in Can. campaign 1756; in 1730 the Gen. Court granted him 200 acres of land "for losses and sufferings in the war;" in 1756 Gfd. voted him £4 "for beating the drum for meetings on Sabbath and other occasions;" he was a decided "character" in his day, and many funny stories are told of his eccentricities; he d. 9. NATHANIEL, s. of Samuel (7), b. 1734; lived at Mill River, near the What. line; he was a violent and active Tory and was engaged with Col. Israel Williams in what was considered a treasonable correspondence with Gov. Gage [see ante, p. 697] his estate was confiscated and sold [see ante, p. 713]; he was of St. Johns, N. B., in 1786, when he sold lots Nos. 36 and 7 in the 2d division of Inner Commons, bounded west on the "Seven mile line;" these lots were drawn by the heirs of Samuel Smead, and some persistent investigator may find in this sale a clue to the unk. ancestry of his wife; he could have had no title to these lots in 1776, or they would have been confiscated with the rest of his estate. He m. Hannah — who, as wid. of Benj. Woolsey, was living in Bridgeport, Ct., in 1814.

13. CONSIDER, s. of Thomas (8), b. 1761; was several times out in the Continental service; was at Fort Griswold, whence he was discharged the day bef. it was cap. by Arnold, and later at Newburgh. Aft. the war he spent some yrs. in Can., hunting and trading in furs; he was a "character" and a prominent figure in Dfd. in his day, and especially noted for his exhaustless fund of humorous anecdotes and song; he lived on the house lot which the "Proprietors" voted Rev. John Williams when he came here to preach in 1686; the last lineal descendant of Parson Williams here sold it in 1789 to Mr. Dickinson; aft. living on this place 65 yrs., "Uncle Sid"—as he was universally called—d. Dec. 4, 1854, a. 94; by industry, good judgment and economy he had accumulated what was a large property for the times, which was left without reserve to his wife; but there is evidence of a mutual understanding that it was to be eventually used for some public purpose; this fund was impaired by some unfortunate investments, but by the most scrupulous and conscientious frugality and economy "Aunt Esther" was able to leave a largely increased amount to a board of trustees for the purpose of establishing and maintaining a Free Academy and Public Library on this old historic ground; the building erected for these institutions prob. covers the very spot where stood the house of Parson John Williams, Feb. 29, 1703-4, and whence he and his family were carried to death or captivity. He m. abt. 1785, Filany, dau. of Col. David Field; she d. Oct. 31, 1831, a. 70; (2) Jan. 7, 1840, Esther, dau. Abijah Harding of What.; she d. June 15, 1875, a. 85.

19. RODOLPHUS, s. of Thos. W. (12), b. 1786; grad. H. C. 1805; studied law and was admitted to the bar of old Hampshire, 1808; on the organization of Franklin was clerk of the courts 1811-19; being soon aft. ordained as an Episcopal minister, he went to South Carolina, where he built up two parishes, one in Anderson County, the other in Greenville County; in this service within 18 mos. he traveled 7000 miles on horseback; in 1826 he preached a strong anti-slavery sermon; this gave offense to a few but brought new demonstrations of esteem fr. others; among his parishioners were John C. Calhoun, the Aikens, the Pinckneys, the Hugers, and others of like standing; he came back in 1832 and preached a few yrs. to a congregation at Montague, made up of Unitarians and Episcopalians; he was a "Jeffersonian Democrat," and once his party's candidate for Congress. Mr. Dickinson was a scholar of diverse attainments; his published works show him to be familiar with law, theology, history, education and general literature; some of these are Powers and Duties of Sheriffs, Coroners, &c., 1810; Compendium of the Bible, which went through six editions, 1814-17; Historical and Statistical View of Mass., and several pamphlets on Dfd., 1813-18; Geography of the World, 1813; Digest of Common Law, Statute Law, &c., 1818; Christian and Miscellaneous Port-Folio, 1823; New Version of the New Testament, 1833; he projected a Gazetteer of Mass. but it was only partially published; he was a profound thinker and his scientific platform addresses were calculated to make a deep impression; his honesty was unquestioned; he was simple minded and single hearted as a child; unwise in worldly wisdom, his plans often miscarried, but he was unflagging in industry and hopeful in adversity—patient and cheerful under all misfortunes; his later yrs. were spent upon Pine Hill in a house constructed by his own hands; here his overtaxed mental powers were sometimes clouded, and here he d. and was buried in 1862. He m. Nov. 9, 1809, Nancy, dau. David Hoyt; she d. Apr. 11, 1870, a. 82.

DODGE. The record which follows is hardly more than material for the future genealogist of the Dodge family to work up anew; some years before the Revolution a flock of Dodges alighted upon the Sun Sick Hills—part upon the western slopes of Dfd. and part over the line in Shel.—and for years they so dodged about that I have found it impossible to fix their locations; nor in many cases have I been able to determine their relationship, or tell whence they came; probably they were all more or less directly from the parent nest on Block Island; the dates following the names below indicate the first year they are found here.

DODGE, AMOS, s. David of Block Island came from Colchester to Shel. abt. 1770; was drowned in Dfd. river above Shel. Falls in 1779, leaving a wid. Mary.

* The old folks used to tell some good stories about Polina and her husband. Two are here presented for the moral: Joseph was not the most provident man in the world. He was usually out of fire wood, and his hogs were often out of pen. To Polina's complaints about the fuel his usual reply was, "Wall, you just pick up something to-day and I'll get some wood pretty soon." If the hogs got out and overrun house and garden, and she suggested a new fence, the usual reply was, "Wall, you just stick up something to keep 'em in, and I'll fix up the pen when I get time."

Polina's patience at length gave out, and her wit came to the rescue. One day, when the last chip and stick had been "picked up" and burned, she hung the great iron pot on the crane and swung it over the cold hearth stone. Into it, at stated times, went the Indian pudding, the beef, the pork, potatoes, turnips, cabbage, etc., for the usual "boiled dinner." In due time she set the whole on the table and blew the horn for dinner. Joseph, hungry man, made a dive into the pudding, always the first course, and remarks were at once in order. "Why, mother! this pud'n's raw's as ever 'twas." "Well, I can't help it; I put it in at nine o'clock." Joseph next attacked the beef. "Why, mother! this meat ain't mor'n half done." "I can't help it; I put it in at the usual time." "Why, mother! these 'taters are as hard as stones." "I can't help it, Jo; I put 'em in ——" By this time Jo saw the point. "Well, mother, well, boys, we must tackle up and draw mother some wood. Can't you give us a bite of bread and milk first?"

On another occasion—when another lesson was needed—he was summoned from the field by a vigorous blowing of the horn, and told to hurry, wash up and put on his best clothes, for there was "a great lady" waiting in the house to see him. "It isn't the minister's wife," she said, "but I won't tell you who it is—I want to surprise you,"—and she did. She quickly put his cue to rights and he was soon arranged in his best ruffled shirt, nankeen breeches, with white metal buckles, white linen hose, low shoes with brass buckles, hastily touched up with grease, and over all his long, yellow "wescut" and butternut colored homespun coat, with bright brass buttons. Polina hovered about, helping as she could, giving hints as to his manners, and hopes that his behavior in the interview would be a credit to them both. With a last touch to his white neck-cloth, she escorted him across the entry, opened the parlor door and introduced him to—his old breeding sow, which had walked in and taken possession.

3. GEORGE, s. of Aaron (1), b. 1822; he attained a national reputation as a painter, and no art gallery in this country will be complete without a specimen of his work; in boyhood he showed a natural aptitude and fondness for sketching; this tendency towards art was discouraged, if not frowned upon, and at the age of 13 he was put into a grocery store in Boston, and later into a shoe store; this life he could not abide, and he was soon back upon the farm; in the spring of 1837 he joined a party of surveyors going fr. Dfd. to Illinois to lay out a railroad; the financial crash of that year stopped all railroad building, and he again came home; aft. a yr. in Dfd. Academy—in 1840 under Luther B. Lincoln—he went again to Boston to seek his fortune; he became interested in the daguerreotype, a new invention, and brought home an outfit for taking sun pictures; his brother Augustus was a portrait painter, and we may be sure George had handled his brush at every opportunity; he had attained some skill, and in 1841 the two set out on a professional tour; he was thus launched on a career which he followed with varying success for nearly 20 yrs.; in 1860 he visited the art galleries of Europe; on his return he took charge of the home farm, a step made necessary, it seemed to him, by the death of his father; here he did a large and apparently successful business during the period of inflated values which followed the war; but when the reaction came he was carried under in the storm; possibly some part of the disaster may be attributed to the fact that his heart was not in the business; the most attractive part of the establishment was an out house converted into a studio; here he spent every moment that could be snatched from the hard work of a practical farmer; here, apart from all professional companionship or sympathy, in apathetic solitude and obscurity, he courted the ideal; here the imaginings of his youth and early manhood were reforged and shaped on the anvil of patient and conscientious toil; here he dreamed, and hoped, and worked, and waited; the outcome is well known; forced from his retreat by financial disaster, he faced the art world at Boston with the results of his matured studies, and was at once recognized as a star of the first magnitude; the aim and end of his life was secured; he died in Brookline, Mar. 21, 1884, when at the zenith of his fame. He m. Oct. 17, 1861, Agnes Gordon, dau. Stephen Higginson of Dfd. and Boston.

3. ABIEL, s. of Samuel (1), b. 1760, in Woodstock, Ct.; a Rev. sol. who did his part bravely for Dfd. and the country; in May, 1777, he enlisted under Capt. Abner Mitchell and marched to Ticonderoga to resist the invasion fr. Canada; retreated with Gen. St. Clair to Fort Edward; here Mitchell's company was told they might go home; Abiel, however, joined the Co. of Lieut. Johnson of Ash., and retreated to Half Moon; at this point he left the disorganized army and went to Bennington; he found Gen. Stark organizing a force, joined him and was in the battle of Bennington; soon aft. the battle Capt. Joseph Stebbins arrived with a Dfd. Co.; Harding joined him and marched to Battenkill Creek, joined Gen. Gates's army, under the immediate command of Benedict Arnold; was in the battle of Bemis' Heights and Stillwater; the day aft. the surrender of Burgoyne Stebbins dismissed his Co.; in Aug., 1779, Harding enlisted for 3 mos. under Capt. Rice and went to Albany; in 1780 served 6 mos. at West Point, under Lieut. Thomas W. Dickinson, and was made orderly sergt.; in Aug., 1781, he enlisted for 3 mos., served as orderly sergt.; under Capt. Oliver Shattuck, marching to a block house near Saratoga commanded by Col. McKinstry, who appointed him sergt. major; the service was guarding the lines and watching the Cowboys. He captured several prisoners; one named Thos. Lovell, a Tory who had a lieut.'s commission from the British, was executed as a spy; aft. the war he sett. at the southwest part of the town, where his ch. were b.; he was always poor and does not appear to have owned any real estate; at some point of his career he went to Rhode Island and learned to make "Rye Gin," and abt. 1805-8 was employed a few years to superintend a distillery at West Brook; as evidence that the boy is father of the man, it is related that his son Chester used to cover the walls of this building with chalk or charcoal sketches of the farmers as they arrived with loads of grain for the mill. In 1810 he rem. to Sullivan, N. Y., and abt. 1823 to Barre, N. Y., where he was living in 1832. He m. Aug. 14, or Mar. 20, 1786, Olive, dau. John Smith.

and that he did it for her correction of her disorder towards him." The court held he had "broken the Perfect rule of divine law, Mal. ii, 16, Math. xix, 6 & 1 Peter iii, 7, and the law of the Colony in the intent if not in letter in the first living assunder," and ordered him "whipped 10 stripes on the naked body," and imposed a fine for which his sons became responsible, and which the court refused to remit after his tragic death; she m. 9. EBENEZER, s. of Mehuman (8), b. 1707; H. C. 1727; ordained at Boston Dec. 11, 1732, as missionary to the Indians under the auspices of the "Society for the Propagation of Christian Knowledge;" a printed account of this ordination is in Memorial Hall library;

Gov. Belcher, as agent for this society, stationed Hinsdale at Fort Dummer, and as governor appointed him chaplain to that station; in 1742-3 he built a fort on land he had acquired on the east side of the Ct. river, where he founded the town of Hinsdale, N. H.; this place was known for a few yrs. as "The Cellars;" he spent much of his time there, extensively engaged in farming and trading, having in the meanwhile a residence at Dfd. on lot No. 42, where he was also engaged in trade and farming; his negro slave Meshick seems to have managed the affairs at one place, while the Col. was at the other; he was appointed Col. and was active in the French and Indian wars and events of importance centered abt. this fort; he was influential with the colonial officers and useful in the commissary department; he fell somewhat from grace, left the ministry, was accused of intemperance, and in 1750 "he offered a confession before the church" for the "Sin of Intemperate Drinking," and "no objection was made against its being accepted." In 1749 his account books and correspondence show a change in his name fr. Hinsdell to Hinsdale—which was partially adopted by the family and public; abt. this time he had enclosed a dale or deep valley and stocked it with hind or deer, thus having a veritable hinsdale; did this enterprise suggest the origin of his name or did he wish the new township to take its name from his deer park? He d. at Hinsdale, Jan. 6, 1763. He m. abt. 1730, Abigail, dau. Rev. John Williams; she m. (2) Oct. 18, 1764, Col. Benj. Hall of Wallingford, Ct.; (3) between June 15 and Oct. 23, 1773, Hon. Ebenezer Silliman of Fairfield, Ct.; he d. Oct. 11, 1775, and she ret. to her old home, where she d. Dec. 3, 1783.

Ch.: Abigail, Nov. 14, 1733; d. at Hinsdale, Aug. 10, 1739; was buried in Dfd.

Madam Silliman was buried by the side of her first husband at Hinsdale, where she had placed over his grave a monument bearing the following curious historic and genealogical inscription. It was a conscientious attempt to record obscurely an unpleasant fact, and is a puzzle to the uninitiated:

"Underneath Deposited is the body of

who for his supernatural endowments, extensive learning and usefulness, not only in his private life but in various important public offices he sustained, was far known and admired. After a long illness, he died Jan'y 6, 1763.

There also lies buried the body of Mrs. Mary Beal, the mother of Col. Ebenezer Hinsdale, who was born on her return from captivity in Canada, with whom she lived a widow, at the time of his death, which is thought to have brought on hers the morning after, when she died, Anno Estatis 83. Her husbands were Lieut. Mehuman Hinsdale and Mr. George Beal. By the first she had two sons, Samuel and John, after this, whose only child, Mrs. Abigail Hinsdale, died at Hinsdale, Aug. 10, 1739, Anno Estatis 6, was interred at Deerfield. His still surviving partner, Mrs. Abigail Hinsdale, daughter of the Rev. John Williams of Deerfield, and worthy relic of Col. Ebenezer Hinsdale, now mourning the absence of her dear deceased relations, has caused their names and destinies to be recorded together on this stone, June 2, 1764."

To the church in Hinsdale "my great Silver Tankard with Hinsdale Coat of Arms."

Abigail Norton, her niece, to have her chaise, gold necklace and gold earrings.

13. EDWARD, s. of Justin (9), b. 1793; one of Dfd's most distinguished sons; a "self-made man;" brought up to work on his father's farm, his scholastic training was at the town school and six winter terms at Dfd. Academy; he was, however, honored with the degree of A. M. by Yale, in 1818, LL. D. by Harvard, 1840, D. D. Mid. C., 1846. He was preceptor of Dfd. Academy, 1813-19, pastor at Con. 1821-5, Prof. of Chem. and Nat. Hist. at A. C. 1825-45, Prof. of Theology and Geology, and President of the college 1845-54. He became interested in astronomy at an early age; his first publication was an almanac, 1813-17, for which he made his own observations, and published corrections in the calculations made by European astronomers; being taken to task for this, he entered on a contest with the magnates of astronomical science in the old world, and came off acknowledged conqueror. A partial failure of eyesight drove him from his favorite field; he turned to geology and found the work which had been waiting his coming for untold ages; to him old Earth gave up its secrets, he tapped the rocks with his magic hammer, the leaves in the book of nature rolled up one after another like a scroll, and he read as from an open book a new history of the creation; like John in Patmos he saw a "new earth." Again his name was heard in lands beyond the sea, and gray-haired theologians became his pupils in the "Religion of Geology;" he was State Geologist of Mass. in 1830, of N. Y. in 1836, of Vt. in 1857. His published Reports and papers are too numerous to be even named here; the "Ichnology of New England," giving the results of his thirty years' labor on the subject, published by the State in 1858, is the great work upon which his fame was most enduringly established as a man of science; his exposition of the fossil footprints of the Ct. valley was accepted by the scientists, only after a severe and prolonged contest. He d. Feb. 27, 1864. He m. May 31, 1821, Orra White of Amh., who had been his assistant teacher in Dfd. Academy; she d. May 26, 1863.

2. JOHN, s. of Elijah (1), b. 1731; lieut.; tailor, trader and inn-keeper; on the fly leaf of his account book in Memorial Hall we read: "Early in July 1756, I cum first to Live at Deerfield, at Mr John Sheldons House and Began to work att my trade and was taken sick." Aug. 2, 1756, his br. Hezekiah writes him an affectionate letter fr. Nhn. about sending word of his condition to Wethersfield, and of taking Dr. Mather up to Dfd.; the letter closes: "Brother I expect to hear every day when mother is Dead and you Sick and in a Strange Land but I will Come and live with you if you grow wors." There is a touch of pathos in this letter, that had been wanting, had this loving br. known into what gentle hands the sick stranger had fallen, or foreseen how the adventure would culminate two yrs. later. Aft. his marriage he went to Newington, Ct., but came back in the spring of 1763, and in 1767 he bought lot No. 15, and Benj. Munn built him a shop, where he carried on the business of a tailor, being famous for his leather breeches; his account books show that he also kept a store and entertained travelers; d. 13. JONATHAN A., s. of Rufus (8), b. 1795; H. C. 1813; studied law at Claremont, N. H.; admitted to Franklin Co. bar 1817; but law was not to his taste; his jurisprudence and his philosophy would not mix; to him "judges' law" and the law of right were not in harmony, and he gave little attention to his profession; his line of thought and practice ran more to trout than to Trent, to pickerel than Pickering, to black bass than to Blackstone; his original bent was towards the occupation of "Adam," but choosing rather to chop logic than logs he turned to literature; in 1823 he became associated with Ansel Phelps and edited the "Franklin Herald;" the partnership was dissolved June, 1824; in 1825 he established the "Franklin Post and Christian Freeman," and opened a law office in Gfd., both were moved fr Gfd. to Nhn. within a yr. or two and soon died of starvation; he published the "Child's Book of the Atmosphere," Boston, 1835, and was a contributor to the Boston Quarterly Review, and the Democratic Review. He was an able and forceful writer, a radical and advanced thinker, and an ardent Abolitionist of the old school and one of the first to advocate "Woman's Rights;" in ethics and metaphysics his theories were often impractical, but he felt that if the world was not ready to accept and act upon his speculations, then so much the worse for the world; he d. Less effort has been made to obtain the later generations of the Deerfield branch of the Severance family, because it was announced several years ago that a full genealogy of the family was ready and would be issued in a few months. This may be looked for at any time.

1. SEVERANCE, SEVERNS, SEVERANS, JOHN; he wrote his name Severns in 1663; his son John wrote it Seaverns in 1685, came over in the Elizabeth in 1634; an original proprietor of Salisbury, 1637; added to this estate that of John Coles in 1640; Boston 1663; was a commissioned officer in the militia 1671; innholder 1680; will dated Apr. 7, and he d. Apr. 8, 1682. He m. Ursula, prob. dau. Richard and Ursula Kimball of Watertown; (2) between 1658 and Nov. 4, 1663, Susanna, wid. of Henry Ambrose.

Ch.: Samuel, Sept. 19, 1637; d. young.

Ebenezer, Mar. 7, 1639; d. s. p. 1667.

Abigail, Jan. 7, 1641-2; d. same day.

Abigail, May 25, 1643; m. Nov. 29,

1667, John Church, by another authority, Benj. Church in 1665; still another says, Ebenezer Ambrose in 1665; I think the last two are in error.

Mary, Aug. 5, 1645; m. by Capt. Robt.

Pike, Nov. 1, or Dec. 3, 1663, James

Coffin of Nantucket.

John, Nov. or June 29, 1647 (2).

Joseph, Feb. 14, 1649-50.

Elizabeth, Apr. 8, 1652; d. in infancy.

Benjamin, Jan. 13? 1654.

Ephraim, Apr. 8, 1656; m. Nov. 19, 1682, Lydia, dau. Abraham Morrill of Cambridge.

Elizabeth, June 17, 1658; d. Feb. 6, 1662-3; I believe it an error to claim that she m. Samuel Eastman; and that a critical examination of the record will show that Eastman m. Elizabeth Scriven.

Twin dau., June 17, 1658; d. June 23 1658.

2. JOHN, s. of John (1), b. 1647; of Suffield, Ct., Feb. 14, 1678; was here Mar. 22, 1685-6; granted home lot; lived on No. 1; of Suff. 1699; rem. abt. 1702 to Bedford, N. [SHELDON, ISAAC, of Dorchester 1634; rem. with part of the congregation of Rev. John Warham in Sept., 1635, to found a plantation at Wind., Ct. I copy fr. the original record at Wind. that: Isaac Sheldon owned there, Jan. 10, 1640, a home lot of 3 acres, with house, barn and orchard "purchased of John Stiles;" another lot on the Street, "purchased of Samuel Rockwell;" a meadow lot "by purchase of Richard Samwas," and another lot "purchased of Thomas Parsons." One of these lots was bounded on two sides by "his own land," which may have been given him in the original distribution. But these four lots were not original assignments, but were obtained by purchase. These particulars are given as evidence in a disputed case, and to prove that Isaac Sheldon was of full business age at this time. Some genealogists insist that this Isaac Sheldon was the same man who testified bef. a court in Nhn., Mar. 25, 1679, that he was "about 50 years old." If this be true, then he was but 6 when he went to Wind., and but 11 when he held four pieces of real estate by purchase, and doubtless a large area by assignment. It is true that land was sometimes given to minors in the original division of plantations, but who ever heard of a boy of 11 buying house lots and meadow land? While being satisfied that Isaac of Windsor was of age, I can give no further account of him or his family. I assume that Isaac of Nhn. was his son, because in 1652 he is found in possession of this land at Wind. Not unlikely Isaac had other sons and went away to live with them; am still [1886] engaged with H. S. Sheldon of West Suff., Ct., in an exhaustive search for the original Simon pure Isaac.]

I choose to let the above stand as printed in 1886 as explanatory, and to prevent subsequent confusion; since 1886 it has been shown that the entries at Windsor, given above as being on a page headed, "Jan. 10, 1640," were really made at a later date, to utilize a blank page; with this fact established, all evidence of the above Isaac disappears. Isaac (1) is the true head of this Sheldon family.

1. SHELDON, ISAAC, b. abt. 1629; in 1652 he held the home lot noted above and was permitted to "keep house" there with Samuel Rockwell, "so they carry themselves soberly, and do not entertain Idel parsons to ye expense (?) of time by night or daye;" this bachelor life soon ended; in 1654 he sold out to Samuel Rockwell and rem. to Nhn., where he was one of the first settlers; in 1660 he was assigned a home lot on Bridge street, which has been handed down fr. father to son to the present day; he was selectman 1656 and a leading man in town affairs; d. July 29, 1708. He m. 1653, Mary, dau. Thomas Woodford of Hart.; she d. Apr. 17, 1684; (2) abt. 1685, Mehitable, dau. Thomas Gunn, divorced wife of David Ensign, all of Hart.; she d. Jan. 30, 1720.

This house he was occupying at the desolation of the town, Feb. 29, 1704; the next winter he was sent by Gov. Dudley on a mission to Can. and ret. in the spring with five Dfd. captives, two of whom were Hannah, his son's wife, and Esther, oldest dau. of Parson Williams; the next winter he was again sent to Can. to negotiate the redemption of English captives; he was so successful that May 30, 1706, he sailed fr. Quebec with 44, leaving 57 to be transported on the brigantine Hope, which was dispatched for them on his arrival at Boston, Aug. 1. Mr. Williams came with the latter company, which arrived Nov. 6. Williams speaks of Sheldon as "a Good man and a True Servant of the Church in Deerfield, who twice took his Tedious and Dangerous Journey in the winter from New England to Canada on these occasions." But still again, a third time, he was sent in 1707, returning with seven captives—113 in all—but from different parts of New England. For a full acct. of the useful life of this man see ante, p. 324, and "The History of Ensign John Sheldon," a paper read at the annual meeting of the Pocumtuck Valley Memorial Association, Feb. 17, 1878, by Miss C. 9. JOHN, s. of John (3), b. 1681; when the attack was made upon the old Indian House in 1704, the enemy was so intent upon cutting through the front door, that John and his young wife jumped from the east chamber window unobserved; she was disabled by a sprained ankle; neither could have known the real condition of affairs, but Hannah urged her husband to fly to Hatfield and give the alarm; he was barefooted but he protected his feet as he ran over the snow by tearing up a blanket and tying the strips around them. [Family tradition.] Hannah was taken, and "Mr. Adams," a captive then in Can., writes that he was greatly surprised that she escaped death on the march, "knowing how lame she was;" she was redeemed by Ensign John, her father-in-law, in 1705; John d. Sheldon sold the old Indian House to Jonathan Hoyt, having rem. to Ber.; a meeting of the Proprietors was held at his house in Ber. Oct. 17, 1743; he there built Sheldon's fort; was lieut. 1747, with four sons in the service under him; deacon and a leading man in civil and military affairs for many yrs.; he is still spoken of in that town as the "Old Indian fighter;" Rev. Paul Coffin, D. D., in an itinerary of 1760 says he visited "Sheldon's Fort in Fall Town, about 3 miles west of the River, where we pass over to Northfield. Father Sheldon was there. He was the only man who tarried here in the war of 1755. He built the Fort for 360 Pound old Tenor, or 36 Pound sterling. The province remitted Part of his Expense. The good man received me very kindly. The pious Father, in his Evening Prayer, breathed forth his humble Petitions with such Fervour, and well chosen Texts, as not only rejoiced, but really astonished me;" he d. Apr. 12, 1774. He m. 9. JOHN, s. of John (3), b. 1647; carpenter; a sol. under Capt. Lothrop and the only man known to have come out whole from the Bloody Brook massacre; he is soon after found under Capt. Samuel Moseley, and was serving with him in Mar., 1676, and prob. continued through the war. He came to Dfd. at the permanent sett. and lived on lot No. 35, where his house was burned and his entire family cap., Feb. 29, 1704; of them all only himself, wife, and son John are known to have come back; in the list of captives made by Stephen Williams in 1731, and published in an appendix to the "Redeemed Captive," Samuel, the second son, is marked as having returned; but in the will of his father, made in 1723, he is named as among those still in Canada; he may have returned between those dates, but he is not heard of in New England; the eventful life of John closed Dec. 19, 1724. He m. Dorothy, dau. John Alexander of Newton; she was alive at Newton, 1733.

Ch.: John, abt. 1685 (14).

Abigail, abt. 1687; m. Feb. 3, 1703-4, by Rev. John Williams, "James Denyo," one of the "three Frenchmen from Canada" in Mr. Williams's list of captives, Feb. 29, 1704; Abigail was taken with her husband; their son, Aaron, b. in Canada, Dec. 14, 1704, came back to Dfd., and was the founder of the N. E. "Denio" family; Miss C. Alice Baker, in a paper read before the P. V. M. Ass'n, Feb.

28, 1888, gave the real name of Abigail's husband; it was Jacques De-Noyan, and she discovered at Boucherville a record of his ancestors and descendants; she found also that Abigail was baptized at Montreal, May 17-28, 1708, by the name of Marguerite; her sponsors were Vaudreil, governor of Canada, and "Marguerite Bonat Pascaud," the wife of one of his generals; the noted "Father Meriel" was one of the witnesses.

10. BENONI, s. of John (3), b. 1655; sergt.; in 1667, when 12 years old, he conspired with other "lads of Northampton" to "run away to the French" in Canada; they stole "24 shillings in silver and 7 shillings in wampum" to pay Quanquelatt, an Indian, for helping them carry out the plan; the theft and plot were discovered; Quanquelatt was whipped and forced to give up the money, and "Nims, the ringleader in these villianes," got 15 lashes on the naked back, and Stebbins and the other 11 each; in 1677 he attempted to settle on his father's home lot in Dfd., but was cap. in the Ashpelon raid that year; he came again at the resettlement and was a prominent man—selectman, assessor and constable; he built on his father's lot the house so successfully defended by seven men and a few women against a horde of the enemy, Feb. 29, 1704; he alone of the party fell in its defense. He m., 1677, Mary, dau. John Broughton, wid. of James Bennet, who was k. at the Falls fight; early an orphan, and with her short life hedged in by fearful tragedy, Mary carried a brave heart and a high spirit. The following, fr. the court records of Mar. 26, 1678, gives a glimpse of her life and that of the times, worth preserving: "Mary Stebbins, wife of Benoni Stebbins, being presented to this Court for wearing silk contrary to Law, & for that she Agravated it, by persisting in it when as she was once presented before: This Considering the agravation, & how unfit such things are in this day of trouble, did adjudge her to pay a fine to the County of 10 shillings: As also, Benoni Stebbins openly affronting the Court in saying he would not pay the money due for fees to the Clerk of the court, it being a rising up against the Law of the country; this Court adjudged him to pay as a fine to the County 10 sh forthwith & Committed him to the constable for the payment of the aforesaid fines." It is to be feared that poor Benoni, between his indignation towards the court and his loyalty to his bride, and his liability to increased taxation, may have had a hard time; but it was constitutional with Mary, for had she not been "admonished" by the court years before for the same offense! She d. Apr. 2, 1689. He m. (2) 1691, Hannah, wid. of Joseph Edwards; she m. (3) Feb. 16, 1709, Dea. Thos. French, whose wife was k. on the march to Canada, 1704; she d. Sept. 7, 1735.

The information concerning the Tryon family is contradictory and bewildering. The record below is not all established, but is given for what it is worth as material. I find the record of the death of one William, June 18, 1812; another, June 12, 1815; and a third, a Rev. pensioner, alive in 1820. These I cannot identify and the ch. given to William (1) may not be rightly placed.

Y., Apr. 7, 1768. The inquest over the body of William French, killed at the “Westminster massacre,” Mar. 13, 1775, was held bef. him; he was active on the side of the Yorkers in the Hampshire Grant troubles; he left by will a farm in Bratt. for the benefit of the schools in that town; d. Apr. 17, 1790. He m. Jemima, dau. of Josiah Sawtelle, wid. of Wm. Phipps and Caleb Howe; she is sometimes referred to as the “Fair Captive;” a brief history of her eventful life is copied from her gravestone in Vernon :

“Mrs. Jemima Tute
Successively Relict of Messrs.
William Phipps, Caleb Howe & Amos Tute.
The two first were killed by Indians,
Phipps July 5, 1743.
Howe June 27, 1755.
When Howe was killed she & her Children,
Then Seven in number,
Were carried into Captivity.
The Oldest, a Daughter, went to France
And was married to a French Gentleman.
The youngest was torn from her Breast
And perished with Hunger.
By the aid of some benevolent Gent’n
And her own personal Heroism

She recovered the rest.
 She had two by her last Husband.
 She outlived him & them
 And died March 7, 1805, aged 82.
 Having passed through more vicissitudes
 And endured more Hardships
 Than any of her cotemporaries.
 No more can Savage Foes annoy
 Nor aught her wide spread Fame Destroy."

Ch.: Amos, —; d. young.
 Jonathan, May 12, 1763; d. Apr. 25, 1777. The following epitaph is copied from his gravestone in Vernon;
 it was doubtless the work of Rev.

Bunker Gay, whose poetic effusions in this field have rendered the grave-yards in that vicinity rich hunting grounds for epitaph collectors:

"MEMENTO MORI.

Here lies, cut down like unripe Fruit
 A son of Mr. Amos Tute
 And Mrs. Jemima Tute his wife
 Call'd Jonathan, of whose frail Life
 The days all Summ'd (how Short th' Account)
 Scarcely to fourteen years amount.
 Born on the Twelveth of May was He
 In Seventeen Hundred Sixty Three
 To Death he Fell a helpless Prey
 April the five & Twentieth Day
 In Seventeen Hundred Seventy Seven,
 Quitting this world, we hope for Heaven.
 But tho' his Spirit's fled on High
 His body mould'ring here must lie.
 Behold the amazing alteration Effected by Inoculation.
 The means improv'd his Life to Save
 Hurr'd him headlong to the Grave.
 Full in the Bloom of Youth he fell
 Alas—what human Tongue can tell
 The mother's Grief, her anguish show,
 Or paint the Father's heavier woe
 Who now no nat'ral offspring has
 His ample Fortune to Possess,
 To fill his place, Stand in his Stead
 Or bear his name When he is dead.
 So God Ordain'd, His ways are Just Tho Empires Crumble into Dust.
 Life and the world mere Bubbles are,
 Set loose to these, for Heaven prepare."

1. WILLARD, SAMUEL, D. D., s. of William of Petersham, b. Apr. 18, 1776; an eminent divine and author; his descent through a notable line of ancestry was from I. Simeon, b. 1605; major—the highest military office in the colony—in 1655; at the head of a regiment in Philip's war; rep. 1636-49; assistant 1659, to his death, Apr. 24, 1676.

II. SAMUEL, b. Jan. 31, 1640; H. C. 1659; minister of Groton, 1663; of the Old South Church, Boston, 1678; pres. of H. C. 1701; d. Sept. 12, 1707; he was the father of 20 ch. III. JOHN, b. Sept. 8, 1673; H. C. 1690; merchant of Kingston, Jamaica. IV. SAMUEL; H. C. 1723; minister of Biddeford, Me., 1725; d. 1741. V. WILLIAM of Petersham. Dr. Willard was a grad. of H. C. 1803; after one year as teacher in Exeter Academy, and one year as tutor in Bowdoin C., he accepted a call to be minister of the first Cong'l church in Dfd.; his ordination was appointed for Aug. 12, 1807, but the Council finding on examination that Mr. Willard's opinions on some points of speculative theology differed from their own, refused to ordain him; at the same time they report finding him "a gentleman of rich talents, and acquirements in theological knowledge, of a most amiable temper, and of an exemplary frankness and sincerity." To prevent any doubt of his position the candidate had presented a written "Confession of Faith," which it would seem might now be a passport to any "Orthodox" church in the land; certainly no "Liberal" creed would stand within a gunshot of it. Neither the church nor the congregation would submit to this decision of the Council; a new one was called from a wider field and Mr. Willard was ordained Sept. 3, 1807; but the troubles of the new minister were not over; the leading members of the first Council, living in the neighborhood, gave him the cold shoulder, refused him the usual courtesies of the profession, and lost no opportunity to stir up strife against him; this episode is noticed as being the beginning of the great movement which split the Congregationalists of New England into two factions, the "Liberals" and the "Orthodox." In 1819 Mr. Willard became blind, and aft. ten more years of satisfactory pastoral work he asked a dismissal in 1829. After a short residence in Hingham he came back to his old home, where he d. Oct. 8, 1859. He took an early and ardent stand in favor of "total abstinence;" he was a firm and uncompromising foe to slavery, and gave his allegiance to a higher law than the "Fugitive Slave Bill;" at a time when it was a penal offence to shelter a runaway slave he grandly said: "For myself I will not boast of an invincible resolution. The example of Peter should teach us not to presume on our own strength; but if sustained by Almighty Grace, I will perform towards the fugitive slaves all the acts of kindness that I should do if there were no prohibition against it; and I will quietly endure the consequences though enormous fines or exactions should deprive me of my last cent, and though I be thrown into prison for six months, or six years, or all the residue of life; and I will not put the Government of my country to the expense of a single lock and key for my safe keeping. Though the doors be open day and night, I will not come out until the magistrates come themselves and bring me out." And there spoke a man whose words and deeds were always in harmony. Mr. Willard was a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences; was a voluminous writer; his published works are many: several volumes of hymns, a volume of sacred music, many occasional sermons, controversial and educational pamphlets, political tracts, a number of school books, the more important being a series of four reading books, which had a wide-spread use and went through many editions; in his diary for

2. SAMUEL, s. of Samuel (1), b. 1814; grad. fr. H. C. 1835; Judge Hoar and Amos A. Lawrence were his classmates and life-long friends; soon after he left college he engaged in proof reading, but his eyesight gradually failed and he soon became blind; he then took up market gardening and buying butter for the Boston market, and was the first to introduce the system of sending it in boxes to special customers, a business which now ranks high in Franklin county; he was a man of keen wit, as well as sterling integrity; his later years were spent in Hingham, where he d. When the life of the nation was threatened by the misguided sons of the South, young Hastings, as we have seen, then a student of 17 years, casting aside his books, was among the first to respond to the call of Lincoln for 75,000 volunteer soldiers. His first service included the capture of Alexandria, when from her public slave pen was taken George Washington, the first slave captured in the war. Keeping on in active service at the front, the brave boy served under Gen. Scott while he commanded the army in 1861, and with McDowell, Heintzleman, Stahl, Mead, Pleasanton, Grant, Sheridan, Kilpatrick, Wilson, Torbert, Merritt and the gallant Custer, in various campaigns through the war down to Appomattox and the surrender of Lee, being under fire more than one hundred times. Hastings succeeded R. A. Alger, (Ex-Gov. of Mich.) in command of the 5th Mich. Cav. when Gen. Alger was called to Washington by President Lincoln. This was one of the four regiments that formed the well-known cavalry brigade with which Gen. Custer won much of his success.

During an entire campaign, this officer, not yet 21, had commanded his regiment, leading it in all the battles and engagements while yet too young to be allowed to muster in, on his commission as colonel. The Fifth was with the brigade of regular cavalry commanded by the gallant Gen. Charles Russell Lowell, when he fought his last battle at Cedar Creek, Va., Oct. 19, 1864, and who, on receiving his first wound that day, fell into the arms of Col. Hastings.

In Sheridan's two days' battle at Trevilian, when Col. Hastings led the Mich. Fifth in the fore front and was severely wounded, his regiment received credit for taking a large number of prisoners and horses, besides nearly all the extra caissons, ammunition and ambulances of the enemy. Rarely can we find one so young whose mettle has been tested in as many conflicts. The official records give an aggregate of more than eighty contests in which he was engaged, ranging from the two days' battle to the quick encounter. Extracts from letters by his old commanders are presented, which testify to the conspicuous gallantry of our young hero.

"Major Hastings has commanded the regiment a longer period than any other officer since the regiment first came under my command. During the time he has held this command he has participated in most of the battles and skirmishes of the Spring Campaign, and in all the battles recently fought in the valley [Shenandoah] with such gallantry as to reflect the highest credit upon himself and his regiment.

His discipline in camp compares well with his conduct in the field, and in the face of the enemy. After a thorough and intimate acquaintance with the officers of the Michigan Brigade, I can assure your excellency that you cannot entrust the command of the Fifth Michigan to anyone who would be superior to Major Hastings in any of the qualifications which make a good commander.

G. A. CUSTER, Bvt. Maj. Gen."

To Gov. Austin Blair.

In consequence of this letter the junior major of a regiment was promoted at one step, four grades above, to the colonelcy. The following extract is taken from a letter written by Gen. Sheridan after the war closed:

"Col. S. H. Hastings served in my command in the cavalry corps, Army of the Potomac, from the beginning of the Wilderness campaign through the battles of Todd's Tavern and the Furnaces and on the Richmond raid, in a most soldierly manner. He was severely wounded at the battle of Trevilian Station where he came under my personal observation. After recovering he rejoined my command in the Shenandoah Valley, and took part in all of the battles of the Shenandoah campaign in 1864. In the campaign of the Spring of 1865 he bore a most gallant part in every engagement from Five Forks to the surrender of Lee, and on every occasion exhibited a courage and efficiency that had marked his career from the beginning of the War, and long before I had personal knowledge of him.
